Telegraphers End 1-Day Wage Law Walkout

Wage Act's Beginning

WAGE-HOUR Administrator Andrews declares the new labor standards law's first 2½ days' operation has proved it "a success."—Page 2.

APPLICATION of the wage-hour law to District employers and employes is explained in the third of a series of articles.—Page 2.

First Strike Ends

By the Associated Press.

Chicago (Thursday), Oct. 27.—President Frank B. Powers, of the A. F. L. Commercial Telegraphers' Union, announced early today the strike of Postal Telegraph employes for a 44-hour week had been ordered ended.

Powers said the management had agreed to open negotiations by November 15 and pay double time for overtime until that date.

The strike was the first in the Nation directly due to the new wage-hour law.

To Negotiate

Powers said the management had agreed to give all union operators and other union employes 46 hours' employment a week until the conclusion of the negotiations.

The union's present agreements provide for 48 hours. Officials asked a 44-hour week at the same pay.

By working 46 hours a week with double time for the two hours over 44, the employes will receive the same pay as they did for 48 under existing agreements.

The walkout affected approximately 1,000 employes.

At Houston, Tex., and Lousville, Ky., districts, Postal Telegraph employes defied the strike order and in Jacksonville, Fla., they met the call by withdrawing from the union and affiliating with the rival C. I. O. group, the American Communications Association.

The strike was called after company officials rejected an ultimatum laid down by Powers in a telegram to J. T. Logue, Postal's vice president in charge of personnel at New York, giving the company "until 3 p. m., Central standard time, today to abide by law providing 48 hours' pay for 44 hours' work," and to guarantee regular employes 44 hours' work.

In New York, Logue replied that the company not only is complying with the Federal wage-hour law, but "is doing more than the law requires."

Western Union Signs Contract

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—The Association of Western Union Employes announced today it had signed an agreement with the Western Union Telegraph Co. guaranteeing compliance with the hours provisions of the Federal wages and hours law.

2 Bandits Escape In Stolen Auto After Robbery

Police last night ordered a city-wide search for two young white men who eluded a radio scout car after a 2-mile chase through Southeast Washington and later knocked down and robbed a man of $500 in cash and a quantity of racing tickets in Lafayette Park.

They staged their robbery only a few minutes after Officers M. M. Welsh and C. R. Sydnor spotted their car on Kentucky avenue southeast. The automobile was reported stolen.

William Hard Quits All G. O. P. Connections

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—William Hard, secretary of the Republican program committee since it was organized last winter, has resigned, it was learned here today.

In a letter addressed to Glenn Frank, former President of the University of Wisconsin, who is chairman of the Republican program committee, Hard said "I feel I must hereby hand you my definite resignation from the program committee of the Republican Party. It carries with it, of course, an equally definite disassociation of myself from the National Committee."

Hard wrote Dr. Frank that he was severing his political connection in order to return to "independent political journalism."

Polar Bear Mauls Girl Artist Who Tumbled 25 Feet Into Pit

She May Lose Eye; Transfusion Asked Attendants Rescue Her With Lasso Miracle She Lived, Zoo Official Says

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Oct. 26.—A 600-pound polar bear mauled and clawed pretty Julia Zemnick, 21-year-old Federal art project worker, for 20 minutes today, leaving her in critical condition from loss of blood.

While sketching the animal from a wall adjoining a 10-foot fence surrounding its Brookside Zoo cage, Miss Zemnick lost her balance and fell screaming into the 25-foot pit.

With a roar the beast pounced on her and began to claw her. She was rescued by Curley Wilson, Zoo superintendent, and two attendants. While Wilson held off the bear with a pole, one attendant threw a lasso around one of the girl's legs and dragged her from the cage.

"She was sitting there sketching," said a witness, James Kulhanek, "when the bear reared up on its hind legs and made a grab at her. She screamed: 'He's got me.' She fought for a moment, still screaming, and then became unconscious."

Hospital attendants said the victim was nearly scalped. They called for blood donors and said removal of the left eye might be necessary.

"One person in a thousand could go into a polar bear's cage without meeting instant death," Wilson observed.

Roosevelt Aid Sought on D.C. Reorganization

Rep. Kennedy Delays Undecided on Job Depends on Backing

By James D. Secrest.

Support of President Roosevelt in bringing about a reorganization of the District government will be sought by Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, shortly after the November elections, he disclosed yesterday on Capitol Hill.

While still undecided about accepting the House District Committee chairmanship, Kennedy indicated that his decision will depend upon the promises of aid he will seek from the Chief Executive and House Democratic leaders.

"There is a big job that needs to be done here," he said, "but I don't want to tackle it unless I can put it across."

Kennedy also disclosed that the recommendations of E. O. Griffenhagen and Associates, the Chicago agency making a study of the local government, will be withheld until the entire report is complete, probably around December 1.

Previously, Griffenhagen had said he would make a preliminary report late in October. He has advised Kennedy, however, that such action might endanger the full report by stirring up opposition long before Congress convenes and be-

AMA Monopoly Witness Calls Charges Unjust

Wiprud Testifies 'Disproved by Facts' Hospital Data Scanned

The first witness for "organized medicine" yesterday emerged from the extraordinary District grand jury investigating his colleagues with a fighting statement in which he denounced as "unjust and disproved by facts" the charges that the profession "would selfishly stand in the way of progress."

Theodore Wiprud, executive secretary of the District Medical Society, testified several hours in the secret hearing where the Government seeks to indict his organization and the American Medical Association for conspiring to restrain trade.

Among the acts alleged is banishment of physicians of Group Health Association, Inc., from hospitals here, in support of which at least 11 institutions have been ordered to show their records to the grand jury next month. Pressure alleged to have been brought by the doctors' groups caused the hospitals to deny professional courtesies to G. H. A. staff surgeons and to exclude their patients. The Government claims this violated the Sherman anti-trust act.

The hospital records already have been scrutinized by special agents of

'Man in the Street' Here Favors Traffic Rules for Pedestrians

By Howard F. Wentworth.

When the Commissioners hold public hearings on the pedestrian control question, they will find sentiment overwhelmingly in favor of laws governing Washington's legion of walkers, according to a "man in the street" poll yesterday.

MISS DYER

DAWSON

Mr. and Mr. Average Citizen are willing to abide by whatever rules are laid down—but they don't want to be arrested for infractions. They think conditions would be improved if pedestrians were required to obey traffic regulations—but they want stricter enforcement of motoring laws, too.

In a series of downtown street interviews yesterday, The Post was unable to find a single person opposed to some manner of regulating pedestrians as a means of reducing the city's rising fatality toll.

Some even went so far as to blame careless walking habits for the District's failure to keep pace with safety records of other major cities. They thought the Commissioners' decision to put the issue squarely up to Washington residents was a "fine thing."

A. G. Dawson, of 3700 Massachusetts avenue northwest, predicted difficulty in enforcing pedestrian

Wallace Gives White House 2-Price Plan

Test to Be Delayed Would Sell Surplus Another Price to Poor Replies to G. O. P.

By Robert C. Albright.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace yesterday carried to the White House his "two price" plan for subsidized sale of farm products to the poor but denied plans for an immediate mass trial of the scheme.

"What we do will depend on the interest shown by the people," Wallace said following his report to the President. "I already have found a lot of interest. And the more others talk about subsidizing foreign consumers, the more interest there is going to be in a subsidy for domestic consumers."

He said initial trials of the plan would be made with one or two commodities, before more general application was attempted.

Seeks Outlet Here

He declined to name the commodities first to be offered to the public at the two-price level, but earlier he suggested cotton products and grapefruit as examples of how the plan would operate. Four-way co-operation of Government, railroads, distributors and labor will be sought, he said.

The proposal, Wallace's answer to domestic allotment plans for marketing farm surpluses abroad at low prices, contemplates finding a domestic outlet for "flexible" farm surpluses at bargain prices to low income groups.

The Secretary coupled his opposition of the plan with what he termed a "slightly political" blast at Republican attacks on the AAA program and its failure to keep farm prices up. He declared farm income was still nearly twice as great as in 1932, and reminded farmers that present market prices of cotton, corn and wheat did not reflect the additional income they received from Government payments.

Roper Warns Industry

While AAA economists explored means of buoying farm income by sales at two prices, Secretary of Commerce Roper warned industry against sudden industrial price rises which he said might hinder business recovery.

"Prices must be maintained within the reach of willing buyers if activity is to continue to broaden," Roper said at his press conference. His statement followed a Federal Reserve Board report that prices of some industrial raw materials moved upward in the last five weeks.

Roper pointed out that the recent steel price cut was followed by larger volume orders, and said steel operations were now at the highest level in a year. He said other heavy industries were showing encouraging activity and that prospects "forbode a good trade outlook for some time, and we have a right to look forward to good holiday business."

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department reported that food products exported from the United States during the first nine months of 1938 reached $341,262,000 in value,

Ford, Chrysler Consent to End Trust Prosecution

Fort Wayne, Ind., Oct. 26 (AP).—An informed Government source disclosed today that the Ford Motor Co. and the Chrysler Corporation have signed consent decrees to end prosecution on Federal grand jury indictments returned last May charging conspiracy to violate the Sherman antitrust law.

The "big three" of the motor industry—Ford, Chrysler and General Motors Corporation—and affiliated finance companies — were charged with conspiring to promote monopoly by coercing dealers to finance car sales through the companies' own finance firms.

General Motors, it is understood, has elected to fight the charges. The consent decree is said to be satisfactory to representatives of independent auto finance companies.

Burns Won't Stop Talbot Film Career

Hollywood, Oct. 26 (AP). — Burns suffered by Lyle Talbot, movie leading man, in saving his boyhood pal, Franklin D. Parker, from Talbot's blazing home will not prevent his return to the screen in a few months, Dr. Jerry Joney said today.

Talbot was reported in serious but not critical condition at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital. Parker was suffering from shock as well as burns, but his recovery was believed assured.

Dies Twits Roosevelt On 'Purge'

'Red' Charge Echoes

Dies Replies

In open defiance of President Roosevelt, Chairman Dies of the House Committee investigating un-American activities yesterday declared that the President was himself guilty of "violating the fundamental principle of Americanism—maintenance of the independence of each branch of the Government."

The lanky Texan, his muddy-blond hair tumbling over his face, angrily and sarcastically reminded the President of the recent so-called "purge" of conservative Democrats.

The "purge," said Dies, "illustrated that the President by his own actions evidently recognized the propriety of giving the people the facts regardless of the question of a political election."

Makes Countercharges

Dies, whose committee's activities and tactics were denounced by the President Tuesday as "flagrantly unfair," made a series of counter-charges:

That the President's Cabinet has spread "fabrications" about the inquiry.

That the President had never favored the investigation.

That the Government departments have sought to obstruct it.

That a "well-planned campaign of misrepresentation, ridicule and sarcasm was conducted by those who hoped to discredit the investigation—a campaign aided by the Cabinet."

That the President had not read the hearings, record and was "grossly misinformed."

Legion Official Testifies

Obviously smarting under the President's whip-lash criticism, occasioned by testimony by Michigan Republicans that the Democratic Governor, Frank Murphy, was guilty of "treasonable activities" during the 1937 sit-down strikes, Dies moved carefully yesterday.

He drew from one of his star witnesses, Harper Knowles, of Oakland, Calif., an American Legion official, a statement that his group was non-partisan. He then permitted Knowles to testify that four chief Democrats of California are communistic.

Knowles asserted that:

Sheridan Downey, Democratic senatorial candidate, was a running mate of "Communist Upton Sinclair in 1934."

Culbert Olson, Democratic gubernatorial candidate, "fraternizes with and accepts the program of the strategy committee of the Communist Party."

Out of Storage Space, Police Halt Seizing of Cars

Police yesterday temporarily suspended the impounding of automobiles of traffic law violators because there is no place to store the machines.

The three police parking lot cranes were idle for the first time since they were placed in service several years ago. The reason was that the fence surrounding the lot has been torn down to make way for the new Police Department building.

Officials said the cranes will be out of service only as long as it takes to find a new lot near the present police headquarters.

Morgenthau Is Hustled Out of Film on Capital

Secretary Morgenthau yesterday had the unusual experience of being hustled around almost in front of the Treasury Department, where he works.

Morgenthau was on his way to the White House when he ran into a crowd gathered around the famed peanut vendor to Presidents—Steve Vasilakos.

Steve was being photographed by a French cameraman for a forthcoming film on Washington.

"Hurry up! Get out of the way!" said the cameraman to the Secretary.

Morgenthau turned and remarked: "In our country we have better manners." Then he walked on.

Bluecher Dismissed And Command Split

Envoy May Leave 'To Be With Son' Purge Talk Ridiculed Aide Speaks for Him

Officially, the reason for Russian Ambassador Troyanovsky's request to be relieved of his Washington post is that he and his wife prefer not to be separated from their son, Oleg, who recently entered the University of Moscow.

Troyanovsky

The statement was made yesterday by Counselor Constantine A. Oumansky who, as charge d'affaires ad interim, has been "acting ambassador" from the Soviet Union since last June.

"Reports that Mr. Troyanovsky will succeed Foreign Commissar Litvinov are fantastic," said the dynamic Oumansky. "Tales that the ambassador is being 'purged' are preposterous."

Reminded that a tongue-in-cheek attitude may greet the official explanation that family ties prompted his excellency to ask to be relieved, Oumansky asserted:

"It is only natural that a father should wish his son to receive at least part of his education in their home land. And if the parents don't want to be apart from their

His Army Halved Two Chiefs Named Officially Ignored May Be 'Liquidated'

By the United Press.

Moscow, Oct. 26.—Dismissal of Marshal Vassily Bluecher as commander-in-chief of the Red Army in the Far East was confirmed tonight when announcement was made of the appointment of Gen. G. M. Cern as "commander of the first special red banner of the Far Eastern Army."

Bluecher

(It was reported in London on October 3 that the 49-year-old Bluecher, one of Russia's greatest strategists, had been arrested. Subsequent Paris reports said he had been convicted by a Moscow tribunal and imprisoned.)

Confirmation of the dismissal, and perhaps the "purging" of Marshal Bluecher, was contained in the "Komsomolkaya Pravda," organ of the Young Communist League which often reveals Soviet developments even before the official newspapers Pravda and Izvestia.

The League organ, in a biography of Cern, revealed his new title as commander of the "first special red banner" the first section of the Far Eastern army. His title does not

Chinese Cheer As Japanese Enter Hankow

Hope to Placate Foe Few Disorders Occur Neutrals Respected

Special Cable to The Post.

Aboard U. S. S. Luzon, Hankow, Oct. 26.—The Japanese were in full control of the Chinese areas in the Wuhan cities (Hankow, Wuchang and Hanyang) before nightfall tonight after the arrival at 2:30 p. m. off the Hankow bund of six destroyers, two minesweepers and two trawlers, followed at 5 p. m. by eight transports loaded with troops and supplies.

A naval unit of 20 men reached Hankow and landed at the Japanese concession at 8 a. m., arriving in two shallow-draft boats driven by airplane propellers.

The minesweepers swept the length of the Yangtze River channel along the shore of the occupied French concession, the Japanese concession and the former German, Russian and British concessions, finally anchoring near the customs house at 4:30 p. m. The bluejackets poured off the ships to be greeted by Chinese setting off firecrackers and shouting a welcome.

As the eight transports proceeded past the Bund, hundreds of Chinese on the shore cheered and waved welcoming banners. This paradox was explained by the fact that the Chinese remaining in the Wuhan district after the general Chinese evacuation were fearful for their lives and were doing everything possible to avoid a repetition of the Nanking slaughter of civilians.

The Rev. Robert Jacquinot, French Catholic priest who became famous for establishing his safety zone in Shanghai during the hostilities there, accompanied by Lieut. Comdr. Neville, of the British gunboat Gnat, got in touch with the Japanese officers accompanying the naval contingent. He was assured the Japanese would respect the Hankow neutral zone, comprising the French

Japanese Ask End of Foreign Areas in China

Held Anti-Tokyo Hotbed Party's Plea to Premier Would Ignore Britain

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Oct. 26.—The small but potent political party, Tohokai, today adopted a resolution demanding that third powers relinquish their concessions and other special rights and privileges in China when a new Chinese government is set up under Japanese guidance to govern conquered territory.

The resolution will be handed to Premier Prince Konoye tomorrow.

The party's demand was based on a contention that foreign concessions in China were "hotbeds" of anti-Japanism.

The principal foreign concessions are at Tientsin, Shanghai, Amoy, and Canton.

(At Hankow, all concessions but the French had reverted to Chinese control before the capitulation of Hankow.

The resolution demanded that Japan consolidate military achievements "as a victor, without paying attention to the machinations of Britain, France and the Soviet Union," and proclaim the birth of a new China and ask recognition by Italy and Germany.

The resolution also demanded that:

Japan should co-operate fully with the new government "and make the latter demand that foreign powers return rights and interests ceded by old China."

Japan should administer Chinese customs "pending complete establishment of the new regime, in order to safeguard customs, and control the gabelle (impost on salt) and taxes."

Japan should "exercise the military and police right to suppress anti-Japanese operations and assistance to Chiang within the foreign concessions and settlements."

Fire Mastered by Calm Crew, Deutschland Speeds to Port

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 26.—The steamship Deutschland's victory over fire—a new saga of the sea—was told today by officers and passengers as the German liner steamed toward New York.

After directing an eight and one-half hour fight to extinguish a below-decks blaze which was discovered last night while the vessel was 200 miles off Cape Race, Newfoundland, Capt. Karl Steincke set his engine room telegraph at "full speed."

He reported he would berth at his Hudson River pier at 7 p. m. Friday, about ten hours late.

None of the 591 passengers or 393 members of the crew was injured in the desperate fight.

"There was no panic," Capt. Steincke told the Associated Press by radio telephone. "Everybody was very quiet all the time. There was tranquility."

The stories of passengers bore him out, although for three hours, until the flames were brought under control, the Deutschland sent out a series of messages which stopped radio traffic along the seaboard and started seven vessels at full steam to her aid.

Two of them, the S. S. American Traveler and the Norwegian whaler Europe, arrived at her side just as the fire was smothered. Given the Deutschland's thanks, they went on their way.

Capt. Steincke said: "The fire was in No. 2 hold where we were carrying a general cargo. I don't know yet how the fire started.

"You ask who discovered it? I tell you, it discovered itself. Understand? Smoke began coming up and we knew there was a fire."

U. S. Forced To Rearm, Roosevelt Tells World

'Can Be No Peace' Speaks for Liberty Hoover Asks Parleys Halifax Makes Speech

By Sidney Olson.

President Roosevelt warned the world last night that unless there is general disarmament, the United States must continue to arm.

He affirmed the American faith that "whatever choice of way of life a people makes, that choice must not threaten the world with the disaster of war."

In language stripped down to the barest simplicity, the President cut deeply again and again into the policies of the foreign dictatorships.

"There Can Be No Peace . . ."

Sentence after sentence, coldly and bluntly phrased, drove home the refrain of his message: "There can be no peace . . . " if certain national policies, pursued only by the dictatorships, are continued.

Former President Hoover, in an earlier speech yesterday demanded that the United States "keep out of other people's wars" and asked for a resumption of world economic conferences "which were ended by our country in 1933."

Later, from London, the voice of Viscount Halifax, British foreign minister, was heard, urging American co-operation with Great Britain in establishing international peace.

Speaks of Wanderers

The President, after condemning nations which suppress religious and civil freedom and persecute helpless minorities, insisted that this country will protect the Western Hemisphere from all foreign interference.

He said peace was impossible "if the reign of law is to be replaced by a recurrent sanctification of sheer force." The adoption of the threat of war as a "deliberate instrument of national policy," the "dispersion all over the world of millions of helpless and persecuted wanderers with no place to lay their heads," and the loss of religious and civil liberties he also stipulated as fundamental obstacles to international peace.

The President's concise re-statement of this country's foreign policy was broadcast nationally by the National and Columbia broadcasting chains.

In one terse sentence Mr. Roosevelt stated both this country's foreign policy and the major problem confronting that policy, as he said:

"We covet nothing save good relations with our neighbors, and we recognize that the world today has become our neighbor."

Asks for "Proof"

Again he hammered, as he and Secretary of State Cordell Hull have so often hammered, the Administration's preachment of "due regard for the sanctity of treaties," and the making of world political changes peacefully.

He asked not for mere verbal assurance of disarmament, but for "proof," the "kind of proof which can be given by actual discussion leading to actual disarmament."

Then, after warning once more that the impact of another world war would be "fatal to civilized living," the President concluded by expressing his faith and the faith of the American people in democracy, and thus in democracy's primary tenet, "free discussion."

Hoover, asserting that Americans need not dissociate themselves from the rest of the world, declared that war pressures were "predominantly economic," and stressed his belief that prosperity would be "the greatest healing force."

He said that liberalism, fascism and communism had always lived

Funds Inquiry Checks Effect Of Pa. Letters

Brands Them Illegal Work of Committeeman Guffey Disavows Them

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee announced yesterday that having identified the author of two letters soliciting funds from Federal employes in Pennsylvania its investigators were returning to the State to learn how effective they had been.

The committee said that Edward Noel Jones, vice chairman on the State Democratic committee, had admitted drafting the letters. The committee said they were in violation of the Federal law.

Investigators were ordered to return to Ohio to obtain from Senator Bulkley (Democrat), Ohio, an explanation of the alleged acceptance by a Bulkley-for-Senator committee of contributions from about 50 Federal officials and employes. The committee previously ruled that acceptance of such donations violated Federal laws.

The committee voted to send investigators back into Illinois to look into charges that Federal aid road funds were misused in connection with the primary election there. Chairman Sheppard said the inquiry had been halted to avoid duplicating a grand jury investigation, but was revived again because the State action did not materialize as soon as expected.

Complaints involving Democratic Senatorial nominees in California and Wisconsin were dismissed. The committee threw out charges brought by Senator Minton (Democrat), Indiana, against Republican activity among WPA workers in Indiana.

Bore Others' Names

The first of the Pennsylvania letters was signed with the name of Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, and the second bore Guffey's name and that of Gov. George H. Earle, Democratic nominee for the Senate, in the letterhead. Guffey told the committee he had no knowledge of how his name was placed on the first letter, and he and Earle said they did not know of or authorize the use of their names in the letterhead of the second.

The committee said the letters were prepared by Jones as the result of an agreement between him, Ralph M. Bashore, secretary of the State committee, and David L. Lawrence, State Democratic chairman. The committee said Jones, Lawrence and Bashore had made affidavits they did not know the letters were a violation of the law until the Senate committee called it to their attention. In each case the letter was withdrawn.

The committee said its investigators had ascertained that contributions had been received from Federal employes as a result of the letter but that the total of the contributions had not been determined.

The committee said its investigatros also had investigated charges made by Representative Walters (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, that individuals were soliciting nonregistered voters in Carbon County for the purpose of registering them illegally. It said the investigators found that at least four citizens were approached and had signed cards represented to them to be sufficient to register them as voters. It added that the individuals had been solicited to vote as Republicans.

The committee's statement said that after signing the cards the men were given employment as laborers on the highways by the State government. It continued, however, that there was no evidence that the cards were ever delivered to the county clerk or officially recognized.

Ballots' Validity Challenged

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 26 (AP).—The Republican State committee today challenged the legality of the November 8 ballot, drawn up by the State Elections Bureau, and said it attempted to "fool voters" who want to mark a straight party ticket.

The committee issued a statement that the ballots bore these words:

"To vote a straight party ticket, mark a cross (X) in the first column opposite the name of the party of your choice."

The statement said the elections code provided that the instructions should read:

"To vote a straight party ticket mark a cross (X) in the square in the column opposite the name of the party of your choice."

"It so happens," the statement added, "that the Democratic Party is in the first place in the column. The reason for the illegality of this ballot is obvious."

New Wage-Hour Problems Puzzle 'Borderline' Firms

Banks and Foundries Are Included Number of Questions Are Unanswered Andrews Avoids Outright Commitment

By Felix Cotten.

This is the third of a series of articles on the wage-hour law. The final article will appear tomorrow.

Numerous "borderline" industries are struggling with the question whether their employes are covered by the wage-hour act.

Among such industries are banks, foundries, the sand, gravel and crushed stone business, ice companies, handlers of feeds and similar products, tank-car gasoline stations, junk dealers, wholesale florists, etc.

The Labor Department wage-and-hour division has been asked to settle a multitude of questions as to whether particular groups of employes are affected. Workers in a service establishment which is an adjunct of a manufacturing plant is an example. Another is the question whether the milkman can be classed as an "outside salesman." The latter are exempt.

The American Bankers Association contends that banks are service establishments, and, in consequence, are exempt unless more than half their business is done across the District line or a State line.

Retail and service establishments, it is clear, are exempt in all except very rare cases. Service establishments include hotels, law offices, doctors' offices and other professional establishments, office buildings, hospitals, etc.

In endeavoring to answer thousands of questions as to who is affected, Administrator Elmer F. Andrews and his legal staff have tried to be helpful while avoiding any outright commitment. Their chariness inevitably has left employers bewildered.

Division officials, however, point out that only the Federal courts can determine how far the law extends. Owing to the fact that the law applies to workers engaged in interstate commerce or in the production of goods which will move in interstate commerce, the deciding factor will be the United States Supreme Court's definition of interstate commerce.

The act applies primarily to employes and incidentally to industries. Some employes may be affected and others not. The wage and hour division holds that Congress intended the law should be construed liberally in order to bring under the act the largest possible number of workers.

The actual extent of the act's application, of course, will have to be charted by court decisions. First of all, presumably, the question of whether the act is constitutional will have to be determined. Thereafter, the court can mark out how far its constitutionality applies.

The Supreme Court's definition of interstate commerce has undergone wholesale revision in the last two years. Abandoning the historic narrow construction of the commerce clause of the Constituton, it has opened wide the door to give the National Labor Relations Board jurisdiction over labor disputes in a number of industries.

The basis for the decisions whereby the National labor relations act has been upheld is that labor disputes burden and obstruct interstate commerce. Therefore, the Federal Government's power to regulate interstate commerce can be extended to include employer-employe relations.

In giving off-hand opinions as to what industries and employe groups are affected by the wage-hour act, officials are guided largely by the Labor Board decisions. The Supreme Court, in a ruling last spring in the Santa Cruz Fruit Packing Co. case, held that the Labor Board had jurisdiction even though the company's raw materials came from within the State of California and only 37 per cent of its products were shipped outside.

This decision is pointed to as most liberal interpretation of interstate commerce thus far. But other cases are on the way which will result in further expansion of the Federal Government's power if the court upholds the Labor Board.

Whether the vastly altered Supreme Court will deal as liberally with the wage-hour act as it has with the National Labor Relations Act is a matter of conjecture.

Congress has attempted to set the stage for favorable treatment at the hands of the court by including in the act a declaration of policy stating that low wages and long hours obstruct the free flow of commerce and provoke labor disputes.

Snyder Pleads Innocent In Ruth Etting Shooting

Los Angeles, Oct. 26 (AP).—Martin Snyder, former husband of Radio Singer Ruth Etting, pleaded innocent today to charges of shooting her present mate, Myrl Alderman, 30-year-old radio music arranger, at Miss Etting's home October 15.

Snyder's trial on charges of attempted murder, kidnaping and violation of a State firearms law was set for December 8.

Kennedy

fore the whole plan of reform could be set forth.

Griffenhagen already has exhausted the $5,000 appropriation made for the study, Kennedy said, but is continuing the work at his own expense.

The Chicago expert on municipal administration, who has made similar studies for numerous local governments, said that the District setup is the most complicated he has yet encountered because of the varied conflicting and overlapping authorities, city and national.

The report, it is understood, will recommend drastic changes in the administration of the District but will offer alternative plans as well.

Would Oppose School "Politics"

Reorganization of the school administration is expected to be one of the recommendations of the Griffenhagen report.

Kennedy said he has not yet seen the report of the President's Advisory Committee on Education with regard to Washington schools, but he declared he would oppose any move to give the District Commissioners control of the appointment of teachers and school executives.

"We found in Baltimore that you can't mix politics and school administration without the schools suffering," he said.

He hinted that higher taxes, a separate school tax or municipal bonds might be the only solution to the problem of providing all the new schools that the Board of Education believes are essential.

"As long as you keep them in the regular District budget," he said, "you will be limited by the amount of revenue available."

The delay in the Griffenhagen report will result in the conclusion of the three current District investigations almost simultaneously.

Burdette G. Lewis, director of the relief inquiry, plans to complete his report around December 1, while the District advisory tax committee and the staff of investigators will be prepared to report to the Joint Internal Revenue Committee as soon as Congress convenes.

Wages Law Working Well, Andrews Says

Into Effect 'Smoothly' Regrets Job Losses Calls Them Unavoidable

Recovering from the first shock of public reaction to the new labor standards law, the Labor Department's wage and hour division yesterday settled down to routine administration of the act and reported it functioning "smoothly."

Before the Cotton Textile Institute in New York City, Wage-Hour Administrator Andrews declared there were "unpleasant repercussions in what I think are only scattered instances" and "the operation has been a success."

In Washington, division officials ruled that department or retail stores which conduct most of their business in intrastate commerce are exempt from the law. Arrangements were announced for early hearings on applications received for exemption of workers classified as "learners."

Following President Roosevelt's appeal for co-operation of employers with Government officials in a united effort to make the law work, Secretary of Commerce Roper counseled patience in working out industrial application of the law, which took effect Monday.

Sees Income Spread

Speaking from what he called the vantage point of two and a half days, Andrews said in his New York address that as well as he could tell "the law has gone smoothly into effect."

"It is unfortunate," Andrews said, "that anyone should lose his job because of this law but, as every surgeon knows, there are few operations in which the patient does not lose some blood.

The reports which we have from all over the country encourage us to believe the operation has been a success and that the patient will from now on show improvement."

Before the Cotton Textile Institute, Andrews stressed the need "for giving balance to our national economy by placing purchasing power in the hands of the public."

He said that technological forces and mechanization of industry every year are making the problem of unemployment more pronounced, and estimated that since 1929 there has been an increase of about 20 per cent in the productivity of the American worker. One method of spreading the national income and supplying needed purchasing power, he said, is "assuring American labor a fair day's pay for a fair day's work."

Consumption Factor

The textile industry, he said, has a particular responsibility as the first industry committee appointed to recommend an adjustment of wages between the law's 25-cent floor and 40-cent maximum covers textiles only.

"The textile industry committee is the pioneer," he said. "It will show the wage and hour division how the work of an industry committee ought to be done or how it ought not to be done."

Dr. Claudius T. Munchison, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, said the wage-hour law should prove "a stabilizing force" upon competition in the cotton industry. He declared that the ultimate solution of the cotton surplus problems "must depend upon further consumption possibilities within the United States."

"We should all be gratified," Murchison said, "that we have at last reached the stage when the Government will supplement its efforts toward production control by equally intensive efforts toward consumption enlargement."

Political Arena

Sen. Green Calls G. O. P. Liberalism False Unknown Opposes Memphis Machine

Cleveland, Oct. 26 (AP).—Senator Green (Democrat), Rhode Island, said tonight the fundamental issue of the Congressional campaign was whether the Federal Government should be conducted for the benefit of the "privileged few" or in the interest of all the people.

SEN. GREEN

Asserting that the voters should not be deceived by the "false liberalism" of Republicans, Green said that a majority of that party's candidates sought to "go back to the days when the Government in Washington dispensed special favors for a pampered few."

The Rhode Island Senator attributed to the Roosevelt Administration the "unprecedentedly quick recovery" he said the Nation had made from the recent business recession and compared this with what he said was a "steady slipping, slipping downward into the abyss of disaster" under the Hoover Administration in the earlier days of the 1929 depression.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 27 (AP).—Edgar L. Clark, 29-year-old political unknown, announced today he would oppose re-election of Congressman Walter Chandler.

Chandler is the candidate of the powerful E. H. Crump political organization that has dominated elections here for 30 years.

Clark said he qualified because he thought there "ought to be opposition and nobody else has offered himself."

Spokane, Wash., Oct. 26 (AP).—Secretary of the Interior Ickes traveled eastward today after warning proponents of the gigantic Grand Coulee power and reclamation project to press for early completion as a safeguard against the day when the Nation might get "a reactionary administration that wants to offer the project to Henry Ford for 10 cents on the dollar."

He spoke to a group of civic leaders at a dinner after an inspection trip to the $126,000,000 dam project, on which $75,000,000 of Federal money has been expended.

Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister, director of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, said yesterday she thought women were less emotional in politics than men. She asserted that members of her sex would go into "all sides of a political question and be much more objective than men."

"They are also less inclined to be swayed by what they hear from their associates."

I ONLY HAVE TO GROW 1,650,850 HAIRS TO AVOID BALDNESS!

Let Thomas Help You Save Your Hair

IF you live the normal span of life and never become bald you will grow about 15 full heads of hair—1,650,850 hairs. A hair grows to maturity in four years, falls out, and is replaced (if your scalp is healthy) by a new, live hair.

You avoid baldness, therefore, not by trying to stop normal hair-fall, but by seeing to it that your scalp replaces each hair which falls out. New hair fails to grow when (1) the scalp is attacked by some local infection, such as dandruff; or (2) when scalp circulation is sluggish and the dormant hair lacks nourishment. Thomas treatment is designed to overcome the 14 local scalp ills which cause most baldness and to gently stimulate the sources of hair nourishment in the scalp.

For twenty years The Thomas' have been ending scalp worries for others, and can do the same for you. Call today for a free scalp examination, and learn how this reliable, proved method overcomes dandruff, stops abnormal hair loss, and promotes hair growth on thin and bald spots.

Straus Expects To Approve D.C. Slum Loan

Calls Plan 'Admirable'
Totals $10,000,000
Halts 'War' With Ihlder

Nathan Straus, administrator of the United States Housing Authority, disclosed yesterday he expected to approve "within two or three weeks a comprehensive $10,000,000" low-cost housing program for the District Alley Dwelling Authority.

Details of the application submitted by John Ihlder, executive officer of the ADA, are being studied by his staff now, Straus said.

"Ihlder has submitted an admirable program," he added.

Straus, however, refused to reveal any details of the loan contract he expects to sign, declaring "I've probably said too much already."

Ihlder, when questioned likewise, refused to comment on any details of his application. Both men, however, indicated that they were pleased with the agreement which by indication is almost complete.

Halts Behind-the-Scene Battle

Signing of the contract will bring to a temporary halt, at least, a behind-the-scenes battle which has taken place for several months concerning the terms at which money should be loaned to the ADA for its slum reclamation and low cost housing work.

USHA expectations are that work on five housing projects will be started by first of the year, and that 1,000 men will be at work in February. Date of signing of the loan contract is expected to be about November 20, allowing approximately six weeks before start of construction.

Straus first revealed his expectations while addressing the Alexandria Woman's Club. He told them the ADA had "pioneered" in the "very difficult field of public housing with very little money."

After publicly terming the ADA's present program to be carried out with USHA funds "admirable," in private he gestured and said it was a "knockout."

Differed on Amount

Chief points on which Straus and Ihlder had differed were over whether the ADA should borrow 90 or 100 per cent of the cost of the new houses; what rents should be charged; in what manner a subsidy should be paid; and top price at which land could be purchased.

In contracts for approximately $30,000,000 signed so far with 52 cities, uniform procedure of the USHA has been to lend 90 per cent of the cost with the local community producing the remaining 10 per cent; guaranteed an annual subsidy for 60 years to be provided by Congress to keep rents low; and put a ceiling of $1,50 per square foot on the price of land.

Ihlder has fought for a 100 per cent loan, part of which would be used as a capital grant used to bring down investment cost of new houses so that a low rent could be charged without an annual subsidy.

The ADA has applied for a loan of $10,641,021 to construct five projects in which to house several thousand slum dwellers. In the future it intends to ask for a total of $18,000,000 to construct a total of 12 projects. The USHA has set aside $15,000,000 for Washington.

15 Rounded Up In Police Chief's Death

Jackson, Ga., Oct. 26 (AP).—Fifteen colored men were rounded up swiftly today in a widespread hunt for a gunman who killed Police Chief Charles T. Thornton in resisting arrest.

Sheriff G. T. Thurston said three of the men held admitted several burglaries, but denied the slaying. They were rushed to jail in Atlanta for safekeeping.

Commercial Banks Held Ready for Loans to Business

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Commercial banks generally are ready to co-operate with the Federal Government in the effort to make available long term loans to business, it was asserted yesterday in a study prepared for the Association of Reserve City Bankers by the Institute of International Finance of New York University.

The association is composed of senior officers of banks in the reserve cities.

"Regulation of security exchanges and over-the-counter markets and restrictions on security loans . . . make it less likely that an active demand from institutional investors for more speculative bond and stock offerings, such as existed during the twenties, will develop anew . . . Current bank examination procedure stressing ultimate repayment rather than marketability, places commercial banks in a more favorable position to grant term loans," the study said.

'Life Begins at 40' A Lie, Says Killer Who Dies Monday

Salt Lake City, Oct 26 (AP).—A slayer who faces a firing squad at dawn Monday at his own request said today "I'm going out there and prove that those guys who said life begins at 40 are cockeyed liars."

Less than two months ago John W. Deering observed the fortieth birthday. Most of those years were spent in prisons and reform schools. Rather than go back he demanded—and received—the death penalty for the holdup slaying of Oliver R. Meredith, jr., Salt Lake City businessman.

Stork Club Told To Reinstate 9

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—The State labor board ordered reinstatement and back pay today for nine discharged waiters of the Stork Club, prominent night spot, with the observation that union organizing activities and not paring fingernails, drinking the customers' cocktails and other offenses alleged by the management had caused the dismissal. The men received $25 a month, but the board considered as part of their pay the $50 a week they averaged in tips.

Union Will Appeal Arkansas Convictions

Memphis, Oct. 26.—The Southern Tenant Farmers Union said today it would seek new trials for three colored men connected with the recent stay-at-home strike of cotton pickers. The men were convicted yesterday in Osceola, Ark., under Arkansas' "night-riding" statute. They were accused of writing "Stay Out of the Fields If You Don't Want to Get In Trouble" on union handbills.

Private Utilities' Suit Is Illegal, TVA Contends

By the Associated Press.

The Tennessee Valley Authority challenged in the Supreme Court yesterday the legal right of 15 privately owned utilities to attack the constitutionality of its vast power program and Tennessee River development.

In a bulky brief defending the TVA's flood control, navigation, power and national defense program, the authority contended the companies were without standing before the court and thus "estopped" in their appeal from a decision of a three-judge Federal court at Chattanooga, Tenn., which upheld the constitutionality of TVA.

The TVA brief contended that the companies lacked the necessary franchises that would confer immunity from competition and that nine of the companies "are not shown to be threatened with damage by any concrete act" of the TVA.

Competition of which the companies complain, the authority added, is actually competition with municipalities and co-operatives in the sale of electric power, and not with the TVA.

Tree-Climbing Girl Indicted in $2,500 Theft

Held in $10,000 Bail
Also Took Jewels
30 Others Accused

Bernice Agnes Gaskins, 21-year-old colored second-story girl, who climbed trees to get in upstairs windows and slipped under shrubbery to enter coal chutes, was indicted 13 times yesterday for housebreaking and larceny.

She was accused of lifting hundreds of dollars from the trouser pockets of those she visited. The police explained this by her admission she specialized in merchants and liquor dealers whom she conjectured would bring home their money. She also was accused of taking clothing and jewelry. The total of the girl's thefts was believed about $2,500. The girl is held in $10,000 bail.

Thirty others were accused in 44 indictments handed up to Justice Proctor yesterday. Shey were:

Second degree murder, Sadie B. G. Evans, 39, colored, for the death of her husband, Robert Evans, 49, after being stabbed with an ice pick with which she claimed he attacked her. Non-support of minor child, William A. Basinger. Joy riding, Wallace E. Lomax, 19, colored; Charles J. Morris, 28; George E. Brown, 22. Housebreaking and larceny, Clifton Payne, 25, colored; Emmitt H. Taylor, 19; Joseph Green, 41, colored; Francis P. Cook, 20, colored; James R. Hinton, 19, colored. Grand larceny, Henry T. Smith, 30, colored. Robbery, Frank T. Gaddy, 21.

Conducting a lottery and possessing numbers tickets, Morgan Williams, 23, colored; Helen T. Hawkins, 20, colored; James D. Smith, 29, colored; Samuel Myers, 35, colored; James W. Johnson, 32, colored; James Lyon, 36, colored. Possessing narcotics, Lucille Scott, 21, colored; Lee Miller (alias Doc), 38, colored; Joseph Adams (alias Gumboota), 25, colored; James Jackson, 35, colored. Forging and uttering a forgery, Warren A. Stephens (alias C. K. Stout), 40. Obtaining money by false pretenses, Richard L. Everleigh (three indictments). Destroying private property, James Woolfolk, 25, colored. Impersonating a policeman, Jack Paul Webb, 36. Assault with dangerous weapon, Edward E. Ivey.

The grand jury ignored the following charges: Running lottery and possessing numbers slips, Frances Elizabeth Hawkins, 55, and Sammie Alchester Walker, 34, both colored. Robbery, Minor Lewis, 19; Melvin Johnson, 25, and Freddie Brody, 34, all colored. Homicide, Oscar L. Hillard, 34, colored, special policeman of 2904 Wade road southeast, exonerated for the death of John Simonton, 24, colored, who tried to seize his gun in a lunchroom brawl September 25. Homicide, Earl W. Roberts, 19; Alton J. Roberts, 17, and William Calomeris, 21, who were cleared of killing John Edward Baker, 49, in an affray September 16.

Two Paralytics Wed

Cleveland, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Donald R. Frey, 37, was brought into church on a wheel-chair today to marry Roberta Crawford, 27, who walks with crutches. Frey has been crippled since he was 14, as a result of infantile paralysis. The bride suffered the same illness when she was 11 months old.

Spectacular Maneuvers to Mark Navy Day As Nation Honors 'First Line of Defense'

Marked by a sham battle, the crash of big guns and the roar of planes in aerial parade, the annual observance here of Navy Day will be the most spectacular ever staged as full-dressed fighting ships and shore stations throughout the country are "at home" today to all comers.

On the eve of the celebration President Roosevelt yesterday addressed a letter to Secretary of the Navy Swanson declaring the Nation's seapower must be adequate to "insure positive protection against any aggressor."

"We should rejoice that on this day, when the Navy is at home to our people, that we are at peace with all the world," Mr. Roosevelt declared, "but within the past year unsettled world conditions have made it imperative that we take stock of national defense and face facts . . . The Fleet must be ready."

In another statement, proclaiming November 11 Armistice Day, the President said that "peace can be attained only by nonaggression, and can be made enduring only by respect for the rights of others and good will among the nations of the world."

To participate in the day's ceremonies, the new destroyer, Shaw, docked yesterday at the Navy Yard. Normally assigned to the Atlantic Squadron, it came here from the Norfolk, Va., naval base.

Beginning at 8 a. m. today, when the flag will be raised at the main gate, a continuing program, in which sailors, marines and Coast Guardsmen are to participate, will be under way at the navy yard until about 5 p. m., when the sham battle will be concluded. Exhibitions ranging from machine-shop activity to antiaircraft drills as well as formation flying and "dive bombing" of river targets are included in the schedule of events.

In the afternoon King Neptune and his court will land at the east end of the waterfront at navy yard, where he will receive the "key to the navy yard from Capt. Ferdinand L. Reichmuth, chairman of the Navy Day committee.

During the sham battle marines from Quantico, Va., commanded by Maj. Eugene F. C. Collier, will simulate "landing operations against a hostile shore" defended by "insurrectors" composed of sailors from the receiving ship under command of Lieut. D. M. Coffee. Marine planes and Coast Guard patrol boats also will participate in the sham battle.

Rear Admiral A. P. Fairfield, assistant to the chief of naval operations, in an address broadcast last night over the Mutual network, declared: "We want nothing that belongs to other nations; neither have we imperialistic designs nor a desire to pull chestnuts out of the fire for others. . . . We have no foreign commitments or understandings with any power.

"It is the peace that is desired," he continued. "In a world of power politics it is believed that a just nation well armed may be reasonably sure of holding what is its own and still prevent war."

Throughout the city and country today commemorative exercises will be held by civic, patriotic, religious and commercial organizations.

Col. Thomas P. Carlin, State deputy of the Knights of Columbus, will lay a wreath on the statue of Commodore John Barry in Franklin Square at 11 a. m., and Rear Admiral Frederick J. Horne will be the honor guest of the Kiwanis Club at luncheon.

At the John Paul Jones Memorial on the banks of the Tidal Basin services will be held at 12:30 p. m., at which Capt. Clarence N. Hinkamp will be the principal speaker. His subject will be "The Navy; Our First Line of Defense."

This evening, Commander W. M. Lockhart, head of the Navy's aerological section, will address the Washington Meteorological Society meeting at 8 p. m., at George Washington University, on "Meteorlogical Activities of the United States Navy," and Dr. Thomas H. Healy, dean of the George Washington School of Foreign Service, will lecture before the Department of the District of Columbia, Reserve Officers Association, on "An Interpretation of Recent International Developments."

Visitors will be welcomed all day at the Naval Observatory, but cards will be required for admission after 7 p. m.

almost double the $173,150,000 reported during the comparable 1937 period. September food exports were 12 per cent under August, but 17 per cent above the same month last year.

Commerce Department economists hailed the improved movement abroad of farm products. Corn exports in September reached 7,850,000 bushels, valued at $4,788,000, compared with 2,000,000 bushels, valued at $6,000, shipped abroad in September last year. Wheat exported in September under impetus of the AAA export subsidy plan totaled 3,485,000 bushels valued at $2,392,000, compared with 2,878,000 bushels, valued at $2,999,000 in the same month last year.

While Wallace discussed with the President and later with reporters his "two-price" domestic farm subsidy proposal, Dr. A. G. Black, now supervising AAA marketing activities, and Jesse W. Tapp, directing Federal Surplus Commodity Corporation operations, were reported at work on plans for the new price experiment.

To Ask Suggestions

Wallace indicated a special cotton committee, headed by Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Harry L. Brown, might shortly call for suggestions on subsidized manufacture of cotton products for a low income market.

Wallace shied at all questions on detailed operation of the broader proposal, and said it had not been determined how low income beneficiaries would be selected, or whether the subsidized products would be handled through regular retail markets. He said the program if adopted would be used to supplement, rather than as a substitute for, the existing farm program.

Questioned on reports of "revolt" of Middle West farmers against the program, he said he saw no evidence of it in his speaking tours except in Lenawee County, Michigan, where he said he learned during a stop there that the farmers were "misinformed."

He charged Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, and John Hamilton, Republican National Committee chairman, with "creating the impression" that Kansas farmers were against the program. His own impression was that Kansas farmers would like to give the program a trial of at least one year. Capper he accused of "dropping his gun and fleeing before the bear" after voting for the farm act, and before wheat features had received a trial.

Replies to Republicans

In a prepared statement, Wallace further charged that "reactionary Republican interests" in their attacks on the farm program were "conveniently ignoring" three things —the rise in farm income over 1932 levels, the added income received from loan programs and soil conservation payments, and the comparative strength of livestock product prices.

He told reporters he thought cooperating farmers "do not realize how much more they can get out of this program than out of others proposed." On wheat, for example, he said AAA co-operators taking advantage of the wheat loan would receive at least 18 cents a bushel above the present market price; on corn their return would approximate 19 cents a bushel above market prices; and on cotton their excess return would be about 4 cents a pound.

"The truth is," he said, "that in spite of handicaps the farm program is already a big factor in bringing the business recovery which is now spreading over the whole Nation."

Scientists Listen To Radio Floating 19 Miles Over D. C.

Bureau of Standards scientists were up in the air yesterday over the elusive cosmic ray.

They sent a miniature transmitter 19 miles into the stratosphere and listened to code signals describing cosmic ray radiation at that height.

Three men attached the transmitter to six balloons and sent it aloft at 7:27 a. m. Three hours later the balloons were as high as they could go, and exploded in the thin air. The radio equipment returned earthward by parachute and, the scientists hoped, landed safely. It had not been located late yesterday.

The scientists, who will repeat the experiment today, were Dr. A. V. Astin, B. W. Brown and Harold L. Stockman.

was interviewed by the National Broadcasting Co. and the Columbia Broadcasting System, said:

"We found out that smoke was coming out of the hold by a pipe that runs up to the bridge where all the holds are controlled. Of course, smoke was coming through around the bulkhead, too."

The crew went to fire quarters, battening down the hatches to No. 2 hold with everything available, including blankets, to smother the flames.

Third-class passengers were ordered from their rooms near the hold up to the cabin class and tourist class decks to dance and watch a movie.

Holes were drilled in the bulkheads, and through these holes the crew poured live steam and water. Finally, they used carbon didxide fire extinguishers.

Three hours after the battle started, Capt. Steincke radioeed to the Associated Press: "Fire under control." But it was five and one-half hours more before it was extinguished.

Mixup Mars Merry's Many Merry Marriages

Chicago, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Madcap Merry Fahrney, marrying patent medicine heiress, today found herself with two husbands—an Italian baron, No. 3, and a Russian count, No. 4—as result of a court decision nullifying a divorce she obtained in an Illinois court last February.

Miss Fahrney now is living in New York with Count Oleg Cassini, a dress designer with whom she eloped to Elkton, Md., last September, under belief that she was properly divorced from Baron Arturo Berlingieri, Italian nobleman whom she married at Harrison, N. Y., a year before.

Judge Dennis E. Sullivan, who handed down the decision of the State court of appeals, not only tossed out Miss Fahrney's divorce but spoke dispargingly of the divorce business which, he said, has become "almost an industry."

Frank Cantwell, Miss Fahrney's attorney, said he would appeal to a higher court in order to keep Miss Fahrney from being a bigamist by mistake.

Dies Twits Roosevelt On 'Purge'

Democratic campaign committee, is "a member of the Communist party."

These assertions, unsupported by factual evidence, were admitted by Dies in open defiance of the President's insistence that "mere opinion evidence" is not evidence, and that the committee seek facts and opinions from the other side.

Knowles and Joseph F. Hannon, of San Francisco, another Legionnaire, apparently based their charges that Olson, Downey and Patterson are Communists because, they said, all are on record as favoring a pardon for Tom Mooney, whom they also termed a Communist.

(Mooney is serving a life sentence in San Quentin for a Preparedness Day bombing in World War days.)

Homer Martin Excuses Self

The charges by Knowles amazed listeners, since Downey, Olson and Patterson have been known only as sponsors of the "Ham-and-Eggs $30-Every-Thursday" pension plan. Upton Sinclair, noted radical and author, has many times denounced communism and has been officially denounced by Communist leaders in this country. Mooney's imprisonment has long been cited by Communists in support of their doctrine that civil liberties are actually denied Americans.

Homer Martin, president, United Auto Workers, affiliate of the Committee for Industrial Organization, yesterday wired Dies a request that he be excused from testifying before the committee at this time.

Martin was under subpena to appear today for questioning about sit-down strikes and about alleged communism in the United Automobile Workers. Some months ago Martin ousted four officials of the U. A. W. for communism, C. I. O. Chairman John L. Lewis persuaded Martin to reinstate the officials for organization harmony.

Martin pleaded to Dies that much of the "progress toward industrial peace would be gravely imperilled if I now came and reopened old wounds before your committee which had unwittingly become embroiled in partisan political controversy by men who have not the truly American will for peace in our industrial democracy."

Jackson Asks Brief

Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson yesterday released a letter to Chairman Dies, stating:

"I learn from the press that you are dissatisfied with our petition to the Supreme Court in the Strecker case. It is not likely you will be any better pleased with the way I shall argue it."

He then invited Dies to file a brief as a "friend of the court, rather than to make your contribution to the case . . . only in the newspapers." He said that if Dies cared to argue his views orally, he would ask the court to hear him, "whether I agree with your views or not," and added that if Dies could not get consent to file the brief, Jackson would print "a reasonable statement of your views as an appendix to my own."

The Strecker case, involving the alleged communism of Joseph Strecker, of Arkansas, is to be argued soon before the Supreme Court. The issue is whether communism is a deportable offense. The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals has held it was not. Lesser courts have held the reverse. Strecker asserts he was a Communist until February, 1933, but has paid no dues since to the party.

Another committee member, Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, who has seldom attended committee sessions, struck at the President's criticisms yesterday as "motivated by political fear." Thomas said:

"The President is annoyed and angry because most of the evidence unearthed by the Dies committee shows a definite tie-up between the New Deal and the Communist Party . . . With election day nearing, the President fears political repercussions of the committee's findings . . . We have found New Deal officials unwilling to co-operate. New Deal officials have made every conceivable effort to block the committee's progress. They have actually furnished protection for Harry Bridges, whom the committee seeks to deport."

The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom commended the President yesterday for his "whole-hearted and timely answer" to the attacks made on Gov. Murphy.

Rearmament Forced on U.S., Roosevelt Says

together and must continue to do so to maintain peace. Modern war, we said, "sows only the dragon's teeth of world impoverishment, from which despotisms spring." He said he doubted that Germany or other Fascist states would move westward, or that they wanted war with the western democracies "unless these democracies interfere with their spread eastward."

Lord Halifax, expressing the view that President Roosevelt's appeals for peace to Reichsfuehrer Hitler and former President Eduard Benes of Czechoslovakia were "as valuable as they were welcome," declared that between the American and British peoples "there is a mutual desire for true peace based upon agreement that law and not force shall rule the world."

Cites Press Criticism

Taking notice of criticism in United States newspapers of "the action taken by the British government from time to time during recent weeks," Lord Halifax added:

"Those criticisms are best proof that you feel as strongly as we do about the things which it is vital for the world to hold on to, if international relations are to be at all securely founded. Your criticisms, therefore, bring you nearer to us than would an attitude of indifference on your part."

He repeated his contention that Britain was right in the "endeavors that were made to prevent war in the recent crisis," and that Britain, France and Russia, or others, could not "have saved Czechoslovakia from being overrun" had war broken out.

President's Board Holds Up Report On Rail Strike

The President's emergency fact-finding board on the threatened railroad pay cut and strike yesterday decided to hold up its report until Saturday night, following an agreement between interested parties.

Findings of the board, on which both rail labor and railway executives are expected to work out a settlement, had been slated for a report today.

Although a rough draft of the report is understood to have been completed, Chairman Walter P. Stacy sought and obtained an extension of time.

Funeral Rites Set Today for R. G. Ingersoll

Funeral services for Robert Greene Ingersoll, 48, who died in Colonial Beach, Va., Tuesday, will be held at 2:30 p. m. today at Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery. The Rev. Herbert S. Smith, of St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, will officiate.

Mr. Ingersoll, born here, was educated at the Emerson Institute before going to New Orleans, where he was engaged in the construction business for several years.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Mildred Drainey Ingersoll; his mother, Mrs. Lalla B. Ingersoll, and a sister, Mrs. Kathryn Weigle, both of Blue Ridge Summit, Pa., and two nephews, John I. Weigle, of Blue Ridge Summit, and Robert I. Weigle, of Chevy Chase, Md.

Mr. Ingersoll served with engineers of the Twenty-ninth Division during the World War. He was grand nephew of Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.

Text of Roosevelt's Speech

The text of President Roosevelt's radio address last night follows:

No one who lived through the grave hours of last month can doubt the longing of most of the peoples of the world for an enduring peace. Our business now is to utilize the desire for peace to build principles which are the only basis of permanent peace.

It is becoming increasingly clear that peace by fear has no higher or more enduring quality than peace by the sword.

There can be no peace if the reign of law is to be replaced by a recurrent sanctification of sheer force.

There can be no peace if national policy adopts as a deliberate instrument the threat of war.

Points to "Wanderers"

There can be no peace if national policy adopts as a deliberate instrument the dispersion all over the world of millions of helpless and persecuted wanderers with no place to lay their heads.

There can be no peace if humble men and women are not free to think their own thoughts, to express their own feelings, to worship God.

There can be no peace if economic resources that ought to be devoted to social and economic reconstruction are to be diverted to an intensified competition in armaments which will merely heighten the suspicions and fears and threaten the economic prosperity of each and every nation.

At no time in modern history has the responsibility which rests upon governments been more obvious or more profound.

"No Interest in War"

I speak for a United States which has no interest in war. We covet nothing save good relations with our neighbors and we recognize that the world today has become our neighbor.

But in the principle of the good neighbor certain fundamental reciprocal obligations are involved. There must be a deliberate and conscious will that such political changes as changing needs require shall be made peacefully.

That means a due regard for the sanctity of treaties. It means deliberate avoidance of policies which arouse fear and distress. It means the self-restraint to refuse strident ambitions which are sure to breed insecurity and intolerance and thereby weaken the prospect of that economic and moral recovery the world so sadly needs.

You cannot organize civilization around the core of militarism and at the same time expect reason to control human destinies.

Urges Preparedness

For more than 12 years the United States has been steadily seeking disarmament.

Yet we have consistently pointed out that neither we, nor any nation, will accept disarmament while neighbor nations arm to the teeth. If there is not general disarmament, we ourselves must continue to arm. It is a step we do not wish to take. But, until there is general abandonment of weapons capable of aggression, ordinary rules of national prudence and common sense require that we prepared.

We still insist that an armament race among nations is absurd unless new territories or new controls are coveted. We are entitled, I think, to greater reassurance than can be given by words: The kind of proof which can be given, for example, by actual discussions, leading to actual disarmament. Not otherwise can we be relieved of the necessity of increasing our own military and naval establishments. For while we refuse to accept as a permament necessity the idea of force, and reject it as an ideal of life, we must be prepared to meet with success any application of force against us.

We in the United States do not seek to impose on any other people either our way of life or our internal form of government. But we are determined to maintain and protect that way of life and that form of government for ourselves. And we are determined to use every endeavor in order that the Western Hemisphere may work out its own interrelated salvation in the light of its own interrelated experience.

Faith in Democracy

And we affirm our faith that, whatever choice of way of life a people makes, that choice must not threaten the world with the disaster of war. The impact of such a disaster cannot be confined. It releases a flood-tide of evil emotions fatal to civilized living. That statement applies not to the Western Hemisphere alone but to the whole of Europe and Asia and Africa and the islands of the seas.

In all that I have said to you I have reaffirmed the faith of the American people in democracy. The way of democracy is free discussion—as exemplified by the objectives of the forum to which I am speaking. Free discussion is most greatly useful when it is restrained and relates to facts. It is not useful to suggest either to the American people or to the peoples of other nations that the American Government, its policies, its practices and its servants are actuated by motives of dishonor or corruption. To do so is, of necessity, an attack on the American system of constitutional representative government itself.

Let us work with greater unity for peace among the nations of the world, for restraint, for negotiation and for community of effort. Let us work for the same ideals within our own borders in our relations with each other, so that we may, if the test ever comes, have that unity of will with which alone a democracy can successfully meet its enemies.

Morbid Dread of Jail Wins Thief Probation

Salinas, Calif., Oct. 26 (A.P.).—Dr. Jaime de Angulo, 54, pleaded guilty today to grand theft, but argued that claustrophobia—a morbid dread of being in closed rooms or narrow places—made jail confinement hazardous for him.

The court granted his plea for probation from a one-year jail sentence.

Nazi Purge Of Jews Is Increasing

But Migration Is Slowed Passports Held Up Gestapo Complains

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Oct. 28.—Nazi pressure to force Jews out of business and out of Germany steadily is becoming heavier.

Scattered yet significant incidents today gave emphasis to the scope and variety of the anti-Semitic movement.

The German press displayed reports that 50 Jews had attacked 5 Germans in Antwerp, one Nazi Party organ intimating that as a consequence German-Belgian relations might possibly be disturbed.

The Gestapo (secret police) complained that a recent decree of the ministry of the interior having the effect of canceling all German passports held by Jews may impede the broader purpose of obtaining the fastest possible emigration of Jews.

"J" Blocks Visas

Under the decree Jews had two weeks from October 7 to surrender their passports with the stipulation that if any wished then to travel abroad the passports might be revalidated by the printing of a big red "J" across the first page.

Now numerous cases are reported wherein foreign consulates, notably the British, refused to grant visas to holders of "J" passports.

Hardly a day passes in which several dozens of additional Jewish business houses from banks to the simplest dry goods store are not "Aryanized" by a boycott which forces the owner to sell out at a sacrifice.

Nazis Reap Gold

Jewish migration has been great enough so far to turn a pre-Nazi law taxing the flight of capital into a gold mine. The tax, introduced in 1932, already has netted the Nazis more than 300,000,000 marks ($120,000,000).

The law levies a 25 per cent impost on the wealth of any person permanently leaving Germany. In addition the Jew must leave behind up to 65 per cent of his money in blocked marks. Actually therefore he can emigrate only with 10 per cent or less of his wealth.

The Belgian incident, which occurred yesterday, was headlined by some newspapers as "Jewish Rowdyism in Antwerp." The five Germans were visitors there as passengers from the liner Cordilleras.

Jews Called Hostages

Jews in Germany and Italy were termed "hostages" in the weekly organ of the Nazi black-shirted SS Guards which attacked the Roman Catholic and Protestant Confessional Synod churches for an allegedly unpatriotic attitude in the German-Czechoslovak crisis.

Authorities closed all Jewish jewelry stores in Vienna and it was understood their stocks probably would be sold at prices fixed by the authorities.

Vienna Jews have been forbidden by the police president to attend non-Jewish sporting events because of recent assertedly unpleasant incidents.

Belgium Accuses Germans

Brussels, Belgium, Oct. 26 (AP).—Antwerp police charged two German Jews today with an attack upon four German passengers from the liner Cordilleras Tuesday, but neither Jew was placed under arrest.

Police declined to disclose the names or to give other details.

Nazis Will Punish Religious Rioters

Vienna, Oct. 26 (AP).—The Nazi district leader for Salzburg, Friedel Rainer, declared tonight he would "punish without mercy" Nazis who disturb "religious peace and confessional freedom."

This was regarded as a response to Theodore Cardinal Innitzer's letter of October 23 which church and official quarters interpreted as an offer of peace between state and church.

Borah Warns Against Protest On Palestine

Fears Obligation Opposes Involving U. S. Assails Desire to Direct

By the Associated Press.

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, said yesterday that protests against possible British action to close Palestine to Jewish immigrants might involve the United States in "a delicate and dangerous situation."

In a letter to Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of New York, Borah expressed belief that this country would have to be prepared to assume obligations of a mandatory power if it advised Great Britain what to do in Palestine.

He declined an invitation from Rabbi Wise to speak in New York November 2 at a mass meeting called to protest against any cessation of Jewish immigration.

"We cannot retain the respect of Europe and not long our own self respect by directing nations how they shall carry out their treaties and obligations, and do nothing but direct," Borah wrote.

He said he believed that British obligations would be "faithfully kept."

"But I think strongly," he added, "that Great Britain is now placed in a very delicate and dangerous situation and that we may not be helping the cause in which you are interested by holding mass meeting which would have no justification except on the theory that she (Great Britain) is proposing to do a reprehensible thing.

"Unless we are prepared to go much farther than this country would be willing to go and assume primary obligations in regard to this matter ourselves, will it not be far more effective in this cause to trust to the patience, the wisdom and the honor of the mandatory power to work out the problem in accordance with its obligations?"

Throne Lost, but Haile Selassie Still Employs American Press Agent, Registration Reveals

By the Associated Press.

Haile Selassie, former Emperor of Ethiopia, still has an agent in the United States.

A registration at the State Department disclosed yesterday that Publicity Associates, New York City, of which Josef Israels 2d is president, acts as Haile Selassie's agent.

The registration was one of 21 made public yesterday. They brought the total of registrations to 172. Agents of foreign principals were required to register with the State Department by a recent act of Congress.

Israels said he was the agent of "His Imperial Majestry Haile Selassie I, Bath, England." He said he had been employed since 1935 as "public relations counsel advising on public statements and diplomatic procedure" and received "irregular compensation based on activity and expense."

Witness Links Von Papen to Nazi Spy Ring

Was Stationed Here Ousted Before War Mystery Woman Talks

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 26.—The Government's heralded "mystery woman" witness, Miss Santa de Wanger, 31, testified in Federal court today that Otto Hermann Voss, 38, one of three defendants on trial for espionage, consorted with agents of a German spy ring operating in this country.

Miss de Wanger said she had been under constant guard by Federal agents since the spy case broke out last February—"because," she said, "I was afraid of my life."

Miss de Wanger calmly pointed to the defendant accused of stealing United States warplane secrets and identified him as the "Mr. Voss" who spoke "always in German" with other alleged conspirators.

Earlier a United States customs agent identified blueprint negatives, photographs and other documents which German agents nearly smuggled to Berlin aboard a German transatlantic liner three years ago.

Linked to Von Papen

One of the confiscated letters contained a startling reference to a "Von Papen," which led courtroom observers to recall the name of Col. Franz von Papen, former German chancellor and onetime Nazi ambassador to Austria, who was cited for espionage activities in this country when he was a prewar military attache at Washington.

The customs officer said the bearer of the intercepted documents had variously described "Von Papen" as a U. S. Army infantry captain stationed at Monticello, N. Y., and as a person "now in Austria."

Like his two co-defendants, Johanna Hoffman, 26, and Erich Glaser, 28, Voss listened without visible emotion to Miss de Wanger's testimony.

The witness said Voss called two or three times a week at her home in Hempstead, Long Island, where she rented rooms to William Lonkowski, a fugitive defendant named in the indictment as an employe of the German war ministry.

Had Workshop Upstairs

Miss de Wanger said Lonkowski had a small workshop upstairs where he engaged in mysterious activities with bottles of chemical, photographic equipment and a drawing board.

Miss de Wanger said Lonkowski was visited by Dr. Ignatz T. Griebl, another fugitive defendant, who fled to Germany shortly before he was indicted, and by Karl Schlueter, a fugitive, alleged "contact" man of the spy combine.

Cardenas Hopes For U. S. Accord

Mexico City, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—President Cardenas today was reported to have expressed to American Ambassador Josephus Daniels sincere hope for agreement between Mexico and the United States on payment for American-owned farm lands expropriated by this country.

The land question has been hanging fire since July, when President Cardenas, in a note to Secretary of State Hull, rejected Washington's proposals for settlement. Although negotiations have been carried on in Washington between Mexican Ambassador Najera and the State Department, Hull's request that further seizures of American-owned lands be suspended has been disregarded and new expropriations decreed.

Von Ribbentrop On Visit to Rome

Rome, October 26.—Reinforcement of the Rome-Berlin-Tokio anti-Comintern pact in a reply to the new armament program of the democracies is believed here to be the mission which brings German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop to Rome.

Diplomatic circles considered this the likeliest retort to the democracies as financial limitations and the already intense concentration on munitions by the totalitarian states does not permit them to respond by comparable increases of expenditures on production.

Memel Diet Votes For Nazi Freedom

Kaunas, Lithuania, Oct. 26 (AP).—The Memel Diet tonight passed a motion protesting against new security bills which would restrict the liberty of minorities in that Germanic territory.

Memel Germans in the Diet demanded full autonomous police and executive powers, and after the meeting street demonstrations were electrified by cries of the Nazi slogan: "One Reich, one people, one Fuehrer."

Lithuanians have declared there are 20,000 pro-Nazis in the former German territory.

the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Among hospitals summoned to produce their files were Georgetown, George Washington University, Emergency, Garfield, Providence, Sibley, Columbia, Children's, Casualty, Episcopal Ear, Eye and Throat, and Homeopathic.

Dr. Henry Rolf Brown, first medical director for G. H. A. and one of the targets in the campaign against his unit, also was a witness yesterday. He was understood to have added to the details of the story of the attacks on G. H. A. "I told the grand jury all I had to say," he explained when asked for a statement as he left the hearing.

Wiprud stressed that he could not discuss what he had told the grand jury, to the ordinary secrecy of which the Department of Justice has added elaborate precautions during the health inquiry.

"I am certain," Wiprud said, "that thinking people realize that the whole story concerning new methods of delivering medical care has not yet been told. Statements appearing in the press in recent weeks have been remarkable in many respects, not the least of which has been the disregard for the leadership and the co-operation given by medical societies throughout this country in meeting health needs of the people.

"Emphasis has been placed upon the opposition of medical societies to methods of providing medical care, which they have observed over a period of many years are not in the public interest.

"The impression has been given that the medical profession would selfishly stand in the way of progress. This is unjust and disproved by facts. For example, the medical profession through medical societies has for many years willingly and generously given its co-operation and its services to governmental and community agencies for the care of the indigent sick. Nearly every free hospital in this country is staffed by physicians who are not compensated for their services.

"At the present moment numerous experiments in providing adequate medical care to the low income groups are being sponsored by or in co-operation with medical societies.

"The Medical Society of the District of Columbia has recently adopted the basic features of a medical service program for the low income group.

It is, of course, true that in some communities medical societies have made more progress in this direction than in others. However, the important thing is that they are going forward and earnestly seeking the co-operation of the people in advancing a sound and adequate health program. In this undertaking the fact that medical costs have become a burden to certain groups of our population is receiving careful consideration.

Soviets Oust Bluecher and Split Command

make him Bluecher's successor but confirms the many unofficial reports of Bluecher's dismissal, since the Far Eastern army has been devided into two sections, with Gen. Konev in command of the second special section.

It was apparent that Bluecher has been completely eliminated from Far Eastern affairs.

Not on Honors List

There was no mention of him in today's long list of published honors, carried by Pravda and Izvestia, awarding citations for the defense of the Lake Khassan border region during fighting with Japanese troops last summer.

The title of "Hero of the Soviet Union" was conferred upon 26 commanders, including Cern, political workers, physicians and Red Army men "for exemplary fulfillment of battle tasks and heroism."

Five hundred other rank and file men of the Red Army and political workers were cited for their roles.

Once Red Napoleon

Once proudly hailed by Russians as the Red Napoleon, Bleucher's fall from grace apparently brings to an end a colorful career as a soldier that began in Czarist days.

An officer of the old imperial army in the World War, Bluecher swung to Bolshevism soon after the revolution, and did much to establish Soviet rule in the southern and Asiatic areas

Under Bluecher the red guard defeated units of Admiral Kolchak's white army in southern Russia and later on the Siberian fronts. After the civil war, Bluecher became war minister of the Far Eastern Republic. He built an army of the scattered groups of red partisans, and in 1922 directed the campaign that resulted in the capture of Vladivostok from the Japanese and white guard. He returned to Moscow shortly before the occupation of the Pacific port and helped reconstruct the red army. One of his collaborators was Klementi Voroshilov, now war commissar.

Organized Chinese

Bluecher returned to the Orient in 1923 and was sent into China, where, as "Gen. Galen," he reorganized the Chinese republican army, and, leading the bolshevist effort to sovietize China, became one of the most important figures in the Orient from 1923 to 1927.

The present dictator of China, Chiang Kai-shek, was then developing his nationalist government and army, and after a brief flirtation with Russia, broke with the Communists, and Bluecher returned to Moscow.

When Japan invaded Manchuria, Bluecher was made commander of the Far Eastern army, and in 1935 was promoted to marshal. He developed a thoroughly trained army, estimated at 800,000 men, and regarded as virtually autonomous.

Although Bluecher for a time seemed immune to the purge of military leaders, early last summer reports were heard in Moscow that he was in disfavor with the Kremlin. He was at various times reported to have been imprisoned, shot, or dismissed, and on October 7 a Japanese newspaper reported he had committed suicide.

only child, that is their private affair."

Oleg enrolled at the Friends School here in January, 1934, when his father came to Washington as the first envoy from the Soviet Union, and was a student there nearly four years. Subsequently he spent a year at Swarthmore College. He is 19.

Request Not Yet Granted

Oumansky pointed out with emphasis that the Ambassador's request has not been acted upon by the Council of People's Commissars and he may yet return to Washington.

"Mr. Troyanovsky is still the Ambassador," he declared, even though the Oumanskys, and not the Troyanovskys, will be hosts at the important embassy reception November 7 in celebration of the Russian revolution of October.

Son of a colonel in the army of the Czar, Troyanovsky has been one of the most popular members of the Washington diplomatic corps. His departure— if it turns out that way —would interrupt, if not end, a friendship which many members of the official set have looked upon as something of a paradox.

It is the friendship of Troyanovsky and Ambassador Hirosi Saito of Japan. Under Romanoff and Communist rule alike, Russia and Japan have been enemies for years.

Saito's successor was named three weeks ago. He is Kensuke Horinouchi, vice minister for foreign affairs.

Troyanovsky and Saito became close friends after the Russian was sent to Tokyo in 1927 as Ambassador. Saito's recall was due, according to the official explanation, to the delicate state of his health but rumor has it that the real reason is his lack of sympathy with the Nipponese militarists.

Counselor Oumansky said, in reply to a question, that no changes in the embassy staff have been made or are contemplated.

Favorable action on Troyanovsky's request to be detached from Washington would not preclude an appointment to some official post which would allow him and his wife to remain in Moscow, near their son, Oumansky said.

Incidentally, father and son Troyanovsky are each other's favorite partners in tennis and chess.

Suvich to Quit

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Oct. 26.—Sulvio Suvich, Italian Ambassador to the United States, arriving here today on the Italian liner Rex, confirmed reports that he was here to terminate his diplomatic post, having accepted the chairmanship of the board of the powerful European organization of the Adriatic Union of Insurance. He admitted that for "financial reasons" he had accepted a post formerly held by a Jew.

Suvich said the recent Jewish purge in Italy had resulted from an influx of Jews in post World War years, particularly in the professions. He cited the fact that out of 44,000,000 Italians, by the latest census, there are "only 100,000 Jews."

"It is quite probable that I shall not return here again," he said, adding that "for the moment I have not been recalled."

Civilians Cheer as Japanese Occupy Fire-Scarred Hankow

concession and the former German, Russian and British concessions, with the exception of sending small patrols into them to learn whether Chinese soldiers were lurking there as snipers.

Incidents Reported

However, after the army units landed this afternoon, there appeared to be a difference of opinion between the army and navy, for several minor incidents occurred when Japanese units attempted to invade the neutral zone. Apparently the agreement over the neutral zone was not communicated to the army, which had expected to occupy and post military police throughout Hankow, except in the French concession.

Japanese army patrols visited the former British concession tonight and posted notices on certain foreign property, warning Japanese soldiers not to molest it. Up to midnight the Japanese had not taken up policing of that area, but they had occupied the former German concession. So far there has been no serious friction between the foreigners and the Japanese.

Japanese planes flew all morning at a low altitude over Hankow, reconnoitering before the arrival of the destroyers and transports. No Chinese fire challenged the planes, for apparently all Chinese troops, except the wounded and stragglers, already have been evacuated.

Sporadic sniping by Chinese soldiers was reported in the Japanese concession, but elsewhere tonight all was quiet.

Hankow today was without water, telephone or telegraph communication except for the radios on foreign gunboats, over which this message was sent.

There were indications late today that Japanese soldiers, breaking into Chinese houses on the pretext of searching for snipers, were looting.

Japanese Area Razed

Japanese forces landing at their concession found the area razed by fires and dynamite planted by Chinese. It was rumored that the Chinese planned to dynamite the water works, but it was believed that Father Jacquinot prevailed on them not to carry out the threat.

Anxiety was felt for the safety of an American, L. N. Taylor, employed by William Hunt & Co., who was said to have left Hongkong for Hankow by truck on October 21. The trip should not have taken more than five days, and efforts to communicate with him have been unsuccessful. However, a breakdown in the Chinese telegraph system because of the capture of Canton may account for his silence.

Foreign business at Hankow is at a standstill, but the chaos which followed the Japanese occupation of Nanking probably will not take place in Hankow, for the occupation thus far appears orderly.

Chiang Manifesto Expected

Shanghai (Thursday), Oct. 27 (AP). A Chinese news agency dispatch from Chungking, the provisional capital of China, today said Gen. Chiang Kai-shek would issue a manifesto to the Chinese people in a few days setting forth China's determination to carry on a prolonged resistance to Japanese aggression.

Foreign Minister Wang Chung-hui was quoted as declaring "China will go on fighting until the last breath."

Anxiety Felt Here Over Colonies

By the Associated Press.

Talk in Europe that Germany may be given colonies in West Africa is arousing some anxiety in Washington.

If the Reich got any of the numerous small colonies which line the western bulge of Africa, her road to South America would be made much easier, informed observers say.

They point out that some of the cessions might place Germany in a position not more than 2,000 miles from South America.

Chamberlain Accused Of War Plot on Soviet

Moscow, Oct. 26 (AP).—The Leningrad newspaper, Red Gazette, today accused Prime Minister Chamberlain of trying to foment a "counter-revolutionary war against the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics." The Munich settlement of the German-Czechoslovak dispute, the paper said, was only a preliminary step toward involving Soviet Russia in war with Germany and Japan.

Chamberlain, Hitler May Talk On Colonies

General Pact Objective
Nazis Spurn Angola
Want Old Possessions

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

London (Thursday), Oct. 27.—It was learned authoritatively today that steps are under way for another meeting of Prime Minister Chamberlain and Reichsfuehrer Hilter in the near future. They were expected to discuss Germany's claim for return of her prewar colonies.

It was learned that British Ambassador Sir Nevile Henderson has been instructed to prepare the ground for the meeting, which would be their fourth.

King May Urge Pact

It was stated reliably that King George's speech from the throne when he opens Parliament will contain an important announcement indicating the government's determination, with Chamberlain acting as chief negotiator, to explore the European situation with the object of obtaining a general peace pact, in which the question of Germany's claims to colonies "would not be excluded."

It was reported here that Premier Mussolini might emerge as the mediator to settle differences between Britain and Germany on the colonial issue, just as he took the lead in the Munich conference.

[The British cabinet, in a further step toward European appeasement, was reported tonight to have agreed to put into operation soon the long dormant Anglo-Italian pact arranged last Easter, the Associated Press said.

[Reliable sources said they understood the cabinet had decided the agreement sealing Prime Minister's friendship with Premier Mussolini would come into force between November 15 and November 30, after Parliament had had time to debate it.—Editor's note.]

Reich Objects to "Pool"

At the same time, Germany objected to a suggested plan whereby Britain would recognizeReichsfuehrer Hitler's demands by forming a colonial "pool" which would give Germany portions of the Belgian and Portuguese colonies in Africa.

Britain and France would compensate Belgium and Portugal, provided the small powers agreed to the pooling plan, by giving them some Anglo-French holdings, probably in Tanganyika.

Germany, it was explained in Berlin, has no ambitions to possess any part of the Belgian Congo or Portuguese Angola and is insisting upon her "moral right" to regain overseas possessions taken from her after the World War.

The British cabinet was understood to have agreed that any colonial concessions to Hitler must be in connection with a general European settlement, involving arms limitation, a general air pact and German pledges of nonaggression.

Some parliamentarians believed colonial mediation would become the next "gesture" of Italian friendship and be timed for the eve of Prime Minister Chamberlain's appearance before Parliament to ask approval of the Anglo-Italian pact.

Lloyd George Hits Munich

London, Oct. 26 (AP).—David Lloyd George broke his silence on the peace of Munich today to warn Prime Minister Chamberlain that it would end in a "war without friends" for Great Britain.

The white-haired wartime premier, in his first speech since the Munich pact saved Europe's peace at the price of Czechoslovakia's dismemberment, declared the peace "was a bad peace, and a bad peace is no peace at all."

Then he pronounced this judgment:

"We shall have forfeited honor. We shall have lost the respect of the world, and what is still worse, we shall have lost our own self-respect. And in the end there will be no peace. There will be war, and war without friends."

Says Hitler Would Have Lost

Answering questions following the speech, he said he believed "the totalitarian nations would have been crushed like an eggshell" had there been war, despite Britain's defense weaknesses.

"I know something about armaments," he explained. "The French army is today the best army in Europe, and the Russian army is the greatest army in the world so far as numbers are concerned and so far as its airforce is concerned."

90% of South Americans Prefer U. S. Goods, Even if More Expensive, Banker Here Finds

Seek Better Quality
Trade Prospects Bright
10-Week Tour Ended

Nine out of ten South Americans prefer goods from the United States to those from Europe—even when the European exports are cheaper, Warren Lee Pierson, president of the Export-Import Bank, told The Post yesterday.

Pierson has just returned from a ten-week tour of South America, where he interviewed "everybody on the continent" about possibilities of increasing trade between the Americas.

Highly optimistic, Pierson declared that South Americans will take exports from this country wherever possible because of quality and certainty of delivery.

"South Americans realize that their future is tied up with that of the United States and that they are immediately affected by business affairs here. Especially in view of the disturbed conditions in Europe, they are as anxious as we are to improve trade relations. We have a great opportunity there."

The genial young head of the Export-Import Bank warned Americans "who talk only of exporting" that countries must sell to us too. "The problem is," he observed, "to find non-competitive South American products that we can take."

Pierson added that American business firms in South America have pursued a "hit-or-miss policy." When conditions are good in the United States, he said, they are often inclined to lose interest in their export trade, instead of making consistent efforts to build up business in the southern continent in good times as well as bad.

Reports of extensive industrialization of some South American countries need give American exporters no headaches, Pierson said. "On the contrary, greater industrialization would mean a higher standard of living and, consequently, greater trade. American business is most intensive with the highly industrialized countries."

Pierson added that "we might well encourage industrialization to divert South America from some of its industrial production that competes with the United States.

In respect to propaganda activities in South America, Pierson held that "we ought to give the American point of view without selling it." He added that "South Americans are very sensitive people—and North Americans don't always realize that fact."

This was his first trip there, he said, adding with a smile, "I was in China last year and South America this year—but I hope the results are different."

[American trade with China amounted to $153,000,000 (exports and imports) last year, compared to $55,000,000 for the first eight months of 1938.]

Panama-Texas Road Cost Seen $78,308,000

Completion of the northern section of the Pan-American highway, from Laredo, Tex., to Panama City, will cost approximately $78,308,000, it was estimated yesterday in a report of the financial committee of the Pan-American highway to be submitted to the governments of the 21 American republics. The report will also be transmitted to the Eighth International Conference of American States, which meets at Lima on December 9, and to the third Pan-American Highway Congress, which will meet at Santiago, Chile, in January, 1939.

"The total length of the road from Panama City to the border of Mexico and the United States will be approximately 3,250 miles," states the report.

Costs of completion of each country's section of the road are estimated as follows: Panama, $12,283,000; Costa Rica, $12,427,000; Nicaragua, $8,418,000; Honduras, $4,375,000; El Salvador, $4,293,000; Guatemala, $13,803,000, and Mexico, $22,709,000.

U. S. Firm to Buy All of Mexico's Surplus Oil

Detroit, Oct. 26 (AP).—Roy Fisher, president of the Argo Oil Corporation, announced today that his firm had entered into an agreement with the Republic of Mexico for purchase of all surplus Mexican oil.

Approximately 200,000,000 gallons of oil annually will be brought to the United States, processed in refineries here and distributed, Fisher said.

Money paid to the Mexican oil commission will be spent in the United States for machinery, he said.

Support Unsure, Daladier Stays Sweeping Reforms

Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Oct. 26.—The much-heralded Radical Socialist congress, where for days it has been said the program for a "New France" would be made public, opened at Marseilles this afternoon under inauspicious circumstances.

Early this week the secretaries of Premier Daladier were saying that in his address there tomorrow he would make an important announcement outlining his plan to put France on its feet economically, financially and socially. But tonight, when he left Paris, it was said that he had not the slightest idea of what he would do.

Three weeks ago Daladier was given plenary powers by Parliament to legislate by decree until November 15. So far he has decreed nothing and the impression is current in some quarters that he will decree nothing and turn the problem back to Parliament. He is reported to be unwilling to rule without wider support in the Chamber of Deputies.

Anglo-U. S. Trade Treaty in Final Stages, Says Hull

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Hull said yesterday the Anglo-American trade agreement was reaching its final stage of negotiation.

A British reply to an American communication on the treaty was received yesterday and is believed to have made some concessions on products in dispute, such as automobiles, hams, lard and bacon.

Hull refused to say whether the British reply was regarded as favorable. He would say only American experts were studying all phases of the communication.

Czechs Accept Germany, Italy As Arbitrators

Hungary Must Decide
Differences Still Exist
Poland May Participate

By the Associated Press.

Budapest, Oct. 26.—Czechoslovakia tonight accepted Hungary's proposal that Italy and Germany arbitrate their territorial dispute, and it appeared probable the two totalitarian states would finally decide the new Czechoslovak-Hungary border.

There still were secondary differences between the stands of Prague and Budapest, however, which might keep them apart.

Czechoslovakia's latest proposals, received tonight in reply to proposals Hungary made Monday, was considered as showing some progress which might form the basis for further peaceful negotiations.

The Differences

A foreign office spokesman said among the still-existing differences were:

The Czechoslovak failure to fulfill the Hungarian demand for a plebiscite in Slovakia and Ruthenia;

The Czechoslovaks' demand that further negotiations concern the Hungarian minority problems in Slovakia alone; and

The Prague demand that Rumania be added as arbitrator in the event Poland should be appointed to the arbitration committee.

Ultimatum Weighed

The Hungarian cabinet council tomorrow will have to decide: Whether it accepts German-Italian arbitration, prefers further direct diplomatic parleys with the Prague government, or will reject both and order the army to march in after a short ultimatum.

It was understood the decision will depend largely on urgent suggestions expected from Germany, Italy and Poland, Hungary's friends.

It was understood these countries already had impressed upon Hungary that they would accept the arbitration task providing Hungary from now on would faithfully trust her friends.

Reich Urges Speed

Berlin, Oct. 26 (AP).—Germany was described in informed quarters tonight as exerting pressure on both sides for a prompt and peaceful settlement of territorial differences between Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

The Nazi government is working closely with its Fascist ally, Italy, and that is viewed as largely explaining the visit to Rome of Joachim von Ribbentrop, the German foreign minister.

Well-informed circles said Von Ribbentrop, among other things, would discuss "practical means of carrying out a plebiscite in mixed areas which Hungary demands."

The efforts of Joseph Beck, Poland's foreign minister, to obtain a common frontier with Hungary through Ruthenia, the autonomous eastern province of Czechoslovakia, were regarded as a barricade to settlement.

Crack Troops Chase Arabs In Major Drive

British Intensify Fight
Mop Up Acre, Galilee
Use Tanks, Artillery

By the Associated Press.

Haifa, Palestine, Oct. 26.—Several thousands of Britain's best troops today began the biggest military operation in Palestine since the arrival of reinforcements with an intensive drive against Arab rebels in the districts of Acre and Galilee.

Preceded by land "minesweepers," armored cars and wireless wagons, detachments of troops with light mountain artillery, machine guns, rifles and bombs moved through a 300-square-mile rebel-infested area with its rolling hills, broad valleys and sprawling stone villages.

After a day of major campaigning, authorities said they believed they now had the Arab rebels "on the run."

[The United Press reported Arab casualties were five killed. No British casualties.].—Editor's note.

Houses Dynamited

British forces dynamited about a dozen houses in an Arab village from which shots twice were fired at the troops.

The commander of the rebel forces had threatened to lead his army against the British if they dynamited the houses of offending Arab villages.

The minesweeper cars bumped over highways gashed by deep trenches intended to impede the progress of British mechanized units.

Everywhere there were evidences of sabotage, especially to communications.

Germans Blamed

"This sabotaging was so skillfully done, and carried out so carefully," said one official, "that it undoubtedly was done by foreign technicians in the service of the rebels, possibly Germans."

Mile after mile of carefully-built Arab trenches also bore marks of being foreign-made.

Officers said they had found numerous German rifles among the Arab rebels, as well as firearms and munitions stolen from Syria.

Frequent halts were called by the British commander, while machine gunners and riflemen rushed ahead of the main column to return the fire of Arabs hidden in the hills.

Planes Sight Rebels

Royal Air Force planes zoomed overhead and kept in constant touch with the mechanized units giving the latter rebel positions.

It appears clear the British task would be easier if they had more men. It is a case of a couple of divisions of British troops against 900,000 Arabs, for in addition to the few thousands of men in the active Arab army nearly every Arab man, woman and child is aligned against the government forces.

It was pointed out by officers that France used a whole army corps to suppress the revolt in Syria and several years were required to accomplish it.

Hyattsville Man Medalist At 'Mum' Show

Wins Sweepstakes
Mt. Rainier Midget Best
Size Honor Stays Here

The fourth annual Chrysanthemum Show of the Woodridge Garden Club was held last night at Sherwood Hall, Twenty-second and Rhode Island avenue northeast.

There were 58 classes of individual specimens of artistic arrangements for chrysanthemums, roses, dahlias, cosmos and other flowers.

The Floyd Bradley Horticultural Achievement Medal, awarded to the sweepstakes winner, was won by Harold C. Kinner, of Hyattsville. The best large "mum" exhibited was grown by W. E. Bowler, of 1472 Jackson street northeast. The best small "mum" on exhibit was grown by Mrs. Sylvia Green, of Mount Rainier. Kinner also had the best artistic arrangement on exhibit.

Elmer D. Smith & Co., chrysanthemum specialists of Adrian, Mich., donated $10 worth of chrysanthemum plants, which were divided between the winners of the second and third highest points. The plants were won by George Marshall, of Brentwood, Md., and Mrs. Theodore Ruhoff, of Takoma Park.

Dr. E. A. Hallowell, of the United States Department of Agriculture, was judge of the entries.

The list of winners are:

Lose $200,000 Worth of Jewels

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Edward H. Townsend, jr. (left), New York investment broker, reported to police that his chauffeur was missing with $200,000 in jewels. The chauffeur disappeared after leaving in a family car to take the jewels to Mrs. Townsend (right), who was visiting her mother at a Manhattan hotel

Savant Finds Organs Renew Youth in Recovery From Poison

Special Resistant Cells Developed Younger in Form Than Old Tissues Opens Path for Attack on Senility

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Oct. 26.—Juvenile cells of an early embryonic type are produced by the body to replace old cells that have lived an almost complete life cycle when the old cells are damaged by a deadly poison, Dr. William MacNeider, dean of the University of North Carolina School of Medicine reported today at the closing session of the autumn meeting of the National Academy of Sciences.

Experiments made by Dr. MacNeider revealed that it is possible to render the cells of the kidneys and liver resistant to four specific poisons by damaging them with a limited dose of one of the poisons.

While the experiments have important practical aspects for medical men, they also have an equally important philosophical aspect concerning the nature of the life processes, as they indicate that in at least limited portions of the living body the senescent cells of old age can be replaced by juvenile cells, thus giving portions of particular organs a return to the conditions of childhood as a weapon to combat the effects of old age.

The discovery which Dr. MacNeider revealed to the members of the academy today was that when the cells in a kidney are damaged by administering a large dose of uranium nitrate the injured cells recover, take on a new form and are then resistant to damage by bichloride of mercury (corrosive sublimate), chloroform, alcohol and uranium nitrate, which would have destroyed the normal type of cells and might have been fatal to the animal before its tissues were made resistant.

The conferred resistance is not permanent. The time of its duration varies inversely with the age. It remains longer in older animals than in younger ones, the latter retaining this state about four months. The cells then return to the normal type.

Dr. MacNeider said the resistant type of cell probably functioned to retain the organ in its changed state, or in other words, to restrain further progress of the aging process. He said that this would be considered a case of "second childhood on the part of the altered cells."

Posses, Hounds Trail Maniac, At Large 4 Days in Fairfax

Led by baying bloodhounds, Fairfax County police, Virginia State troopers and a posse of citizens last night beat the woods and fields of the Mount Vernon district on the trail of a man believed to be a homicidal maniac.

Shortly before midnight, the hunt was abandoned when the dogs lost the trail. Officials, who said the animals were baffled by high winds and thick underbrush, declared the chase would be taken up again early this morning.

Seen at various times in the last four days, the man has terrorized the Mount Vernon section of the county. Once before he has escaped bloodhounds borrowed from Lorton.

Yesterday efforts to find the spectral wanderer were redoubled when a resident of the district reported a strange man stalked into his home near Penn Daw, snatched food from the kitchen table and stalked out without a word.

The ghostly visitor was first reported Sunday when he entered a home 2 miles south of Alexandria, took food and left, saying nothing to several members of the family.

Fears for the safety of Mount Vernon district residents were heightened when it was realized the specter's description tallied with that of Edgar Cotton, 51, wanted in New York for sending obscene matter through the mails. A post-office circular asking Cotton's apprehension describes him as a homicidal maniac.

Cotton's description, as well as that of the elderly man haunting Fairfax County, says he is 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighs 145 pounds and is 51 years old.

The circular says Cotton was employed in New York as a bookkeeper, but has been living in Washington or nearby some time.

Doctor Is Convicted Of Illegal Operation

After being acquitted of similar charges several times in the last few years, Dr. James W. Hart, 63, of 2156 F street northwest, was convicted before Justice Proctor yesterday of a criminal operation which preceded the death of Marie H. McLean, 22, of 1408 Forty-fourth street northeast in Sibley Hospital last year.

The court ordered Dr. Hart jailed pending sentence. Prosecuting Dr. Hart was Assistant District Attorney Murray. Defense counsel was F. Joseph Donohue.

14 Tell of Killing With Hammer in Park

Fourteen government witnesses yesterday described the beating to death with a hammer of Mrs. Jennie Bishop, 27, last July. Her husband, Edward Bishop, 35, unemployed mechanic, is on trial for first-degree murder. Assistant District Attorney Heflin said there would be a dozen more witnesses today. The woman was killed as she fled after meeting her husband in the Pension Office Park.

$200,000 Gems Stolen From N. Y. Broker

Chauffeur Sought
Part of Loot Found
Ring in Pawn Shop

By The Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 26.—Recovery of a ruby-set diamond ring, valued at $2,000, and an automobile owned by a wealthy New York broker today spurred a police search for the remainder of the $200,000 jewelry collection reported missing yesterday at the same time the broker's chauffeur dropped from sight.

The chauffeur is George Fleming, 28, employed by Mr. and Mrs. Edward N. Townsend. Townsend told police the car, chauffeur and jewels disappeared on the way to the Hotel St. Regis after his wife was driven into New York from their home at Syosset, Long Island.

Ring Was Pawned

The ring was recovered in a West Side pawn shop; the car found in a Sixtieth street parking lot. Police sent out an eight-State alarm for Fleming.

Jack Gorta, pawnshop owner, said the ring was pledged yesterday for $75 in the name of George Fleming and that the man who pawned it showed the clerk a legal paper ordering him to pay his wife $75 a month, explaining that was the reason for pawning the ring.

James Clancy, parking lot proprietor, told detectives he knew Fleming and that the chauffeur and another man brought the Townsends' car to the lot at 3:40 p. m. yesterday—nearly three hours after Fleming dropped from sight.

Townsend Defends Chauffeur

Detectives found an empty jewel case and five pearls from a broken string on the floor of the car.

Townsend said he did not believe the chauffeur, who formerly worked for his father, had stolen the jewels.

Police said Fleming was married and had two children, but was separated from his wife.

In other jewelry investigations, police questioned Alfred H. Gouldon, 46, arrested in France and accused of obtaining $15,000 in gems from New York jewelers by making part payments and then disappearing, and sought evidence to link Sadie Tobias, 37, former dancer, with a series of jewelry thefts aggregating $96,000.

Other Thefts Investigated

She was charged with stealing $4,000 worth of jewelry on August 11 from the home of I. O. Gulden, Rumson, N. J., banker. Police Capt. Henry Kruse said she was wanted in Monmouth, N. J., and had worked in Long Island homes which were robbed.

She was to be questioned in connection with the $87,000 theft from the home of Edward W. Scudder, owner of the Newark Evening News, and $5,000 in jewelry missing from the home of former Senator W. Warren Barbour. Both homes are in Rumson.

Detectives said she had served a 2½-year sentence for the theft of $70,000 in jewels from the home of Ernest du Pont at Wilmington, Del., in 1931.

'Man in the Street' Here Favors Traffic Rules for Pedestrians

Traffic

laws if they were adopted, but added:

I am all for some sort of pedestrian regulation. It will help to cut our shameful death rate. Most of those who get killed are usually crossing in the middle of the block, where they have no business to walk."

David Edison, a salesman, of 3104 Mount Pleasant street northwest, had this to say:

"Sure it would help. Look at all the accidents we are having. Most of our trouble is due to careless pedestrians. I would obey the laws the same as motorists if regulations were set up for me to observe."

Dorothy Dyer, of 1224 Kenyon street northwest, is strictly in favor of the plan.

She'd Co-operate

"I don't see," she said, "why pedestrian control wouldn't work in Washington. I think if people would learn to obey the law we would be much better off. I, for one, will agree to co-operate."

Mrs. H. L. Roberts, of 1137 North Illinois avenue, Arlington, Va., who works in Washington, said she "just goes along with the crowd now" and doesn't pay "any particular attention" to traffic lights.

FARRINGTON

"But I would if there was a law requiring me to," she said.

George Farrington, who has seen pedestrian control succeed, heartily recommended its enforcement in Washington.

"I can't understand," he said, "why they have not adopted something like that long ago. I come from a Southern city, and we've had it there several years and our record is a whole lot better."

S. M. Ely, of 2918 Courtland place northwest, is a former District school official and founded the schoolboy patrol here, carrying the pedestrian control idea to the nth degree.

HARRINGTON

"I have been advocating general pedestrian control for a long time," he said. "I am convinced it would work in Washington as it has worked in other cities."

In the opinion of Mrs. Mary Brown, 2760 Devonshire place northwest, pedestrians shouldn't be arrested for disobeying any laws which are proposed for adoption.

ELY

"I think they should just be scared into walking safely—at proper crosswalks and with the lights. If they were bawled out and embarrassed in public by a policeman, they would soon learn what to do."

But Dorothy Meeks, of 1631 Euclid street northwest, thinks that if pedestrians laws are enacted, offenders should be arrested "at first" in order to warn others.

"It wouldn't take but a few arrests before everybody was observing the rules," she added.

J. H. Baxter, of 3510 Second street northwest, said he was "very much in favor" of pedestrian regulation, and told of a recent visit to the West:

"I found that in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle pedestrians are forced to cross streets on proper signals and at crosswalks. Success of the law is evidenced by lowered injury and death rates. If you step from the curb where you are not supposed to, a policeman calls you back. Let's do it here."

MISS MEEKS

Sergt. Joe Harrington, of the Police Traffic Division, was convinced that pedestrian laws could be enforced "even with our limited personnel."

"Pedestrian regulation must come sometime," he said, "so why not now? They enforce it other cities—and we could enforce it here."

One passerby who refused to give his name, said anything the Commissioners wanted to do was "O.K. with me"—and then he stepped from the curb into the middle of F street and almost became a hospital patient. An auto missed him by inches.

"That's why I didn't give you my name," he called over his shoulder.

D. D. Lambert Elected President Of D. C. Yale Club

D. D. Lambert, class of 1917, was elected president of the Yale Club of Washington for the coming year at the annual election luncheon yesterday noon at the Cosmos Club.

Other officers elected were Edward Burling, jr., 1929, first vice president; Charles G. Cooper, 1926, second vice president; Edgar K. Legg, 3d, 1934, secretary; Reeve Hoover, 1921, treasurer; Laurence V. Benet (1884), Harrison Hathaway (1910), Charles R. M. Tuttle (1925) and John L. Newbold (1928), directors. C. C. Glover, 1910, and Oliver McKee, jr., 1915, were elected representatives to the Yale Alumni Advisory Board.

Maj. Gen. Robert M. Danford, chief of field artillery, spoke on national preparedness.

$50,000 Damages Asked by Boxer in Mistake Arrest

Stanford N. Carrier, 23-year-old boxer, yesterday in District Court asked $50,000 damages for being seized on a forgery charge, paraded in handcuffs, held ten hours and then released with the explanation that it all was a mistake.

Carrier sued Lawrence E. Paddock, who lives at Mrs. Aana Carrier's rooming house, 1318 Park road northwest, and Patrolman Joseph P. Miller. Of Paddock he asked also $20,000 for slander.

In the complaint Carrier charged that, at Paddock's instance, Miller and two other policemen came to the boarding house October 5 and took him to the Tenth Precinct, where he was photographed, fingerprinted and taken, handcuffed, to headquarters and paraded with criminals in the line-up.

The slander count accused Paddock of telling Mrs. Carrier that her son was involved in the robbery of an old man of $40.

Monday, Oct. 31, 9:30 AM-3:00 PM
Union Station, Washington, D. C.
See the christening and dedicatory services at 12 noon, or tune in Station WMAL—N. B. C. Hookup. With the Diesel-electric locomotive, will be examples of modern coaches, dining, sleeping and lounge cars operating on Seaboard trains.
Come! See the newest in transportation!

A Tribute to the South

Through its progressive policies, the Seaboard has kept pace with the advance of the South during its 106 years of service—service that has been inseparably linked with the development of this great empire.

Always, the Seaboard gives its utmost to boost the communities it humanely serves. Of each it considers itself a citizen, with the same civic pride; gives employment to vast numbers of men and women; helps support governments, and educate our children through its taxes; aids in development of new industries and localities.

The Seaboard has continually improved its services with innovations to make your journeys more pleasant, more comfortable, more economical. In recent years, the Seaboard has pioneered in air-conditioning, installation of reclining seat coaches, and other improvements and new developments. In commodity transportation, too, the Seaboard keeps pace. With broad policies of cooperation, the needs of shippers and receivers of freight have been keyed to modern facilities and services that produce a complete, economical system.

Now, the Seaboard dedicates the world's largest and most powerful, streamlined, diesel-electric locomotives to the South . . and to provide sustained high-speed transportation with the utmost in safety and comfort at economical fares.

Again, the Seaboard pays tribute to the South. Again, the Seaboard introduces the most modern in transportation for additional development of this region that is blessed with unlimited natural resources, and destined to further grow and prosper.

Again, the Seaboard evidences its faith in the South. It is serving the present and building for the future. In return, the Seaboard asks only fair treatment and the support of the people in the further promotion of our mutual interests.

Some of the Features

Nine diesel-electric locomotives are being built for the Seaboard by the Electro-Motive Corporation. They are to operate in units of three—210 feet long, 13 feet, 11 inches high, 9 feet, 10 inches wide, equipped for service weigh 900,000 pounds, and produce 6,000 horsepower—the world's largest and mightiest! Each of the units is composed of two 1,000 horsepower diesel engines that drive 600 volt electric generators. Each generator then powers two traction motors, mounted on the driving wheel trucks.

Vandenberg Cites 6 Points To Roosevelt

Notes Kentucky Race
New Mexico Inquiry
Communist Support

By the Associated Press.

Port Huron, Mich., Oct. 26.—Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, commenting on President Roosevelt's denunciation of the Dies committee proceedings, call tonight for "an official verdict" on six "topics which warrant equal if not greater vigor of Presidential condemnation."

Michigan's senior Senator spoke on behalf of Frank D. Fitzgerald, former Governor and Republican candidate for the office now held by his successor, Frank Murphy. President Roosevelt's statement referring to the Dies committee also was an indorsement of Gov. Murphy, who is seeking re-election.

"I could share his wish for more proof and fewer opinions but I am unable to grasp the 'partisan bias' when it is a distinguished Texas Democrat who is a member of the Democratic Rules Committee of the House who directs this inquiry which seems so profoundly to upset Democrats in Lansing (the Michigan capital) and Washington," Vandenberg said.

He then mentioned these six subjects:

"A Kentucky Democratic primary in which he (Mr. Roosevelt) personally intervened in behalf of another of his favorites and which Democrats on a Senate Investigating Committee bluntly said 'should arouse the conscience of the Nation' because it 'imperils the right of the people to a free and unpolluted ballot.'

"A Pennsylvania Democratic primary and election campaign in which a Democratic Governor goes to the extreme of having a Democratic Legislature try to stop a lawful grand jury investigation of alleged corruption and political vice.

"A graft hunt in New Mexico which turns up 73 prominent Democrats and indicts them in a Federal court for prostituting WPA relief to partisan politics.

"Two Senate roll calls last June 3 and 4, when his Democratic majority, manhandled by his Democratic leader, defeated an effort by another brave Democratic Senator specifically to penalize relief evploiture by a statute with teeth.

"The openly announced marriage of his election forces in New Jersey with a notorious vote-controlling machine.

"The official indorsement of his administration—and his Michigan proxies—by the Communist Party."

Hamilton Calls President, Murphy 'Enemies of Labor'

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 26 (AP).—John D. M. Hamilton, Republican national chairman, charged at a rally of Michigan Republicans tonight that President Roosevelt and Gov. Frank Murphy "are the real enemies of labor unionism and the organized labor movement."

Hamilton spoke from the same platform with former Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald, Republican opponent of Murphy in his campaign for re-election.

He charged that both the national and the Michigan administrations had "retarded economic recovery and kept men and women out of work" through policies that led to "bitter and unnecessary industrial warfare."

"Not only has the Governor of your State given encouragement to riots and lawlessness in disputes between employers and workers," he said, "but the National Administration in Washington has promoted industrial discord."

Democrats Beat Committee Move To Impeach Earle

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 26 (AP).—Democrats on the Pennsylvania legislative committee investigating charges against high Democrats lined up solidly tonight against a Republican members' recommendation for impeachment proceedings against Gov. George H. Earle, Democratic Senate nominee.

Representative Ellwood J. Turner, Republican floor leader, injected into the day's testimony an assertion that the Governor was "guilty of a misdemeanor and conspiracy to obstruct justice" in what Turner said was suppression of a State police report of an investigation into charges that substandard gravel was delivered for a State road job.

When he mentioned "impeachment of the Governor," the five Democrats on the seven-man committee protested.

1 Dies, 1 Hurt In Plane Crash

Easton, Pa., Oct. 26 (AP).—One man was killed and another seriously injured tonight in the crash of an airplane at Wilson Borough, a suburb.

Herbert Freese, 27, of Freeport, Long Island, died in Easton Hospital without regaining consciousness. Salvatore Marina, of New York City, was critically injured.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

FOR ONCE, attorneys have become bereft of their historic privilege—that of having the last word.

Reference is to the Cairns Committee report which gave the Federal attorneys' views on their projected inclusion within the civil service—a report which was laid with much unction on the Civil Service Commission's table, which drew a withering blast from the commission and then expired, so far as the attorneys were concerned.

Against all tradition, they said not another word. A representative member of their group tells us that nothing further is likely to be said; that the attorneys have gone on record with their case and this, in all probability, ends the matter from the attorney's table.

BUT THE case isn't closed, otherwise. Yesterday the United Federal Workers of America, in a heavy four-page declaration to the Civil Service Commission, took stock of the Cairns report—which urged against status for lawyers until registers could be more satisfactorily compiled—and made recommendations on its own score, briefly as follows:

All legal positions except those paying $6,000 or more should be filled by competition and promotion. The competitive tests should be drawn with due regard for the variety of legal positions, and should permit proper consideration of experience, training, special knowledge and special skills. It was felt that "bold departures from existing civil service practices to achieve greater flexibility may be necessary," such as greater participation of appointing officers in preparing and perhaps conducting examinations.

BUT THE long aim, as proposed, would be "to assure objective judgments based on uniform standards for any given class of positions."

The proposal calls for testing on the job of intangible factors during the probationary period, "both because adequate advance judgment is impossible and because the possibility of abuse will be greatly curtailed."

"Positions in the intermediate brackets—where adaptibility to the particular job begins to play a part—should be filled primarily by promotion from within the agency, or transfer from other governmental agencies," which the report believes to be in line with the development of a true career service, "and will allow adequate flexibility for building a well-rounded legal staff."

And lastly, the report holds that positions paying $6,000 or over should be filled under the above principles whenever possible, but an exemption should be available for policy-determining and highly specialized positions.

Such, in substance, are the conclusions to be taken by the commission and the President for what they seem to be worth. More pungently interesting are the various observations in the report, such as:

"It may be readily admitted that selecting an adequate legal staff is a somewhat different and more difficult task than setting up a clerical or stenographic staff. But it is easy to exaggerate these differences and difficulties and the general counsel's report appears to do so."

"The competitive principle has worked reasonably well in other so-called expert or professional fields—the general counsels would be hard put to establish that their legal staffs are an abler group than the economists, scientists, accountants and physicians selected on a competitive basis—and there is no reason to believe that the selection of attorneys is a more difficult job than the choice of other professionals."

To the attorney's contention that written examinations don't adequately cover training, adaptibility for the particular job, personality, temperament and that the appointing officer is best qualified to weigh such factors, the U. F. W. A. report holds:

"To the extent this means that appointing officers should be able to pick and choose according to personal tastes, it must be rejected as in violation of the merit principle; granted that the discretion may be exercised honestly and wisely in many cases, the possibilities of abuse are as great as in the case of any patronage jobs—greater, in fact, because the plums tend to be bigger."

White Slaver Released, Mann Act Trial Slated

Mark R. Corby, 24, was lodged in the District Jail last night to await trial in District Court for allegedly violating the Mann act. He was released from Federal prison at Chillicothe last Saturday after serving a term for white slavery. Yesterday, United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage held him for the grand jury under $5,000 bond.

Judge Proctor Farnsworth Witness Today

Sentenced Navy Officer
Coercion Now Charged
Vindication Is Sought

Justice Proctor, of District Court, today was scheduled to be star witness for former Lieut. Comdr. John S. Farnsworth, whom he sentenced to 4 to 12 years in Atlanta Penitentiary for plotting to sell American war secrets to the Japanese navy.

Fanrsworth is trying to get out of Atlanta with a habeas corpus. He claims he was coerced into pleading nolo contendere (no defense) when he really wanted to fight for vindication. He also claims that Justice Proctor denied him a constitutional right by refusing to let him change his plea three days after he made it.

A written statement in which Farnsworth told the entire story of his operations will be handed to Notary Public Lloyd Harkins, who is presiding over the hearing here, by District Attorney Pine in obedience to another summons. The prosecutor decided to waive his right to withhold the document on the ground that it was a confidential paper.

Also summoned by Farnsworth's counsel, George S. Hawke, of Cincinnati, are Col. Thomas M. Rives, District jailer; Col. Charles E. Stewart, District court clerk; Ben Pearce and Rex Collier, Evening Star reporters; Edward T. Folliard, Post reporter; H. W. Whichard, Star librarian; Jack Burness, Post librarian; H. H. Entz, of 310 Ridge road southeast, and Evelyn Sallada, 3806 Kanawha street.

Barbara Belmont to Wed

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—A marriage license was issued today to Miss Barbara Belmont, 23, daughter of the late New York capitalist, August Belmont, and Robert Livermore, jr., 29, of Boxford, Mass. The couple said they planned to be married November 5.

Waitress, Taximan Held in Robbery

Charged with robbery as an aftermath of the $1,000 larceny last week from Mrs. Ella V. Rector, 1211 Fourth street southwest, Margaret L. Garfinkel, 23, waitress, and Swanson M. Campbell, 28, cab driver, both of the 1300 block of Fairmont street northwest, were arraigned yesterday before Police Court Judge Walter J. Casey. He set bond at $300 each for appearance before the grand jury.

Witness against the couple was David A. Lamb, 41, a roomer at Mrs. Rector's, who was held to the grand jury last Saturday charged with grand larceny. He said he gave the bill to Mrs. Garfinkel "to hold for him."

Detectives arrested the woman and Campbell after the bill was cashed at a gambling establishment on Bladensburg road.

The Dies Committee

The action of President Roosevelt in publicly and formally attacking the conduct of the Dies committee comes close to being without precedent in American parliamentary history.

However faint the line of demarcation between the executive and legislative functions of the Government may have become, Congressional investigations have hitherto been conducted in complete freedom from Executive criticism. Whatever their private views of a particular Congressional hearing, Presidents have always until now endeavored to keep these views to themselves.

But the unprecedented character of President Roosevelt's denunciation of the Dies committee will not prevent his attack from receiving widespread popular approval. This is because of growing irritation with the general procedure of a body whose unjudicial attitude has so frequently been demonstrated in the weeks since it began its hearings on un-American activities.

The task which the committee set out to do was a much-needed one; the opportunity to do an outstanding and valuable job was present. But instead of conducting an impressive investigation the committee has largely been content to serve as a platform for publicity seekers, disgruntled individuals, character assassins and others whose testimony has not been subjected to careful scrutiny or supported by objective evidence.

To be sure, the charges against Gov. Murphy which so aroused the President's wrath were by no means the first of their kind against prominent individuals. It can be said that in speaking now Mr. Roosevelt was moved principally by a desire to defend a political lieutenant who has a real fight on his hands. This charge undoubtedly has substance, but on the other hand no Chief Executive could lightly set aside so hoary a precedent as that of the hands-off policy regarding the work of Congressional committees. It was necessary first to accept accumulative provocations.

Congressional investigations have frequently proved invaluable in uncovering serious evils and in paving the way for constructive legislation. But those that have served this purpose best have been those for which the ground has been carefully prepared by thorough exploratory work, followed by a careful and judicious sifting of the evidence presented at open hearings. From this point of view the Dies committee's efforts have been anything but a model.

It is a constructive development that, in hitting back at the President, Representative Dies makes clear that his committee will in future be more respectful to the tested laws of evidence.

The New French Senate

The elections held in France last Sunday to fill one-third of the seats in the Senate have resulted in an increase in the already strongly conservative complexion of that body. While the Socialists secured one additional seat, bringing their membership in the upper house up to 15 out of a total of 314, and other Leftist groups won two new seats, the greatest gains were made by the parties of the Right. They won ten new places. The greatest losses were those suffered by the middle-of-the-road Radical Socialists (Premier Daladier's party) who lost 13 seats.

In spite of these losses the returns from Sunday's balloting are being interpreted by government supporters as a sign of popular approval of M. Daladier's foreign policy, and particularly of the role he played at Munich. That may be so. But the fact cannot be ignored that Senate elections, as a rule, only indirectly reflect general currents of political opinion in France. Participating in them are not the voters at large but a miscellaneous group of functionaries from the departments and the municipalities, with the rural areas enormously overrepresented.

Senators are elected for nine years, a third of the total being elected every third year by electoral colleges composed, in each instance, of members of the Chamber of Deputies from each department, of elected members of the General Council of the department, of members of the district councils and finally the representatives of the communes, the basic political unit in France.

Each commune is entitled to at least one delegate to the electoral college, but Paris has only 30. Thus the small communes have between them an immense preponderance over the great metropolitan areas which are also the places where the Left parties are strongest. In view of this situation it is not surprising that the Socialists and Communists, who between them have over 36 per cent of the seats in the popularly elected Chamber of Deputies, have only 5 per cent of the seats in the Senate.

Three years ago, however, when the last Senate elections were held, the parties of the Left did manage to make some inroads into the conservative majority of the Senate. That was in the heyday of the Popular Front. Their failure to do likewise this time can thus legitimately be regarded as proof of the sharp cleavages that have arisen in this now crumbling bloc of Left parties and, therefore, as foreshadowing a new and more conservative ruling combination in France.

On this basis M. Daladier's gratification over Sunday's election results may be said to be justified. His bitterest critics at the moment are Communists and Socialists; his most enthusiastic supporters in the realm of foreign policy are the conservatives of the Right. The Senate has warmly supported both his domestic and his external program. As now constituted it is likely to do so more enthusiastically than ever.

Philistine And Pharisee

Senator Borah, who seldom lacks the courage of his convictions, is thoroughly logical in pointing out certain implications behind current mass meetings on the subject of British policy in Palestine.

In declining an invitation to speak at such a meeting in New York the Senator suggests that pressures of this sort are ineffective "unless we are prepared to go much further than this country would be willing to go and assume primary obligations in regard to this matter."

Unfortunately, that is a convincing observation. Other nations are understandably weary of being lectured as to their duty by Americans whose own government is, as frequently and abundantly demonstrated, unwilling to give reliable support to any of the international obligations which we believe others should defend in our behalf.

The outstanding illustration of this characteristic came during the recent European crisis. Many Americans then vehemently expressed a belief that France and Great Britain should have declared war on Germany. The fact that existing legislation would have made the United States automatically neutral in such a war did not prevent furious sideline criticism denouncing a disposition to neutrality on the part of others.

Our record is studded with such instances of back-seat driving. We refused membership in the Spanish Non-intervention Committee when our participation therein would have greatly helped to shorten the duration and lessen the dangers of the Spanish war. When this committee failed to be effective, lacking American assistance, Americans were the most active in denouncing its deficiencies.

Now Palestine is the case in point. If the United States were asked to suppress the Arab rebellion there, making the mandate work at the cost of actual American intervention, a shout of protest would be heard throughout the length and breadth of this Republic. But the conviction that we should take no responsibility in the issue does not impede the demand that the British perform a duty which we would refuse to assume.

Unquestionably the British have an imperative duty in Palestine. Unquestionably, having voluntarily accepted a precise and definite mandate in the Holy Land, they should fulfill its obligations as consistently as they have utilized its assets. But, as Senator Borah points out, isolationist policy poses a real question as to the propriety and desirability of moral homilies from America on this score. In Mr. Borah's words: "We cannot retain the respect of Europe, and not long our own self-respect, by directing nations how they shall carry out their treaties and obligations and do nothing but direct."

In saying this the Senator is himself consistent. Having always effectively opposed what are rhetorically called "foreign entanglements" he now properly refuses to lend support to criticisms of others who have failed in responsibilities which the United States refused to share. There can be very searching criticism of Senator Borah for having helped to deprive the post-war settlements of American indorsement. There can be no criticism of him for following his line of reasoning to the point which refuses to condemn the collapse of a structure which we declined to support.

If the British and French are human, which remains a fair assumption, they must be getting awfully weary of being so comprehensively lectured by a Nation which has no intention whatsoever of getting mixed up in problems which they, to their sorrow, cannot avoid. Indeed it is not difficult to see why there is a growing sentiment in these countries favoring an attempt at collaboration with Germany, Italy and Japan. This ominous turn is to be viewed in connection with the continued rebuffs received by London and Paris in trying to obtain effective working agreements with the United States.

Today, as of old, there is the type of the Philistine and the type of the Pharisee. And sometimes it is more difficult to get along with the latter than the former.

Easy To Explain

It would be very strange if a law which sets minimum wages and maximum hours for a vaguely-defined group of industries, engaged in interstate commerce or production for interstate commerce, did not result in considerable confusion and necessitate dismissals of some workers receiving sub-standard wages.

Probably there are employers who are inclined to exaggerate the effect of the legislation, falsely attributing seasonal reductions in employment to inability to meet the minimum standards laid down by the law. There may even be a few who have seized the opportunity to make political capital out of opposition to the law by ostentatiously dismissing employes.

After making due allowance for these exceptional cases, however, it remains obvious that legislation compulsorily increasing labor costs will automatically result in closures and shutdowns. The administrator of the wages and hours law himself concedes that a certain amount of unemployment will inevitably result from the attempt to set a floor under wages and apply a ceiling to hours. But he believes that employers unable to meet the minimum standards set by the law should be eliminated in the long-time interest of the workers.

That is a position that most people would accept in principle. The differences arise in the manner and method of application of minimum standards. The method employed under the Federal wages and hours law is faulty not only in its fixation of a Nation-wide rigid minimum, with limited exceptions, but also in its failure to give employers needed information as to the extent to which they are affected by the law.

"Under the act," Administrator Andrews states in the first of a series of interpretative bulletins, "employments are included or excluded by the terms of the statute itself as interpreted by the courts, and not by the force of any administrative action." Upon the bewildered employer, therefore, devolves the responsibility of guessing whether he must conform to the provisions of the law. If he makes a wrong decision, he risks subjection to heavy penalties.

Under these circumstances, President Roosevelt should be prepared to hear that a good many employers prefer to go very easy, at least until they know more about the effects of this experimental legislation upon their businesses. That shutdowns might come just on the eve of an election would seem to be due to bad timing on the part of the Administration rather than any Machiavellian plot to discredit the plan on the part of disgruntled employers.

President Roosevelt himself admits that "all social legislation, if it represents any advance, will immediately adversely affect some people." That is so self-evident that one can only wonder at the incredulity with which the President receives reports of dismissals made necessary by passage of the wages and hours law. One also wonders why, in his eagerness to hasten reforms, Mr. Roosevelt is so prone to forget the penalties resulting from too ambitious efforts to improve conditions.

Given time, the wages and hours law, under a trained and patient administrator, may well become a useful instrumentality for elevating working conditions. But progress will have to come through the co-operation of the industries affected and their employes. The Federal Government would face an impossible task of enforcement in attempting to impose legislatively-fixed standards upon innumerable small establishments which either cannot or will not conform to legislative decrees.

With the fiasco of the NRA experiment fresh in memory, it is very easy to find an explanation of reported shutdowns, wage cuts and rumors of trouble that have accompanied the inauguration of the Federal wages and hours law.

Strachey At Large

The release from Ellis Island under bond of John St. Loe Strachey is one that lovers of stern justice may regard with rather mixed and uncertain emotions. Pending the appeal of his case to a circuit court, Mr. Strachey is free to travel whither he will in the United States.

This outcome certainly seems a little closer to common sense than if Mr. Strachey had been sent home as a dangerous revolutionary.

On the other hand, the condition of silence imposed upon him might seem to imply that the Government will be reasonably safe and the populace sufficiently self-contained as long as Mr. Strachey confines his subversive ideologies to the written word. If so, it is not Mr. Strachey's thought, but his eloquence that is so dangerous.

And, of course, there remains the question whether to prohibit a British author from appearing on an American lecture platform does not constitute cruel, and certainly unusual, punishment. This is a knotty point.

If it can be interpreted as meaning, not that Mr. Strachey is a dangerous menace to American institutions and to the democratic form of government, but merely that he happens to be one visiting British author-lecturer more than this tolerant and long-suffering Nation is willing to endure, then indeed there is a silver lining to the cloud over Ellis Island.

Un-American!

The Palestine Tangle

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With other clergymen whose names are in the Washington city telephone directory, I have received from Rabbi Isadore Breslau a communication, with inclosure of an address by Dr. Solomon Goldman, concerning the Palestine crisis. The address purports to give the "factual background" of the Zionist Movement in that country and the reactions from Arabs in particular. If press reports are to be relied upon, the British government has already indicated the course it will pursue. But whatever is done, the reading world will be sure to experience a deluge of confusing statements. From recent and repeated visits to Palestine, where I intntionally took as guides Jews, Arabs and Christians, I give the following unbiased observations:

Under Turkish rule, both Arabs and Jews in Palestine were held to helpless poverty. The land was denuded of trees and land erosion went on unobstructed. The World War gave occasion for the Arabs, who far outnumbered all others in this little strip of coast and mountain country, to join with the British in driving out the Turks, even though Arabs and Turks were both of the Moslem faith. It was definitely understood, but not formally proclaimed as in case of the Balfour Declaration, that the Arabs should have this section of the Arabian Peninsula without being subordinated to any foreign power. They would, as they thought, do for Palestine what their comrades in Egypt had done for that country under British protection.

But Zionism later created a confusion which has grown today into a civil war in the Holy Land. To say that the so-called "terrorists" among the Arabs in Palestine represent only a small part of the country's inhabitants is about as true as to say that all Jews are Zionists. The late Honorable Oscar Straus was an ardent Jew but just as ardent an anti-Zionist. His plea was that Palestine be internationalized, since it is the "holy land" to three distinct faiths. He thought it unwise to attempt to give it to either as an exclusive "homeland." According to present indications, his far-seeing discernment may be realized.

The British find Zionism an impracticable dream. If the Jews who insist upon its being both justice and England's duty will see that they are forcing an Arab uprising that will not only ruin the country but will cost more lives ultimately than Palestine could possibly hold in people, the plan to permit the Jews already there to dwell where they are as a minority group, yet with assured protection from the British government, will be gladly submitted to. As in case of the Czechs, a wrong was done to "annex" the Sudetens to that to which they did not belong. In Palestine a wrong was done even to make the gesture to take from the Arabs their territory to make it a homeland for any other people.

Southern Manifesto

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Pahdon us, sah! but we would have you know that hereafter, in the Solid South, the border, the middle and the deep South, sah! only genuine, unadulterated Jeffersonian democracy will be tolerated by us, sah! That freight and duty discriminations, purges, regimentation and such will be anathema, maranatha. In accordance therewith we are grateful to our great President for his announced pledge of cooperation and coincidence to that end, sah! It means that our inherent national communal rights, so long shooed off, are coming home to roost sah!

Arrows of progress warn that you keep an eye on the South for the next decade, or you'll be surprised, yes, sah!"

Sublime Optimism

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In all the anxiety and discussion regarding traffic fatalities I marvel that so little is said about what seems to me to be a vital and fundamental matter that underlies most such cases. First, drivers rush along with far too much confidence in their ability to handle whatever emergency may arise. They have a sublime and unwarranted confidence in horns and in brakes. (On a moist street even good brakes can be a real hazard.)

And second, there is too much of a sublime optimism that things will work out somehow, in spite of recklessness and inattention. We've heard so much preaching about being optimists that we think it should apply to 70 miles per hour, or any old speed.

Don't be too confident, and don't be too optimistic; it is heaps better to be safe than to be sorry. And it all applies to the pedestrian also.

Beasts And Humanity

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to express my thanks to The Post for what it has done in helping the crippled children to get the advantage of an education in their homes.

It certainly would be a disgrace to the City of Washington if they didn't, when there is so much money spent yearly for the needs and comfort of wild animals at the Zoo. I think human beings should be cared for first, especially the children.

Pity The Pedestrian

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a 50-50 driver-pedestrian, who greatly prefers pedestrianism and whose outlook I hope is not clouded by prejudice either way, I'm compelled to take exception with much of Harold Wentworth's traffic article today. The assertion, impossible to refute, is that 53 of those killed have been pedestrians. In view of the death dealing character of the instruments heaved at them with careless abandon the miracle is the toll is not twice as high.

Wentworth quotes an outsider as saying "Look at 'em—it's a wonder more of 'em ain't killed." How many streets does his critic attempt to cross in a day, assuming it is important for him to get anywhere? He should try crossing a hundred times or so per day.

He would learn that every street widened in the street-widening frenzy puts the hapless pedestrian (who is still 50 per cent of Washington) at the mercy of the savage driver, whose operations are increased by the lure of the wide streets for tests of speed and recklessness. Caught in the vortex between late crossers and fast turners, whose arc of assault may exceed half the width of the street, his plight is one to make crocodiles weep.

Complete lack of consideration of those on foot has never reached a higher state of development than in Washington today. The mere fact that there are so many wide streets built for their benefit and sole indulgence seems to make the savage type of driver exceed his usual fury. It is well to recall there is no case on record of a car being rushed to the hospital as result of being hit by a pedestrian.

Women, Jobs And Homes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter of Josephine Miller in The Post of October 21, protesting the space given in your paper to attacks on the right of women to earn, was most timely.

It was unjust and unworthy of The Post to head this letter "For Censored Letters." We are not naive enough to think that censorship (by the process of elimination) is unknown in a newspaper office. But this is not a question of censorship, but of attacks on a right that is so vital and so fundamental to one-half of the population that any person who questions it should, perhaps, be exterminated.

We are not asking that they be exterminated, but merely that the barbarous assaults of their immature minds on the dignity of womhood should not be given free advertising in the pages of a responsible newspaper such as yours.

M. V. G.

Washington, Oct. 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As to the old question as to whether married women should hold jobs, it would seem that each case should be decided individually. But it doesn't seem quite fair that here in Washington in the Federal employ there are couples whose joint incomes run between $6,000 and $7,000 a year, while admittedly there are thousands of single and capable women who cannot find work.

Also a survey should be made to learn how many babies and small children are left all day in the care of inexperienced maids while the mother works—and how many young children come home from school and let themselves in to an empty apartment. There is no doubt a high percentage of these children might well be called neglected. It's not a normal system and very often is the result of the wife's dislike of housekeeping.

SQUARE DEAL.

Washington, Oct. 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: No one would deny a woman an opportunity to earn a living for herself and those dependent on her; but every observing person, regardless of sex, sees the conditions increasingly aggravated by the unprecedented rush of women into all fields of endeavor since the sixteenth amendment went into effect. The fact that married women are citizens should not be used as an excuse for their working while husbands are employed and earning enough to provide for them.

They want all the luxuries of life, regardless of the fact that many thousands of undernourished school children must be fed by funds raised in cities and communities.

THOMAS J. SPALDING.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Anent the Josephine Miller letter in The Post, October 21: Whatever will you do now that Josie and her little "group" are no longer loving you? Are you feeling awful sad and blue after your wrist has been slapped? Or are you passing it off with a merry laugh as insolent, nervy clap-trap?

To those who enjoy their morning Post it would be a sad sad blow to find "Letters to the Editor" taboo because a sorority wills it so. They threaten, "These attacks must stop!" or they will settle your hash! Poor editor! Do you shake in your shoes lest they do something really rash?

Try to be calm. You will still have your friends after Josie has done her worst. If she gets your readers on her neck perhaps she'll blow up and burst! I'll bet dollars to crullers the rest of her "group" are breathing sighs of content on finding that only Josephine's name is signed to that dumb document.

I am not writing this as an "answer," but just to assure you, by heck, that Josephine Miller, her "group" and her letter are a big, bad pain in the neck!

De Re Tomatico

TO GET right down to the point, there are a few things I want to say about the ubiquitous tomato before I do my fall plowing. Somebody has just got to say these things, and that's all there is to it. Why hasn't the public known the truth before? Why this long silence about a national evil that has been growing like a malignant tumor?

Psychologists may say that I have been conditioned against the tomato; that maybe I fell out of a tomato can when I was a baby. Probably they'd be right, but that doesn't make matters any better. As I remember it, there wasn't a single part of the process of growing tomatoes back on the farm that appealed to my boyish humor. There was nothing involved that helped to make me a better American citizen—nothing that particularly brought home to me the marvels of plant science or of nature's great plan which helped us make a livelihood at $12 a ton.

First of all, as soon in the spring as danger of frost was over (and sometimes, unfortunately, before) we kids would be conscripted for setting out 12 or 12 thousand tomato plants. This was done by crawling along on our hands and knees in the dirt, row by row, over a gargantuan tract of what is sometimes facetiously referred to as Mother Earth, snatching each tender little tomato plant from its greenhouse box, and introducing it, with an impious little push, to its horticultural career. Then all was well for awhile unless a late frost or early cutworms cut loose, in which case we did half the field over again evenings after school.

But if you think we were through then, you're mistaken. There was hoeing to be done to keep down the weeds, and cultivating all summer with a one-horse cultivator. And some years we had to go along and whack off the big green tomato worms, which were so nearly the color of the plants that instead of searching for the worms themselves you had to look for where they had eaten or for their white eggs attached to the leaves. It was hard to believe that these tame green monsters, if let alone, would turn into those beautiful hawk moths.

Late in summer the picking started, and that too was a backaching job. It lasted till the frosts came, for the tomatoes kept on blossoming and bearing right up to the bitter end. If there was a heavy frost in the offing, we picked the green ones for chow-chow.

But none of us liked tomatoes to eat. We grew to hate them, as they deserved. I have a sister who is so allergic to tomatoes that so much as the sight of a catsup bottle sends her to bed. And a cousin of mine turns a sort of magenta-green if a sliced tomato appears on the table.

I was appalled this summer on a 10,000-mile motor trip to see how the tomato has obtained a foothold in our country. No matter whether you are in Lovelock, Nev., Palo Alto, Calif., or Circleville, Ohio, there is one omnipresent constituent of the great American 50-cent dinner—two slices of tomato on a yesterday's lettuce leaf. (In fairness I must state, however, that east of the Mississippi this offering is occasionally varied with that old restaurant standby, coleslaw, a poor substitute, God wot.) They fed me tomatoes (or tried to) in every State from here to Frisco, with and without mayonnaise, salt and pepper, vinegar, Russian dressing, and olive oil. But no matter how you dress it, it's still tomato.

It's not like it used to be when tomatoes were in season only in summer. Now they are in season the year round! If there be any choice, the cold-storage ones are the more acceptable, for they have little savor at all and none of that death-pallor taste of a ripe tomato right off the vine. Only the other night I attended a banquet at one of Washington's better hotels, and one of the noncommittal items of the menu was "Salad in Season." When they brought it on it was the same old 100 per cent American article—a hacked-up tomato bestrewn over a sheaf of oily lettuce that looked as if it had been caught in a flywheel.

I don't know that the Elizabethans (the lucky dogs) had tomatoes, but I know what Shakespeare meant when he has Mercutio exclaim (Romeo and Juliet, Act III, Scene 1): "Worms' meat!" And Milton says practically the same thing in Paradise Lost (Book 2, lines 626-627):

"Abominable, inutterable, and worse
Than fables yet have feigned or yet conceived."

And one of the most telling indictments against the tomato—no one knows whether the tomato is a fruit or a vegetable and no one cares—I found the other day in an old scrapbook that I was about to throw away. It reflects the wisdom of the Ancients, which nobody should deny:

"There's nothing quite so vile, said
Marcus Porcius Cato,
As the love-apple, or tomato,
Unless it be its rotten obligato,
The tomato."

And I hope that will settle the matter once and for all.

Effrontery Plus

SEVERAL TIMES lately these dispatches have been accused of anti-Italian feeling.

Well, the Italian nation, under Mussolini, has fostered anti-American feeling for a long time, and a review written in Rome recently reported that it was safe to say that not one word favorable to the United States had appeared in print in Italy in two years.

Mussolini's press, which speaks only with the approval of the government and thus obviously expresses sentiments to which the government desires to give voice, repeatedly has called this country a nation of gangsters, a charge which plainly includes all those Americans, loyal to this country, who were born in Italy or born here of parents who came from Italy.

IF AN AMERICAN publication were to call these Americans "gangsters" they would be deeply offended, and with good reason. But when Mussolini's press calls them gangsters there is no audible outcry. This lack of resentful expression may be due to the lack of means of expression independent of the extended influence of Fascist Rome. Only a comparatively few Americans of Italian birth or blood actively sympathize with Mussolini and Fascism, and Mussolini presently will discover that he has made a clumsy mistake in addressing insults to the Nation for which they have patriotism.

If the Italian press thought to curry favor with this element of Americans by calling them gangsters, it made a serious psychological error.

SOME LOYAL Americans, including Americans who never saw Italy, have found it difficult to admit to themselves that the Italy of Mussolini and Fascism is a foe of democracy. The United States long ago withdrew from the export trade in democracy and does not now attempt to push its line of government into other countries. There are no Americans in Italy guilty of effrontery comparable to that of the Duce's unofficial governor-general of the unofficial Italian colony of New York, who presumes to warn loyal Americans of Italian birth or descent to refrain from certain expressions.

It seems not to be realized that the so-called Italo-American element in this country has a great power to moderate the attitude of Italy toward this country. If these Americans can be of service to him they also can be of equal service against Mussolini, remembering, of course, that Italy constantly tries to organize their influence in Italy's favor.

IT IS WORTH remembering that it is impossible these days to ascertain just what is the state of relations between Mussolini's Italy and other nations, including, of course, this one. Italy has not yet declared war on Abyssinia, for example, but has made war on that country, nevertheless; invaded and bombed it, captured its capital and absorbed it. Italy has not declared war on the legal government of Spain; nor has Japan declared war on China, nor Germany on Austria or Czechoslovakia.

Thus Americans of Italian birth or blood who permit themselves from force of sentiment to condone or defend the course of the Italy of today and are instinctively hurt by criticism of Italy are permitting Mussolini to make use of them.

ALL THIS is painful, but the sincerity of Mussolini's feeling for these Americans may be judged from the fact that he himself detests and severely punishes people whom he even suspects of harboring the slightest affection for any other country.

In Italy, under Mussolini, one cannot be an Austro-Italian or a Jugo-Italian. He choked off the native languages of captured minorities, compelled them to Italianize their names, erased the foreign names from the headstones in their graveyards and even went to the absurdly ruthless extreme of forbidding his captured Austrians to yodel.

HE OBVIOUSLY has only contempt for persons who call themselves Italo-Americans, just as Hitler can only despise those who permit themselves to be called German-Americans, although both dictators, being without conscience, naturally make all possible use of Italo-American or German-American sentiment.

Mussolini and Hitler both are imposing on the sentiments of many Americans of foreign birth or blood and playing them for suckers.

In Italy and Germany no man is allowed two guesses as to whether he is all Italian or 100 per cent German.

Minnie, 1st Mouse Diva, Is Dead of Old Age

Woodstock, Ill., Oct. 26 (AP).—Minnie, the original singing mouse which started that wave of warbling rodents back in 1936—remember?—was dead today, probably of old age. After her discovery in the basement of the Chicago Industrial School in December, 1936, imitators were found in virtually every State, and England even brought forth a beer-drinking cat and a champagne-drinking horse.

The Trade Pact

By Our Ottawa Correspondent

Is Mr. King Preparing to Sign?

Ottawa.

PREMIER MACKENZIE KING was so exhausted by the worries and anxieties of the European crisis that he has felt it necessary to take a holiday in Bermuda and the West Indies. Before he departed, he spoke in very optimistic terms to the press correspondents at Ottawa about the progress of the negotiations about the trade agreement at Washington; he indicated definitely that an agreement had been reached about basic principles and that only some details remained to be adjusted before a final bargain could be struck and the treaty prepared for signature.

The common expectation here is that some time shortly after the Congressional elections in the United States are safely over he will stop off at Washington on his homeward journey and affix his signature to the pact. Its terms are still veiled in complete secrecy, but both manufacturing interests, which apprehend cuts in their protection, and producers of natural products like the apple-growers of Nova Scotia, who fear a curtailment of their preferential privileges in the British market, are manifesting considerable nervousness about what sacrifices the treaty will demand from them and, if they arouse a widespread outcry of protest, the Conservative opposition is ready to seize the opportunity of making political capital out of them.

ARRANGEMENTS have now been made for the new Conservative leader, Dr. Manion, to get a seat in the House of Commons, from which he has been excluded since 1935. He has been nominated by the Conservatives of London, Ontario, for a by-election which is to be held on November 14. At the request of Premier King, the local Liberals are not opposing him. A candidate of the Co-operative Commonwealth Party has been nominated, but Dr. Manion should have no difficulty in beating him.

Meanwhile he is engaged in a speechmaking tour in western Canada and is looking into the organization of his party, which has fallen into a very dilapidated condition in the West. His initial speeches in the role of party leader are naturally being followed with keen interest and inevitably the appraisement is a mixture of praise and blame.

He has been adopting very cautious tactics in one sense. So far in his addresses he has scarcely mentioned Premier King or his government and has directed no serious criticism against their policies. He has been taking the line that the results of the present economic system in Canada are patently unsatisfactory, that there is far too large a proportion of the people either unemployed or living in straitened circumstances; that Fascism and Communism, both of which he denounces, are certain to gather recruits unless the more glaring economic and social injustices which now prevail are redressed.

He wants, he says, the support of all people of good will and enlightenment in order that he may do something to ameliorate the lot of the masses of the Canadian people. He has so far refrained from giving any indication of the remedies which he contemplates and will probably avoid doing so as long as possible, but there is some evidence that he is making some headway toward capturing the goodwill of the farmers and urban workers who are dissatisfied with their lot.

DR. MANION may soon get his chance of proving his mettle as a parliamentary leader, for this week Mr. Lapointe, the acting premier, has disclosed to the press that the government contemplates summoning Parliament, which usually meets at the end of January, to reassemble before Christmas. One object of such a move would be to get early ratification of the trade agreement with the United States. Another would be to drive ahead with the sessional program with a view to winding up the session about the middle of May and leaving Mr. King and his colleagues quite free to entertain their Majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth, who, according to the tentative arrangements, now are due to land in Canada in the closing days of May. Apparently it is intended that they will spend about three weeks in the Dominion and, as the actual journey across the continent still occupies at a minimum four and a half days, they will be busily occupied during their whole tour, as they cannot afford to risk the offense which would be caused if they did not visit all the provincial capitals and spend a whole day at each.

The most notable ceremony in which their Majesties will participate will be the unveiling of the majestic national war memorial which has just been completed and now towers high in the center of Ottawa. The work was entrusted to a group of English brothers called March, and they began their labors as long ago as 1925 and have produced an imposing monument. Their Majesties, however, are certain to be pressed to perform similar ceremonies at other places, and the authorities at Ottawa are now getting a flood of entreaties from all over Canada for the presence of the royal pair. Obviously they can only go to a limited number of places and so the organization of the royal tour will entail considerable work on the part of the officials concerned and much delicacy.

The royal visit will indeed be a historic occasion, as never before in history has a reigning British sovereign stood on the soil of North America, and while in some quarters the suspicion prevails that the royal tour has a definite political objective, to check the spread of the spirit of isolationous stimulus from the late crisis, their Majesties are assured of a warm and enthusiastic welcome, both as the wearers of the crown, which is almost the only surviving visible link binding the British commonwealth together, and for their own sakes.

THE SESSIONAL PROGRAM, however, may not prove easy to dispose of with speed, as apart from the trade treaty, which is certain to create great controversy, the thorny issue of constitutional reform is sure to be projected into the parliamentary arena by the submission of the report which the Rowell commission on dominion-provincial relations is getting ready for presentation to Parliament. The commission has been greatly handicapped in its labors, first by the withdrawal of Mr. Justice Rinfret, of the supreme court, who was chosen to represent French Canada, and secondly by the very serious illness of its chairman, Chief Justice Rowell, of Ontario, whose state of health seems to preclude any likelihood of any further share in the work of the commission. Dr. Sirois, a Quebec jurist, has been appointed in Mr. Justice Rinfret's place, and he and the other three commissioners lately assembled in Ottawa for the purpose of digesting and analyzing the material which has been submitted to them by briefs and personal evidences at the public hearings held throughout the country last spring. They propose to hold at Ottawa in November a final series of public hearings and, once these are concluded, will proceed to formulate their report.

The common prediction is that their report will recommend a substantial enlargement of the federal authority at the expense of the provinces, in order that the way may be paved for social reforms like the establishment of a national system of unemployment insurance and for the tackling of the debt problem, but Premier Hepburn of Ontario and Premier Duplessis of Quebec have, in the light of recent utterances, not receded in the slightest degree from their avowed determination to make common cause to resist any plans for the curtailment of the present powers of the provinces, and they seem likely to get comfort and help from the present governments of Alberta and New Brunswick. So, if the King government commits itself to a plan of constitutional reform, a vista of prolonged and bitter controversy will be opened up.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Foundation Of Another Empire

IT IS USELESS to underestimate the magnitude of the Japanese victory in China. With the conquest of Canton the Japanese are able to close all the doors to China. Communication by sea is now completely under Japanese control. There remain only as exits and entrances to what is left of an independent China the overland route from French Indo-China and a long and not very practicable highway through central Asia to Russian Siberia. The French door will soon be closed because the Japanese have the power to compel the French to close it. The Russian door, even if it remains open, is a mere crack in the iron ring that places China at the mercy of Japan.

Even though the Chinese continue to offer some active and even more passive resistance, the Japanese have won the war, and the operations from now on are likely to be not much more than the mopping up that follows any great victory. The consequences of the victory are enormous. China, which has been a center of formidable resistance to the advancing empire of Japan, will become a vassal contributing to the power of the Japanese Empire. What was once a liability of the first order has been changed by the conquest into an asset of incalculable value.

IN EASTERN ASIA, where live one-quarter of the population of the globe, the Japanese are supreme. The Russians are helpless, the French are intimidated, the British position is shattered, and the Americans are withdrawn, though we are still entangled in the Philippines. The strategic foundations of one of the greatest empires of history have been, it would seem, securely established.

There is a view, widely held in Great Britain, and to some degree also in this country, that the opening of Eastern Europe to German conquest and of China to Japanese conquest will divert preoccupy, and even satisfy the conquerors for a long time to come. It is held that having bitten off so much, the conquerors will require a long time to chew and to digest it, and if it does not choke them, it will at least keep them quiet and well-fed for a generation. This is what Mr. Chamberlain and those who think as he does have in mind when they say that, though the price has been a big one, they have bought with it peace in their own time.

IN THE LAST ANALYSIS this theory rests on an idea which has been current since the war, that the world is divided into satisfied and unsatisfied nations; into the Haves and the Have Nots, and that the aggressiveness of the Have Nots will subside when they too become the possessors of great empires. If the theory is correct it is one in which Americans might find a great deal of comfort. For if Japan can be satisfied for a generation by letting her have China and perhaps Russian Siberia, if Germany can be satisfied for Hitler's lifetime by letting him have a free hand in central Europe, the Balkans and the Ukraine, then later on, if the appetite for conquest is still strong, the United States can still enjoy security in this hemisphere while the British Empire is being distributed.

There is, however, ground for thinking that the fashionable theory of Haves and Have Nots is a half truth. It is undoubtedly half the truth to say that inadequate opportunity for the congested populations of Germany and Japan and Italy has generated the dynamic energy which inspires their rebellion against the constituted order of the world. But it does not follow that the energy once generated will subside when all reasonable grievances have been redressed.

The French revolution did not subside when the grievances of 1789 had been remedied. The Russian revolution did not subside when the peasants, workingmen and soldiers obtained the land and the peace which they demanded when they made the revolution of 1917. And there is no very convincing reason for thinking that this revolution against the international order of the Old World is likely to grow less by what it feeds upon.

THOSE WHO THINK it will subside are in the position of the upper classes during any revolution. They imagine that concessions which would have prevented a revolution will be sufficient to arrest the revolution. It is undoubtedly true that if half of what has been taken by the three great conquerors had been conceded freely ten years ago the international revolution could have been prevented. But whereas once much smaller concessions would have been satisfying, they are now merely appetizing. For what is now at stake is not tangible things like territory and resources to satisfy the needs of the Have Nots, but the sovereign power of the Haves to defend all their possessions.

If the rising imperial nations of Europe began as discontented proletarian nations, they are now at the stage of their revolution where they have seized the strongholds and are beginning to exercise a dictatorship of the proletariat. The discontented nations of the post-war settlement have become the unsatisfied conquerors of the present day.

THE RIGHT PLACE to look for light upon the prospects of the future is in the careers of the great conquerors of history, of Alexander, of Caesar and Augustus, of Napoleon. What do their careers teach us about the prospect that successful conquerors will at last decide that they need go no further and that they will announce that the period of conquest is over?

Alexander the Great conquered an empire extending into India; he died at the age of 33 without settling accounts with Rome, and his empire soon disintegrated. The Roman conquests were substantially terminated by Augustus at a frontier which left no organized military power of any consequence within striking distance of the empire. Napoleon overran the whole continent of Europe, but his empire collapsed because he could not conquer Russia or Great Britain.

If any lesson is to be drawn from the past, it is that conquerors do not stop voluntarily and consolidate their gains until they have disposed of all rivals to their power.

DEMOCRATS who have forgotten how the great conquerors think and must act find it exceedingly difficult to understand the new era in which they suddenly find themselves living. The series of tragic miscalculations made in the past few years were due to the illusion that the age of conquest and empire building was as dead as Caesar, whereas in fact, we have since 1931 been living in the first years of a new age of conquest and empire building.

The foundations of two empires, potentially as great as any in history, have been laid between the peace of Munich and the fall of Canton, and our minds are as yet unable to keep pace with the speed of world history in the making. But we may get some practical measure of the speed of events when we realize that whereas it takes three years to build a battleship, it has taken only 15 months to conquer China.

Women's Clothes Held Cheaper Than Men's

Women can be clothed cheaper than men by the Goodwill Industries, Harold Snape, director, told the family welfare committee of the Council of Social Agencies at a luncheon meeting at the Y. W. C. A. yesterday.

Complete wardrobes can be bought for women for $5.65, while a man's outfit costs $11.10, he said. He called attention to four types of family service the industries offer, including rehabilitation, vocational training, employment service and Goodwill stores where the low-income persons can buy at low cost.

Pennsylvania Collieries Hit Price Minimums

The Bituminous Coal Commission yesterday heard protests of three companies against the minimum price proposals and classifications of the producers' board of District 1, Central Pennsylvania.

The Moshannon Smithing Coal Co., Bird Coal Co., and Reitz Coal Co. contended their product had been placed in a higher classification than was warranted by its value to consumers. This discrimination, they contended, gave competitors with similar fuel a price advantage.

Pukka Sahib!

During the last year every single prejudice, imaginary or otherwise, that he might have had when he, (the British Ambassador to Buenos Aires), went to Argentina had entirely disappeared. He found the Argentines the most natural, and if he might say so, the most English people he had ever met.

Odd Attack By President

By Mark Sullivan

Dies' Denunciation

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S denunciation—if that is not too strong a word—of the Dies Congressional Committee, as an incident of a press conference, has several publicly important aspects. Washington observers with long experience say it is the first time in their recollection that a President has specifically attacked a committee of a co-ordinate branch of the Government, certainly when the committee was in control of his own party. Five of the seven members of the Dies committee, including the chairman, are Democrats. The uniqueness of the President's action, coupled with the violence—again, if that is not too strong a word—of Mr. Roosevelt's language, does not make for that urbanity, that cessation of name-calling and saber-rattling, which Mr. Roosevelt recently recommended as a remedy for the time's ills.

Mr. Roosevelt was in a mood of irritation, not only about the subject matter of his public statement against the Dies committee, but about other matters. A tone of exasperation colored much that he said at the press conference about divers subjects. The first question asked him was whether he had any comment to make about testimony before the Dies committee, which charged Gov. Murphy to Michigan with "treasonable activities." Mr. Roosevelt said he had something to say, but that he would put it in a formal statement after the press conference. Many present understood him to say that he feared that if he spoke extemporaneously he might not be courteous. This last was not included in the stenographic transcript which Mr. Roosevelt later gave out. One wonders if Mr. Roosevelt had reflected, or if some about him had suggested, that off-hand remarks of his at press conferences, on occasions when he is irritated, have unfortunate consequences.

LATER, when Mr. Roosevelt was commenting on the new wage-and-hour laws, he again showed exasperation. He implied that the closing of some plants because of the law, coming two weeks before the election, might have a political motive. He said it was the duty of industry, including newspaper owners, to try to make the law work. His allusion to newspaper owners had a satirical tone that frequently accompanies his allusions to newspapers.

About the subject of Mr. Roosevelt's attack on the Dies Committee, the facts are these: In January, 1937, there was a sit-down strike in the General Motors plant at Flint, Mich. The company asked the local court for an order directing the strikers to cease the illegal possession of the plant. The order was read to the strikers. They jeered. Since the sheriff alone could not eject the several hundred sit-downers, he asked Gov. Murphy for help. Gov. Murphy did not give the help. Instead, he instituted negotiations between the officials of the striking union and the company. After a week the strike was settled with concession of many of the strikers' demands. Not until then did the sit-downers leave the plant. The sit-down strike, wherever practiced, is described by Mr. John P. Frey, of the American Federation of Labor, as being "used by the Communists in our country as a training camp in which Communists can become familiar with the tactics they are to apply when their revolutionary program is put into action."

ALL THIS and much besides has been brought out in testimony before the Dies Committee for the investigation of un-American activities. Members of the committee feel there has been a deliberate effort from several quarters to minimize the testimony revealing Communist activities and to deride the committee. For this feeling there is some basis. Secretary of Labor Perkins, in an official public letter, made a belittling allusion to the committee. The Administration has declined to facilitate the committee's work by giving it the services of employes of executive departments, although this has been done for other investigating committees.

One aspect of the alleged minimizing of the Dies Committee's work calls for thought on the part of newspapermen. The situation covers more than the Dies Committee. One of the most important controversies now under way in America is that between two labor organizations, the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization. Many newspapers writers are members of the American Newspaper Guild. The guild is an affiliate of C. I. O. Newspapermen writing about a controversy between two organization, of one of which they are members, are inevitably subject to a charge of partisanship. Testimony before the Dies Committee by an official of A. F. L. and other witnesses asserted that there is some communism in some parts of C. I. O. If now it is charged that there is minimizing of the Dies Committee, there is a burden on members of the Newspaper Guild, so far as they report or write about the committee, to show that the charge is not well-founded. The fundamental fact is that testimony before the Dies Committee is distinctly startling in its revelation of the extent and force of the drive to take America toward communism.

Is China Doomed?

By Barnet Nover

Prospects In The Far East

WITH THE FALL of Hankow, the picture becomes very dark for China.

The event itself was long anticipated by the Chinese leaders. They were never sanguine enough to believe that their nation's poorly armed troops could hold the temporary capital indefinitely against the far better equipped invaders. Long ago, therefore, they began to take steps for the eventual evacuation of the city and this process was accelerated as the Japanese army drew nearer and nearer the Yangtze metropolis.

Thus, when the city was taken this week the great bulk of Chiang Kai-shek's army was miles away to the west. The war goes on.

IT IS NOT the fall of Hankow itself which makes the present outlook for China so dark. During the last 15 months China has survived a succession of defeats each one of which should by ordinary calculations have led to the abandonment of the struggle. The struggle was not abandoned.

China also can survive the loss of Hankow even on top of the other great losses she has sustained. But she cannot survive the destruction of the morale without which the 15 months of resistance would have been impossible. And that is precisely wherein the present danger lies. For if current reports are true, the spirit of defeatism has begun to raise its head in China. It was manifested at Canton which was taken over by the Japanese practically without a fight. It is being manifested, so reports from Shanghai suggest, in other conquered parts of the nation.

These reports may be exaggerated. The very circumstance that they emanate from Shanghai, which is under Japanese dominion, makes it necessary to accept them with more than a grain of salt. But they cannot entirely be discounted. The very remarkable unity displayed by China during the last two years is of relatively recent origin. It would be surprising, indeed, if under the impact of endless defeats the old spirit of particularism, the desire of individuals and groups to make the best of a bad job, should not emerge.

JAPAN will capitalize this spirit for all it is worth. The Japanese can conquer China, they have already conquered a large part of it, but they cannot rule it. Only the Chinese can rule China and the Japanese know it. That is why, from the very beginning, their war cry has been that their own desire is to secure Chinese "co-operation." For without that "co-operation," willing or unwilling, active or passive, China will have to be garrisoned and the maintenance of a garrison sufficient to keep all of that vast country in a state of subjection is beyond Japan's capacity.

The question then arises whether this Japanese objective can ever be attained.

SINCE JAPAN embarked on its expansionist course 60 years ago she has added much territory to her empire. The Loochoo Islands, Formosa, Korea, the former German islands of the South Pacific, Manchuria—one after another these areas have come under the sway of the Mikado. In none of these colonies is Japan's control being challenged in any effective fashion, although in Manchuria the fact that an endless succession of campaigns against so-called bandits have had to be launched indicates that it is not always sufficient for Japan to conquer a region, she must sometimes repeatedly reconquer it.

Vast as is Manchuria, which is as large as France and Germany combined, China is vaster still. Japan now holds the principal cities. She controls the ports and the railroads. There is no doubt that she is now, or soon will be, in a position to exploit some of the resources she has taken over in China, if not by herself alone, with German and other outside aid. She is also in a position to flood China with her goods, keeping out the competing products from overseas. Japanese plans for cashing in on her conquest are grandiose and the prospect has produced a sharp conflict between the military elements on the one hand and the commercial-financial groups on the other, with the former apparently losing out.

But these gains are, in the long run, certain to prove illusory unless the Chinese are willing to acquiesce in Japanese domination.

THE JAPANESE have been very assiduous students of Western history. They know how the British and French and Portuguese empires arose. They feel that they are merely following in the footsteps of their imperialistic predecessors. But whether they can do in China what the British did in India and the French in Africa is far from certain.

It is one thing to rule the backward peoples of Africa. China is not Africa. Nor is it India. Were it not for the fact that the peoples of India are not one but many, Britain's domination of that sub-continent would have been ended long ago. That is precisely why, as a spirit of nationalism has bridged the differences between Hindu and Moslem, Brahmin and untouchable, Sikh and Parsee, Britain has been forced to give way. Once these differences become secondary to the feeling of common nationality and common hostility to the outside ruler, Britain's position in India will become impossible.

The setting up of Japanese puppet governments at Hsinking and Peiping and Shanghai and Nanking shows that the Japanese hope to do in China what the British for two centuries succeeded in doing in India, rule the land through compliant natives. But it is doubtful if they can succeed in this endeavor even for a short time and it is certain that they cannot succeed in maintaining such indirect rule for very long. Whatever the ultimate outcome of the present war may be, Japan has stirred the Chinese people to a sense of unity which they have never felt to the same degree before and which, ultimately will undo the work of conquest.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Harry, the Hoarder

("Harry L. Hopkins, WPA Administrator, declared during his speech, 'The only thing I will have to regret when I return to private life is that while I had the power I did not spend more money.'"—News item.)

When I am back in private life—
When I am old and wiser—
This thought will haunt me day and night:
Why was I such a miser?
When I am through with Washington
And know more peace and order,
Recalling what I spent, I'll ask,
"Why was I such a hoarder?"
"Why did I spend so little dough?"—
This thought will be disturbing;
I might have spent ten billion more—
There was so little curbing.
A billion here, a billion there—
Ah, memories so tender!
But looking backward I will know
I was a Scotchlike spender.
A billion by the telephone,
A billion through a letter—
Tho many billions did I spend,
I could have done much better!
Five billion spent for this idea,
Six billion for another,
But as I check up I will feel
I was a piker, brother!
Oh, how I helped to prime the pump!
I pumped it dry, or nearly,
But in the years to come I'll think
I was a tightwad, clearly.
Those countless bridges, dams and things
For which I paid so gladly . . .
I thought I did well but some day
I'll know that I did badly.
Those roads, those golf clubs and the like—
Their costs once seemed sufficient,
But some day I will come to know
My spending was deficient.
I will not know a peaceful night—
Awake I'll lie and sorry
I didn't spend more money when
It seemed so hunky-dory.
I know that it will haunt my days
And haunt my nights, oh, many!
When I must face the awful fact
I ever saved a penny.

I adore his gurgles of appreciation when a hulking tackle brings his foe to earth, both feet on his face . . .

I love the way he yells himself hoarse for some back who slays three tacklers . . .

Needle Guild To Hold Annual Meeting Today

Mrs. Taylor to Preside Needy to Get Clothes All Are Practical

The Needlework Guild, a charity which aids all other charities, will have its annual meeting today at the Church of the Covenant, with Dr. Oliver Hart as speaker. The business session, at which Mrs. Boyd Taylor, the president, will preside, opens at 3 o'clock.

Officers of the guild worked nearly all day yesterday arranging the setting for the meeting. The "decorations" are warm sweaters, socks, mittens, pajamas, underwear, household linen, baby clothes—all new and practical articles—which will be given to local charities for distribution to needy families in the Capital.

Each member of the guild is pledged to contribute at least two new articles of wearing apparel or their equivalent in money. These contributions constitute the dues of the organization. The annual gathering of garments is held each fall by branches all over the country. Members of each branch are usually divided in groups of ten with a captain responsible for the collection of the articles.

The movement to provide new clothing for the needy was started in England by Lady Wolverton, in 1882. At that time, the members made the garments. Now most of them are purchased, although some groups meet regularly to sew for the guild and have attractive and numerous contributions to show for their work at the end of the season.

As soon as the members have had opportunity to see the display of thousands of articles given, they are assembled in bundles for the various charities to which they are assigned to meet definite requests and requirements.

Soroptimists Plan Conference

Washington Soroptimists are making preparations for the conference of the South Atlantic Region of the National Federation of Soroptimist Clubs, which will be held Sunday at the Willard Hotel. The meeting is called for 2.30 p. m. by Miss Edith Reinhart, of Baltimore, who succeeded Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch, of this city, as regional director.

Regional representatives of the clubs in Arlington County, Alexandria, Washington, Montgomery County and Baltimore, as well as other members, will attend the conference and the 6:30 dinner following the business meeting.

Plans for it were discussed yesterday at the regular luncheon meeting of the local club, at which Mrs. Agnes Newman, the president, presided.

The program yesterday was presented by Miss Evelyn Adams, Paul Malter and Marvin Beers, of the Washington Civic Theater, all of whom discussed modern drama in general and the Civic Theater in particular.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Oct. 26.

ABOUT ONCE a year I put on my best black silk, grab my reticule and bumbershoot, and join the firm ranks of the old cronies who are habitual wedding-watchers. Our crowd doesn't match the old biddies of London, who lurk daily about the city churches, snuffle when a pretty bride comes out, and mutter, "Lor' bless you, my ducky!" We do pretty well, though, in our vulgar Yankee way.

ALICE HUGHES

The reason for my stunt the other day lay in the fact that two nice weddings fell softly on one afternoon, and one was elegant and high-toned, the other was simple and sweet. Furthermore, they had a fine Indian summer day for it. So I ups and outs to St. James' Church, on Madison avenue, where I ogled the wedding party of pretty LeBrun Rhinelander, of the old, crusted smaht set of the town, and handsome Bill McKnight, and a gala gang it was. The bride wore an ivory satin princess gown, first sported by her great-grandma LeBrun, and the maids were some of the prettiest belles of the better crowd. Then I rushed to Fifty-second street, or "Swing alley," where the venerable Grandpa Rhinelander gave the reception in his town house, entirely surrounded by joints like "Leon and Eddie's" and "Club 18."

No sooner were these heavy sidewalk duties finished than I put on my best ball-bearing roller skates and scooted down to "The Little Church Around the Corner" for a wedding more my style. A pretty young actress named Elizabeth Love, who hails from Florida, was marrying Eugene Catron, a Denver boy. Ilka Chase, the actress, was matron of honor, and the trouper bride wore a pretty afternoon suit of sheer blue wool and a blue velvet turban. It was simple and lovely, in that romantic and beautiful place, and I snuffled and wiped my eyes nicely where the Rhinelander dideos left me critical and clammy. Sisters, if you have any marrying to do, try our "Little Church." It's a great springboard for the dual life!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Two terrific tragedies struck two of our Broadway best-beloved in the course of one week, and Times Square nearly fell apart from shock. First, Helen Hayes lost the cotton wads which puff out her cheeks when she is the old, old Queen Victoria, and they rolled on the stage. Needless to say, the show went on without a quiver. Following this, gorgeous Zorina, the town darling and ballerina of "I Married an Angel," hurt a toe during one of her dances and fainted right there on the stage. Dozens of infatuated men followed suit. This gave the understudy, Isabelle Kimpal, a chance to be an angel at last. I wish I'd seen the girl in her big moment.

Bertha McCall, N. Y. Case Worker, To Speak Here

Miss Bertha McCall, of New York, director of case work for the National Travelers Aid Association, will address the junior league service committee of the Washington Travelers Aid Society, at a luncheon meeting tomorrow at 12:30 at the 614 E Street Y. W. C. A. Members of the service committee include Mrs. Claude Langlais, Mrs. H. S. Hurlburt, Mrs. Charles S. Baker, Miss Leonie McCoy, Mrs. E. E. Hamilton, Miss Sara Louise Snell, Mrs. E. E. Colladay, Miss Virginia Cooke, and Mrs. Beale Bloomer, chairman.

Other guests at the luncheon include Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, chairman of the board of the Traveler's Aid of Washington, Mrs. E. M. Hanrahan, jr., Mrs. Curt Richter, placement chairmen of the Junior League of Balmore; Miss Cecil Lester Jones, president, and Mrs. Ernest Swift, placement chairman of the Junior League of Washington, and Mrs. Margaret Ford, executive secretary of the Washington Travelers Aid Society.

Bachelor Loves Disillusioned Divorcee Who Disdains All Men; He Asks How to Win Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Being only a mere man and no Solomon, I am at a loss to understand the behavior of a certain young woman of my would-be choice. I am a bachelor of 40, while the lady in question is 34 and a divorcee of six years' standing. To say that she is bitterly disillusioned with men and marriage is putting it mildly. She is not disillusioned; she is radical—and not without justification, if her story is true.

However, I contend that one bad apple doesn't make a peck and for four years I have been trying to convince her that she is wrong in condemning all men because of the failure of one. Repeatedly I have asked her to marry me and start a more complete and happier life—for she is not happy in her single state. I have told her that I would willingly do all in my power to rehabilitate her faith in men and marriage. So far, none of my pleadings has hit the mark.

She admits that she likes me "as a friend," that we have much in common, and that there is no one else in her life who matters, but beyond that point she is adamant in refusing me. She appears to enjoy my company so long as it is kept to an impersonal basis, but whenever I become insistent on the inevitable subject of marriage (which seems to be uppermost in my mind) she flies off the handle for fair and reminds me in no uncertain terms of the times she hass poken her mind in the matter—saying that I ought to be familiar with her attitude by now.

When I tell her I love her and want to make her happy, she replies that men don't know the meaning of the word love; that they will promise anything before marriage and promptly forget their promises after they win the girl. She goes further and says she doesn't know why she wastes time on me, listening to such poppycock, when she knows and I ought to know that it's all a lot of stuff-and-nonesense and not worth the breath it takes to utter it. Her attitude hurts me but I try to see her point, because I know that she did put up a losing fight for happiness with her first husband.

Recently I tried staying away from her for several months, thinking maybe absent treatment would bring her around to my way of thinking, but she didn't give in and I couldn't stay away any longer, so we started seeing each other again. I asked her if she missed me and she said she did at first, but that experience had taught her she could get along without a lot of things and I was no exception. My motto is that a winner never quits and a quitter never wins, so I'm still hoping. But if you can give me any helpful leads in the right direction, I'll appreciate them. Sincerely,

MACK.

Egoists in Conflict

DEAR MACK: The lady in question is a rotten sport. She may have been unjustly dealt with by an unworthy husband, but who in this world hasn't had his faith, hope and trust in the goodness of mankind cuffed and kicked about, time and time again? By her self-righteous, sinned-against, sitting-in-judgment attitude toward men in general, this woman makes a poor bid for the intelligent person's sympathy, respect or admiration. It might be said, of course, that she is more to be pitied than censured, in that her reaction is so definitely that of the burned child who dreads the fire. However, as one who had dreamed of fair play in human relationships, she should be willing to exercise that minimum generosity and sense of justice which would compel her to admit that her current attitude is more of a commentary on her own personal cowardice, lack of judgment and non-resiliency of spirit than it is proof of the alleged unworthiness of man.

I daresay your somewhat doormat-like courtship of her is calculated to aggravate, rather than minimize, her cynical estimate of men. It probably serves to endorse her second-thought theory that the worse a woman treats a man, the better he likes her. But that, of course, depends upon the man. As a bachelor of 40, you probably have lived by a somewhat cynical (in the sense of selfish, suspicious and unyielding) creed yourself, so far as the opposite sex is concerned. And the essence of this woman's appeal for you may have to do with her hard-boiled supposed unattainability—which is an exasperating match for your own erstwhile invulnerable shield of a similar sort. This may be (probably is) a case of two egoists engaged in (unsuspectely) grim, first-hand conflict.

Scratch a cynic and you find, as a rule, a lush sentimentalist gone sour in the changing climate of a prosaic world. Put an egoist under the microscope and you find a person who doubts his own merit; one who has established no legitimate claim to sturdy self-esteem. Take two cynical egoists, shake them up together and you get a mutual reaction that is not to be measured by rules of reason. Such being the case, I cannot tell you how to win the lady's heart. But this I know—unless and until she has done a vast amount of psychological housecleaning on her own initiative, and has separated the wheat of honest feeling from the chaff of pretentiously martyred bitterness, she has, actually, nothing worthwhile of an emotional kind to give, or to be won.

Moreover, it is definitely problematic whether you would consider her one-half so desirable as a mate, if she were a normally vulnerable woman—generous, forthright, forgiving, believing and yielding. I doubt that you would. I think this is a case where the thorns challenge rather more than the rose captivates. But I think that the woman should, for her own sake, enlist psychiatric or psychoanalytic aid in disentangling the knotted cords of feeling which are playing such havoc with her social and emotional life. Unless, of course, her attitude is sheer pose, as it may be.

It is entirely possible that she couldn't care for you if her emotional reflexes were 100 per cent normal; that she knows this; and that it suits her pleasure at this time to play a sort of cat-and-mouse game with you. What you should do, of course, is leave her to stew in her own juices. Whether she is true neurotic or merely bad-tempered brat, her attitude should not be indulged.

Learn Witty Party Toasts

WHAT FUN Bill is! With this clever toast he makes a sparkling "occasion" out of after-dinner coffee:

"May those who love truly be always believed
"And those who deceive us be always deceived."

And you—are you quick on the trigger, too, with witty toasts and jokes? You add zest to the simplest date with such sweetly flattering toasts as this one:

"Here's to parties for two.
They're much nicer
Than parties for four or more,
Especially when the two
Are parties for me and you."

You are fascinating indeed as you look into his eyes just before and after you drink—which is the correct form for toasts.

And at parties take the center of the stage with this:

"Let's drink to the friends who wish us well.
So fill to the brim and toast 'em;
And if there are those who wish us ill—
Why, now's a good time to roast 'em!"

Here's one you give with a twinkling eye:

"May we kiss whom we please
And please whom we kiss."

To add to your reputation as the girl who makes the party go have a new joke up your sleeve. Always a laugh in little Willie; when asked by his mother what he meant by thumbing his nose at his gang, Willie replied, "Don't worry, Ma, they know what I mean."

Sparkle wherever you are! Our 40-page booklet, JOKES AND TOASTS FOR ALL OCCASIONS, has 203 toasts, 116 jokes. Brush up on a few each time for every date and party.

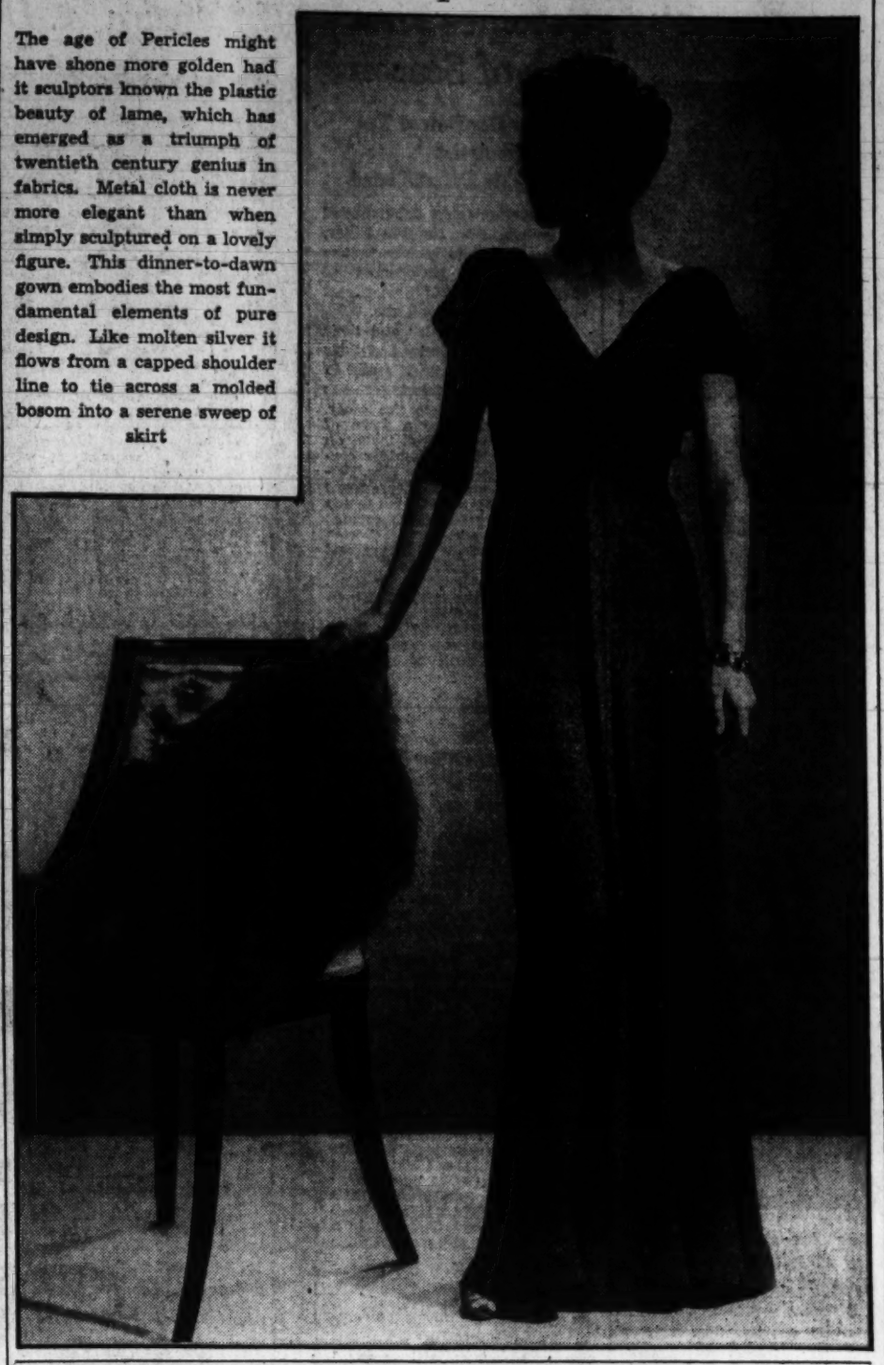
Timeless Sculpture in Lame

The age of Pericles might have shone more golden had it sculptors known the plastic beauty of lame, which has emerged as a triumph of twentieth century genius in fabrics. Metal cloth is never more elegant than when simply sculptured on a lovely figure. This dinner-to-dawn gown embodies the most fundamental elements of pure design. Like molten silver it flows from a capped shoulder line to tie across a molded bosom into a serene sweep of skirt



Fishwife Stance Should Be Avoided

Hand on Hip Taboo Foot Position Counts Americans Careless

By Ida Jean Kain.

SOME YEARS ago one of the European rulers sent for Dr. Bess M. Mensendieck to teach the ladies of his court how to stand and walk like American women . . . "But that," adds this internationally recognized authority on posture, "was before American women began to adopt the fashion of standing and walking like angry fish-wives."

Little as we relish the description, it is an accurate picture of the hand-on-hip stance—a pugilistic attitude which, if you want to win friends, you will not practice.

There are several other things to be remembered about the way you stand. When the feet are parallel, the weight of the body should fall squarely on both feet. When standing with one foot forward, the weight should be fully imposed upon the forward foot, not on the back foot, which makes you look as if you were out of joint and, worse, develops the wrong muscles.

Walking Step by Step

Let's take walking step by step and find out how to do it so gracefully that we can impress royalty. One of the first demands, says Dr. Mensendieck, is to keep the buttocks as tight as possible—which, by the way, helps to reduce the hip measurement—and to walk with the knees as close together as possible without crossing them in the process of taking a step.

Walking is quite complicated, when you try to analyze it. And there is still more to come . . .

As you take a step, the legs should be fairly straight with the movement at the groin so that you move forward and not from side to side. As the foot is moved forward, don't plank it down and put all your weight on it at once or you will have a jerky walk. Weight transference, our authority points out, is extremely important. The weight is borne first on the ball of the foot, then the lower leg, then the thigh. Just about at this point you are propelled forward by the gluteal muscles on the back of the other hip, and the weight of the hip, trunk and chest is brought forward. If you can do it, you will have a smooth lovely walk.

Admires Ina Claire

Which of the stage and screen stars would you suppose Dr. Mensendieck admires most for grace in posture? Ina Claire! The posture of this outstandingly accomplished actress is so striking that even if she did not speak a line people would admire her poise.

It is always helpful to have someone who knows point out our faults—we are so slow to find anything wrong in ourselves. But you can correct your own posture. Study your stance in a full length mirror. The way you look best is more than apt to be correct, and you will notice that you look slimmer when you stand correctly.

Friends In Need

"Honey, what are you going to do tomorrow night?"

"I don't know. Why?"

"Well, I thought I might have over——"

"The-Tinkles! I knew that was coming!"

"Well, we've got to have them some time and I thought——"

"Why have we got to have them? Just tell me that."

"Well, they've been so nice to us and they're such lovely people and——"

"Say, if I have to go through another evening listening to Horace Tinkle——"

"Well, but Lucia is so lovely."

"Lucia's an ass!"

"Oh well, if you're going to use profanity——"

"I'm sorry. Anyway, I halfway invited Bert Blink and Sadie to come over some evening——"

"You don't mean you want to have those Blinks again!"

"Why not? Bert's a good fellow——"

"I think he's simply unspeakable. And if ever I saw an ordinary woman——"

"Now there's no use in being catty."

"I'm not in the least catty. I'm simply stating the truth. I've nothing personally against Sadie. She's a good woman in her way, but——"

"Well, Bert's always been such a good friend of mine——"

"That's just the trouble. He's been too good a friend. I can't see why you always want to run around with people who do nothing but drink and carouse——"

"Say, Bert means all right——"

"Of course. He's all right in his way, but you'll never get anywhere if you associate with that type."

"Oh well, leave the Blinks out of it then. But I tell you one thing—I'm not going to be bored with those Tinkles."

"Well, we might have the Pratters—if you and Tom would just keep off of politics."

"Say, I wouldn't let Tom Pratter come in my house again! I never in my life saw anyone with such crazy, half-baked, crackpot, asinine notions! I believe the man's a Communist——"

"Wait! Don't get so excited. Well, who do you want to have?"

"Why have we got to have anybody?"

"Simply because we'll never go anywhere if we don't. Besides, all the psychologists and everybody says you've got to mix."

"Oh well, then, why don't you have the Smirks?"

"I knew that was coming!"

"What do you mean?"

"I knew you'd get around sooner or later to suggesting Dot Smirk."

"You're crazy. I like Bill."

"Say, I've got eyes."

"I don't know what you're talking about I don't see why you women are all so down on Dot There's nothing the matter with her. She's a good scout."

"Of course. Except when she's helping someone else's husband get the ice cubes out of the refrigerator. Oh say, why don't we have the Waddly's?"

"That woman!"

"Why, Harriet Waddly is a perfectly lovely woman."

"Well, I don't hear about her guppies through another evening."

"Well we've got to have somebody. We can't live like this. If I could just think of someone who—say, what about the Wrenns?"

"The Wrenns? . . . Oh, I don't know . . . He's a nice enough fellow I guess."

"And she's sort of sweet, don't you think?"

"I guess so . . . I just don't remember."

"Well, at least they're genteel . . . and there's really nothing wrong with them . . . That's it! I'll telephone the Wreens!"

Clock Should Be Decorative Part Of Every Room

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

IT'S TIME we took a little time to think about time. About clocks, to get right down to brass tacks.

I've been digging around trying to find out just what types of good-looking clocks there are available—clocks worthy of being a decorative focal point in a room. Because I'm for utility with decoration whenever possible—so why isn't a handsome clock a better idea than a candlestick for a mantel piece or chest . . . certainly it serves a more useful purpose.

The most interesting modern clocks I've found are the grandfather clocks for halls—copies of fine old ones. An imposing clock like that would practically furnish the average hall. There are reproductions of old banjo clocks, too, that would do exciting things to most any wall. They are as authentic in design as they are accurate in timekeeping.

The smaller clocks that I've seen and liked included one in an antique silver finish and in oblong shape. The clock is at one end, while a hand-chased design of deer and trees at the other end has a certain austere formality about it—it suggests itself for use on a mantel or some other important place.

Many Parties Honor Miss Marlatt, Mr. Reid

Alice Griffith Hostess
Huesteds Attend
Mr. Marsh Plans Fete

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

Although the wedding on Saturday of Miss Dorothy Marlatt and James Edward Reid is to be a quiet affair, witnessed only by relatives and a few close friends, parties for the couple have already begun to enliven the social whirl.

One of the first parties on their pre-nuptial calendar was a dinner last evening given by Mrs. Alice Torrey Griffith at the Army-Navy Country Club. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Huested, of Tenafly, N. J., brother-in-law and sister of the bride-elect, and the five girls—all former classmates at Vassar College—who will be bridesmaids. Two in the group, Miss Bambie McKenna and Miss Fontaine Flannery, are of Washington. The other three—Miss Julia Ellen Kenny, of Pittsfield, Mass.; Miss Rosemary Heenan, of Detroit, and Miss Mary Nussbaum, of New Rochelle, N. Y.—arrived yesterday and will be here until early next week.

Mrs. Huested, the former Miss Constance Marlatt, will be her sister's matron of honor.

Dinner Tonight at Chevy Chase Club

Miss Ruth Tuckerman and Miss Bambie McKenna will be joint hostesses at a dinner at the Chevy Chase Club tonight in compliment to Miss Marlatt and Mr. Reid, and James B. Marsh will entertain this afternoon for them at a cocktail party in his home on Glenbrook road.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles Lester Marlatt, parents of the bride-elect, will give a dinner tomorrow evening at the Mayflower for members of the wedding party, who will go there following the bridal rehearsal. On Saturday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Huested will round out the series of fetes with a dinner at the Chevy Chase Club for the attendants and members of the family.

One of a trio of popular sisters, Miss Marlatt made her debut here in 1934 and is widely known both in Washington and Virginia. She is a granddaughter of Mrs. Alexander Mackay-Smith and the late Bishop Mackay-Smith, who for many years was rector of St. John's Church here, and later became bishop coadjutor of Pennsylvania.

To Take Apartment At the Westchester

Mrs. Karl Boy-Ed and Mrs. William Bell Watkins, both residents of Virginia, are Miss Marlatt's aunts. Her father, a noted scientist, formerly was chief of the Bureau of Entomology and chief of the Plant Quarantine Board of the Department of Agriculture.

Miss Marlatt and her parents recently returned to Washington from Seal Harbor, Me., where they have a summer home.

Mr. Reid, who is the son of Mrs. J. E. Reid, of Rochester, Minn., is an alumnus of the University of Minnesota and Stamford School of Law at Palo Alto, Calif., and is now connected with the Department of Justice. He and his bride will make their home at the Westchester Apartments.

Memphis Debut Slated

Washington's first debutante of the season, Miss Houston Niller, was presented to society yesterday against a background of chrysanthemums and roses, almost enough to fill a greenhouse.

Mr. and Mrs. Niller and their pretty daughter received at their Georgetown home on N street in one of the two drawing rooms which open one into the other. The debutante wore a gown of pale blue slipper satin, made on period lines, and a shoulder corsage of white orchids. Mrs. Niller had chosen a floor-length gown of purple crepe, with which she wore two enormous orchids of a deeper shade.

So many flowers had been sent by Miss Niller's friends that one entire wall was banked with them. There was chrysanthemums in shades of russet and yellow, vases of American beauty roses, and, in addition, numerous corsages which the debutante received but could not wear.

Bevy of Debs Assist at Tea

Assisting Miss Niller during the afternoon were Miss Betty Meyers, Miss Elise Hill, Miss Nancy Hoskinson, and Miss Betty Fischer, all Washington debutantes of the season; Miss Doris Becker, of Warrenton, who will be presented at a large dance to be given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Becker, at the North Wales Club on Thanksgiving night, and Miss Kitty Bradley, who will make her bow in Baltimore.

Among the friends who dropped in during the afternoon were Mr. and Mrs. Becker; the Naval Attache of the German Embassy, and Frau Witthoeft-Emden, the latter wearing a handsome brown coat with fur all the way down the front; Wolcott Waggaman, Dr. Kurt Hetzel with Mrs. Hetzel, whose small hat of several colors was very becoming; Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Block, the latter in a black frock trimmed with gold, with a Cossack hat; Baron and Baroness von Pagenhardt, she in pale blue with a fox scarf, and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Shepard, Mrs. Shepard in a blue velvet suit and a smart little hat of silver fox.

Also to Bow In Memphis

George Williams, who was among the guests, will entertain at a tea for Miss Niller and another Capital debutante, Miss Peggy Townsend, daughter of Mrs. Effingham Townsend, next Tuesday in his apartment on Twentieth street.

Among members of the younger set present yesterday were Miss Austine McDonnell, who recently signed a movie contract; Miss Jane Eustis, Miss Carolyn Thrie Pou Wadden, and John Merriam.

Miss Niller will go to Memphis, Tenn., in November and will be presented with other debutantes of that city at a ball at the country club November 15. Her mother, the former Miss Houston Westbrook, also made her debut in Memphis.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Cox Becomes Bride Of Edward A. Dent, Jr., at Sacred Heart

A bride the sun shone on is Mrs. Edward Addison Dent, jr., the former Miss Mary Elizabeth Cox, whose marriage took place yesterday, a perfect Indian summer morning, at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Daniel Joseph Cox, of 1423 Shepherd street, and Mr. Dent is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Addison Dent, of 4701 Connecticut avenue. The Rev. Thomas A. Rankin officiated at the ceremony, which took place at 11 o'clock in a setting of white chrysanthemums and palms.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Daniel Joseph Cox, jr. She wore a gown of antique satin with a deep lace yoke and a long fishtail train. Her tulle veil, which had a panel of pointed d'Alencon lace, fell from a cap of the same lace and she carried a shower bouquet of gardenias and lillies of the valley.

Sister Is Maid of Honor

Miss Margaret Devlin Cox., the bride's sister, served as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Mrs. Charles A. Beard, jr., sister of the bridegroom; Mrs. Edwin J. Madill, and the Misses Eleanor Clark and Frances Fitzgerald.

Miss Cox wore a period frock of blue taffeta with a belt of Spanish velvet and a wide hooped skirt made in three ruffled tiers on the sides with straight panels in front and back. A little ostrich feather hat of Spanish raisin completed her costume and she carried a bouquet of Johanna Hill roses and small chrysanthemums.

The bridesmaids were dressed in the same style, only their frocks were in Spanish raisin color with belts of blue velvet, and they wore blue ostrich feather hats. They carried bouquets like that of the maid of honor.

Nicholas Shea Is Best Man

Nicholas H. Shea was best man, and the ushers were Charles A. Beard, jr., Edwin J. Madill, Andrew V. Mahoney and Richard P. Whitty, jr.

A reception at the home of Mrs. Cox, which was decorated with ferns and smilax, followed the ceremony. Mrs. Cox wore a wine crepe dress trimmed with gold cloth and a corsage of yellow orchids. Mrs. Dent was attired in royal blue crepe, with a similar corsage.

Adah Horn Plights Troth to Griff Berkeley

Kin of Col. Howell
Wedding in January

Of interest to Washington is the announcement of Miss Adah Howell Horn's engagement to Griff Glover Berkeley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison C. Berkeley, of Dayton, Ohio.

The betrothal is made known by the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. Tiemann N. Horn, of 1130 Park avenue, New York City. Miss Horn is the daughter of the late Col. Horn and a granddaughter of Col. D. L. Howell, retired, of Washington, who married Miss Julia Beauregard Tyler, of St. Louis. She is a great-niece of James Monroe Tyler, of St. Louis, and a niece of James B. Howell, of San Francisco. She attended the Ethel Walker School and was graduated from the Spence School last May.

Mr. Berkeley was graduated from the University of Virginia in 1935 and received his law degree there in 1937. He is a member of Phi Kappa Psi and Phi Delta Phi fraternities and is now connected with the law firm of Paul D. Cravath in New York. The wedding will take place in January.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

Culture notes:

The intelligensia having claimed the movie "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" for its very own, now the artistic world is following suit. Many members of Capital society have received invitations to the first national showing and sale of the original water colors from Walt Disney's screen success, to begin on Sunday at the Phillips Memorial Gallery. The pictures are made on celluloid and were used in the filming of "Snow." Some of them are priced as high as $35.

DUDLEY HARMON.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 23, will be a large day for the debutantes. Three of the most popular—Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor, Maisie Howard and Ann Wilkinson—will be honored at a dinner to be given by Mrs. Frederic L. Chapin and her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Selden Chapin. The dinner will precede the dance which Miss Wilkinson's parents are giving for her that night and will follow the tea at which Miss Howard will be presented by her father and mother, Capt. and Mrs. Herbert Howard.

GUESTS at Diana Rowland's cocktail party yesterday just missed meeting Mr. and Mrs. Gene Tunney, who have been staying with Mrs. Tunney's aunt and Diana's mother, Mrs. Henry C. Rowland. The visitors left on a 4 o'clock plane, as they had a theater date in New York last night. Mr. Tunney has been here on business.

The hostess has recently returned to Washington for the winter after several months of exciting adventures. She was in Austria when it was anschlussed, and arrived at her mother's home off the coast of Maine just in time for the hurricane.

SEEN HERE AND THERE at the party: Marian Shouse, in riding clothes, chatting with William McComb . . . Her sister, Elizabeth, looking very femme fatale in black with a tiny hat with a feather . . . Laura Tuckerman in a black suit and hat with a veil, sharing a chair with Nancy Mann, who looked sporting in a bright yellow jacket, black skirt, and becoming hat with a quill . . . Frau Herbert Scholz, in a most becoming woolen suit of bright red . . . Charles Ritchie and Marquis Capomazza, other members of the Diplomatic Corps, the latter just out of the hospital . . . New Schaeffer and James Parks, early arrivals . . . Florence Harris in a black frock with sable scarf and a very stunning hat with lots of veil . . . Debutante Anne Moorhead, who poured tea . . . Elsie Ekengren, Stephen Spingarn, Eugene O'Dunne, Betty Sabine, Stellita Stapleton, Dr. Frank Govern, Lisette Riggs, Michael Budny, and a few others.

DIANA ROWLAND, whose father was a well-known writer, has inherited some of his talent. Her first attempt at fiction, a short story, she sold immediately, and has never had a rejection slip since. But she says that writing is such a terrific chore for her that she can only get around to it once or twice a year.

THERE WERE no casualties at the opening for the season last night of the Wednesday Evening Square Dancing class, though the floor of the Holton Arms gym has been given such a dazzling polish that all the guests were warned to wear sneakers.

John Drier, who frequently goes to country dances to pick up new ideas, called the figures as usual last night, and everybody whipped spryly through such numbers as "Little Brown Jug," "Ocean Wave," "Grapevine Twist," and the Virginia reel.

Theodore Dominick had a few people in for supper beforehand, and among those at the dance were Helen Davis, Barbara Wright, Jane Watson, Rachel Reinstein, Barbara Donald, Frederick Nichols, Mannix Walker, Larry Knapp, Henry Whitney and Neil Connor.

Italian Envoy Arrives; De Withs To Be Feted

Fulvio Suvich, Italian Ambassador, arrived in Washington last evening, having landed in New York yesterday on the Rex. He was met by Prince Marcello del Drago, first secretary of the embassy.

The retiring Netherlands Minister and Mme. van Haersma de With returned yesterday for a brief stay before sailing November 2 for Berlin, where the Minister will represent his country. They are staying with Mr. and Mrs. F. Lammot Belin before departing. Mr. and Mrs. Belin will give a reception for them on Saturday afternoon at Evermay, the Belins' home in Georgetown.

Mme. Orlicz-Dreszer Returns to Washington

Mme. Gustav Orlicz-Dreszer, widow of Poland's air minister, has returned to Washington to visit her mother, Mrs. E. G. Neal, and to be with her two daughters, Margaret and Elvina. She returned from Europe last week on the Batory and came on to Washington after a brief stay in New York.

Leaving here last spring, Mme. Orlicz-Dreszer went to Poland to spend the summer. She expects to remain in Washington two or three months.

Blisses Honor Rumbolds at Dinner At Dumbarton Oaks

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss entertained at a dinner last evening at Dumbarton Oaks, their Georgetown estate, in honor of Sir Horace and Lady Rumbold, of England. Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol will honor them with a dinner tomorrow evening.

Sir Horace and Lady Rumbold, who have been visiting their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Rumbold, have postponed their departure and expect to be here until about November 12, when they will sail for England on the Normandie. Mr. Rumbold is Attache of the British Embassy.

Miss Jacob to Open Painting Exhibit Sunday

Miss Gertrude Jacob has issued invitations for the opening on Sunday of an exhibition of her paintings in the Little Gallery, at Georgetown. Tea will be served from 5 until 8.

The exhibition will continue through Saturday, November 19.

Murphys Have Guest

Mr. and Mrs. George Murphy, of the Kenesaw Apartments, have as their guest Mrs. Felix Edwards, of Sherman, Tex., who will be here for some time.

Alison Ward Engaged To Dr. C. L. Burdick

Of interest to Washington is the announcement by Mr. and Mrs. Christopher L. Ward, of Wilmington, Del., of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Alison Ward, to Dr. C. Lalor Burdick, son of Mrs. Anna Lalor Burdick, of Washington.

Miss Ward, whose father, a lawyer and author, served as chairman of the Delaware Swedish Tercentenary Commission, was graduated from the Westover School, in Middlebury, Conn. She is a member of the Wilmington Junior League.

Dr. Burdick is a member of the staff of E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co. and is secretary of the Lalor Foundation. His previous wife, the former Miss Kathleen Condon, of Snads Ponit, Long Island, died in 1935.

Catherine McKane, J. F. Walker Engaged

Mrs. James McKane has announced the engagement of her daughter, Catherine McKane, to John F. Walker, son of Maj. Vivian Kalker, of Washington.

The bride-elect, who attended Mount Vernon Seminary, made her debut here in 1935. Mr. Walker has been a student at Georgetown University School of Foreign Service. No date has been set for the wedding.

Cornings Depart

Commander and Mrs. Percy Corning will leave today by motor for their home, at Charleston, S. C., after spending a week with friends in Washington. Commander Corning, formerly stationed here, is now at the Charleston Navy Yard.

Gardner Lloyds At the Shoreham

Mr. and Mrs. Gardner R. Lloyd are at the Shoreham on their wedding trip, and will be in the Capital for several days longer. Mr. Lloyd lived in Washington until 10 years ago. His two grandfathers, the late Representative James T. Lloyd and the late Representative Washington Gardner, each served in Congress for 20 years, the former being a Democrat from Missouri, the latter a Republican from Michigan. Mr. Lloyd's father, Thomas Leslie Lloyd, is a Washington attorney.

The newlyweds, who were married October 15 at the Little Church Around the Corner in New York, went first to Bermuda, and then spent a few days at Greenwich, Conn., visiting Mr. Lloyd's mother, Mrs. Roswell Flower Vail. The bride is the former Miss Elizabeth McDougal, of Albion, Mich., and the couple will make their home in Albion, where Mr. Lloyd has been living recently.

D. A. R. National Historical Magazine Changes Are Rumored After Officials Meet

Meeting Secret
No Comment Is Made
Mrs. Keyes Editor
Angles Discussed

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Rumors of changes in policy affecting the National Historical Magazine of the Daughters of the American Revolution, followed the meeting of the executive board of the organization held at Memorial Continental Hall yesterday. The session was carefully guarded in secrecy and no formal announcement was forthcoming as to what action would be taken.

The magazine for the past year has been under the editorship of Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, noted author, who has brought into its list of contributors, writers of national repute, enlarged its scope and raised its literary standard, attracting wide attention. Whereas, there is general acknowledgment of the value of these changes, it is understood that there has been objection in some quarters to the increased cost of publication they involve.

The board meeting preceded a reception for 1,000 guests given last night at the Mayflower by the District of Columbia chapters in honor of Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general, and her cabinet.

There was no hint in the swish of satin and velvet of the day of hard work and heated discussion of business, which preceded the party. The affair had all the brilliance of the functions given each spring in connection with the meeting of the Continental Congress, lacking only the countless bouquets of flowers carried by the officers.

President General Wears White Velvet

Mrs. Robert, who was gowned in white velvet and wore a corsage of white orchids, carried white chrysanthemums which were the gift of the District D. A. R., and Miss Lillian Chenoweth, the State regent, who wore black taffeta, made on bouffant lines, carried bronze and deep yellow chrysanthemums. They were the only two who carried flowers.

Introductions were made by Mrs. George L. Hart, past regent of Elizabeth Jackson Chapter, and Lieut. Chester Hammond, U. S. A. Members of the president general's cabinet also in the receiving line were Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, vice president general for the District; Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, honorary vice president general; Mrs. Loren Edgar Rex, chaplain general; Mrs. John S. Heaume, recording secretary general; Mrs. William Kennedy Herrin, jr., corresponding secretary general; Mrs. George D. Schermerhorn, organizing secretary general; Mrs. Page Schwarzwaelder, treasurer general; Mrs. Frank Leon Nason, registrar general; Mrs. Leland Stanford Duxbury, historian general; Mrs. Vinton Earl Sisson, librarian general; Mrs. Willard Steele, curator general, and Mrs. Joseph T. Young, reporter general to the Smithsonian Institution.

Mrs. Barton Stone Embry, chairman of the reception committee, wore a black gown with a corsage of Talisman roses. Mrs. Jean J. Labat was in charge of the table, and Mrs. Louis Marshal Hicks, of the music.

The table was arranged down the center of the ballroom, lighted with candles in silver candelabra and decorated with a large center bouquet of yellow and bronze chrysanthemums. Opposite it, was a bust of George Washington, beneath an arch of flowers and red, white and blue light. A bank of palms formed a background for the receiving line at the east end of the room, and at the other end, the Navy Orchestra played.

Past National Officers Serve Refreshments

Assisting at the table were past national officers of the D. A. R. in Washington. They included Mrs. John M. Beavers, Mrs. Delos A. Blodgett, Mrs. Aius M. Brumbaugh, Mrs. David D. Caldwell, Miss Helen Harmon, Mrs. J. W. Holcombe, Miss Aileen E. Solomons, Mrs. Lyman B. Swormstedt, Mrs. Harry Colfax Grove, Mrs. George Madden Grimes, Mrs. William M. Hardy, Mrs. Harry C. Oberholser, Mrs. Alexander H. Bell, Dr. Ella R. Fales, Mrs. Arthur C. Houghton, Mrs. Carolton C. Hoffner, Mrs. Minnie Ashbrook Tull, Mrs. Roger Williams, Mrs. Tonis Holzberg and Mrs. Edwin P. Andrus.

There was a scattering of men in the gathering, among them, Frank B. Steele, secretary general of the Sons of the American Revolution, and Wade H. Ellis, who made a radio address Tuesday on a broadcast sponsored by the D. A. R.

Among the national chairmen who attended were Mrs. Edward G. Mead, of Oxford, Ohio; Mrs. Carl S. Hoskins, Lisbon, N. H.; Miss Eleanor Greenwood, Pepperell, Mass.; Miss Claudine Hutter, Lynchburg, Va.; Mrs. Marie Lomas Bockoven, of the District; Mrs. Frank B. Whitlock, of New Brunswick, N. J.; Mrs. Henry Bourne Joy, of Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich., and Miss Jean Stephenson, of the District.

Among the State regents present were Mrs. Clarence R. Arkinson, Vermont; Mrs. Elly R. Barnes, Alabama; Mrs. Ephraim Brevard, Florida; Mrs. Samuel J. Campbell, Illinois; Mrs. Eugene N. Davis, North Carolina; Mrs. James F. Donahue, Ohio; Miss Ethel L. Hersey, Massachusetts; Mrs. William Hightower, Georgia; Mrs. Frederick P. Latimer, Connecticut; Mrs. Charles H. Miller, Arkansas; Mrs. Fred G. Morgan, Maine; Miss Marion Mullins, Texas; Mrs. Harry Narey, Iowa; Mrs. A. J. Rahn, Montana; Mrs. Harper D. Sheppard, Pennsylvania; Mrs. Helen K. Stuart, Wisconsin; Mrs. William H. Schlosser, Indiana; Mrs. David E. French, West Virginia; Mrs. John T. Gardner, Rhode Island; Mrs. W. C. Geagley, Michigan; Mrs. J. W. Kayser, Oklahoma; Mrs. Ralph Crockett, New Hampshire; Mrs. Carbon Gillespie, Colorado; Mrs. James H. Scott, Delaware; Miss Marion Seelye, Kansas; Mrs. Wilbur B. Blakeslee, Maryland; Mrs. George Duff, New York; Mrs. Walter M. Barry, Tennessee, Mrs. Joseph G. Forney, Pennsylvania, and Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, Virginia.

500 Attend Club Card Party In Montgomery

Held at Ickes Home
Benefits School Loans
1,200 Sandwiches Eaten

Approximately 500 members of the Montgomery County Federation of Women's Clubs and their guests were present yesterday afternoon for the benefit card party given for the student loan fund. Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, although she was outof the city, made her home at Olney available for the affair. There were so many guests Mrs. Josiah Jones, a neighbor, offered her home, the Briars, for the overflow—and 100 played there.

Mrs. B. Peyton Whalen, president of the federation, who now resides in Georgetown, with Mrs. P. R. Baldridge, of the Newcomb Club, of Bethesda, and Mrs. A. R. Spare, of Rockville, made the 1,200 sandwiches which were served to the guests. The refreshments also included coffee and home-made mints for which Mrs. Gordon Kline, of the Newcomb Club, was responsible.

Mrs. Whalen, at the hour of the party, gave no sign of having spent the morning in such preparations, appearing in a becoming teal blue gown with hat to match. Mrs. A. Brookhouse Foster, of the Newcomb Club, chairman of the student loan fund, who was also general chairman of arrangements fore the benefit, wore a smart black costume.

The Ickes home, the front of which is a model of Mount Vernon, was an artistic setting for bridge. Tables were arranged in the hall, with its gold and gray walls; in the living room, where the color scheme is deep red and gray, on the landings of the double stairway, and upstairs in the hall and bedrooms.

All of the federation officers were present including Mrs. Whalen, Mrs. Westus Wilcox, of Gaithersburg, and Mrs. Foster, vice presidents; Mrs. Henry Milburn, of Kensington, recording secretary; Mrs. Speare, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Sydney H. Karr, of Bethesda, treasurer, and Mrs. Donald DeLashmutt, of Rockville, parliamentarian.

Assisting Mrs. Foster were Mrs. Grace L. Ryan, of the Woman's Club, of Kensington; Mrs. P. R. Baldridge, of the Newcomb Club; Mrs. William Ross DeLett, of the Newcomb Club; Mrs. DeLashmutt and Mrs. Allison Chapin, of the Rockville Woman's Club; Mrs. Karr, Mrs. Edward L. Morrison, president of the Bethesda Woman's Club; Mrs. James L. Thomas, Civic Study Club, of Garret Park; Mrs. Harry S. Elkins, of the Woman's Club, of Woodside; Mrs. Mahlon Kirk, of the Wednesday Club, of Sandy Spring; Mrs. Speare, Rockville Woman's Club; Mrs. Ross Fryer and Mrs. Roger Whiteford, of the Woman's Club, of Chevy Chase; Mrs. Francis C. Maley and Mrs. Gordon M. Kline, of Bethesda, and Mrs. Eugene Scott, of Bethesda.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne.

THE SUMMER-AUTUMN NUMBER of Blue Moon, poetry magazine edited by Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, president of the D. C. branch of the National League of American Pen Women, and Mattie Richards Tyler, also member of the branch, has just been issued.

It includes among the many poems one by Mattie Richards Tyler, another by Bess Heath Olmstead, formerly of the District and now a resident of New Jersey, and others by Pepita Crouse, Charles Edward Russell, Mrs. Larz Anderson, Ruth Mooers, Nellie D. Bordeaux, Corrine Davis, Margaret Blandy Mitchell, Thora Hinshaw Seaton, Mary Owen, Anne Arnold Chase, Bertha Kramer, Anna Priestly, Catharine Robinson, Pauline Ogden, all of the District.

Poets from all parts of the country are among the contributors.

NEARLY 50 TABLES were reserved for the afternoon and evening bridge party yesterday at the Women's City Club, given with Halloween trimmings under the chairmanship of Miss Elva McNamara, ways and means chairman. Tomorrow at 8 p. m. there will be an entertainment by the drama group. Participating in the program will be Miss Thelma Schmitt, Mrs. Nancy Walker, Miss Laura Snyder and Mrs. Ruth Snodgrass.

Mrs. Dorothy Hulsizer, of Washington, is chairman of the Wilson College alumnae committee which is in charge of arranging the alumnae college to be conducted for three days next spring at commencement time. She goes tomorrow to Chambersburg, Pa., where the college is located, for a meeting of the alumnae council, composed of representatives from each alumnae club and each graduating class, to further plans for the project.

Similar alumnae colleges are held at Smith, Wellesley and Randolph-Macon, with graduates of other years coming back to avail themselves of the facilities of the institution and lectures by the faculty.

THE FIRST of a series of dances to benefit the scholarship fund of Greenacres School, in Silver Spring, will be given November 5 at the school.

Patrons and patronesses who will entertain at dinner parties and take their guests to the affair include Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Frank, Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Kelley, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Chase, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Straus, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Foreman, Miss Ann Dahlman, Miss Faith Williams, Mr. and Mrs. John Summerscale, Frank Lorimer and Mr. and Mrs. William Stern 3d.

THE CHEVY CHASE CHAPTER of the Y. W. C. A. will have its annual luncheon and sale Tuesday from noon to 2:30 in the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church. This is one of two money-making affairs sponsored by the chapter during the year and everybody participates.

Some of the members are taking parties of guests, among them Mrs. William Scott Stein, who is entertaining her bridge club. Mrs. Irving Root is in charge of reservations for the large groups.

Mrs. R. L. Jarnagin, president of the chapter—which is the largest connected with the local Y. W. C. A.—is in charge of arrangements for the luncheon. There will be a candy table, in charge of Mrs. Hubert R. Snoke and Miss Louise Elker; delicatessen, with Mrs. Harold E. Doyle in charge; a table of cakes and pies, Mrs. Marvin Farrington and Mrs. George W. Lewis; a white elephant table, Mrs. Fred Franke, and gifts in charge of Mrs. Dwight Cooke.

TOMORROW EVENING the New York State Society will hold its Halloween dance in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. This is the first dance of the society for the season. Reservations are in charge of James E. Black, president; William A. Carr, Walter Sutcliffe and Samuel Gompers, vice presidents; C. M. Little, treasurer, and Loraine K. Rogers, secretary.

Peter Discovers His Plight

There's nothing wherewith to compare
The numbing power of despair.
—Old Mother Nature.

That saying of Old Mother Nature's is true. Despair does more than numb—it paralyzes. This is why the children of Old Mother Nature seldom despair, no matter how hopeless may seem their situation. You see it is equally true that no matter how hopeless a situation may appear there is always, until the very end, the possibility that something may happen to bring relief. So the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows do not yield to despair even when things look hopeless for them, for if they did there would and could be no hope.

Peter Rabbit had just discovered that he was in a rather dreadful plight. It was his own fault. He knew this. Oh yes, he knew this. He would have been the first to admit it. He had been foolish in the extreme and to the foolishness he had added carelessness. He had been foolish to stop even for a minute way out there in the middle of the Green Meadows so far from the dear Old Briar-patch and then he had been careless in that he had forgotten to keep as close a watch as he should have.

It was all on account of his stomach. Yes, sir, Peter's present plight was all on account of his stomach. How queer it is that a stomach can be the cause of so much real trouble in this world or of so much pleasure. Peter, on his way home from the Green Forest, had happened across some clover that was young and tender and sweet, and young and tender and sweet clover was not easily found at this season of the year. So Peter had stopped, intending to stay only for a bite or two. But that clover was so young and tender and was so sweet that bite followed bite and he quite forgot where he was.

Perhaps you can guess what a shock was Peter's when at last he did sit up for a look around and discovered Mrs. Reddy Fox sneaking through the grass to try and surprise him. Peter didn't stop for so much as one more bite. He turned and started for the dear Old Briar-patch, lipperty-lipperty-lip. He knew he would have to run his fastest to get there before Mrs. Reddy could catch him. It was a race for life and he knew it. But it wasn't Peter's first race for life. Goodness no! He had run so many races for life that he long ago had forgotten the number. He was sure that he could reach the Old Briar-patch first, and that was all that was necessary.

Then Peter, making an unusually high jump, looked straight ahead and made a discovery. Just to make sure about it he jumped high again. There was no doubt now. You have heard of people between two fires, but in so far as he was concerned he was in as bad a position as if he had been. He was between two Foxes and one of them was between him and the dear Old Briar-patch.

Now how could Peter have been in a worse position, aside from being actually caught? I ask you. Wouldn't you think it would have filled him with despair? It didn't. No, sir, it didn't. He knew that to allow despair to take possession of him would be to give up hope. If he gave up hope he might as well just sit down right where he was and allow one of those Foxes to catch him. One of them might catch him anyway. Very likely one of them would. But it wouldn't until he had done the very best he could to escape.

He was frightened. He was just about as frightened as he could be. He was fully aware of just how desperate his plight was. To keep on would be to run straight into the jaws of Reddy Fox. To turn back would be to run straight into the jaws of Mrs. Reddy. Peter had no intention of running into the jaws of anybody. The jaws that caught him would have to run after him.

Peter didn't stop for so much as one more bite

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

This month's most fantastic tale, but from the inner temple, is that some of the brain trusters would like to slip Harry Hopkins into the Cabinet in Dan Roper's place. The idea would be to show that Mr. Hopkins could perform as well for business as he has for his WPA cohorts.

Elmer Andrews ... Min. and Max. ripe for 1940.

An alternative would be to draft him to throw the national defense program into high. Either job might make him

* * * *

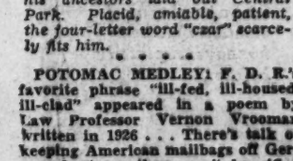
'Taint reasonable to believe that a man who sometimes has a dozen callers in his bedroom during breakfast could ever be lonely, but that's the latest breeze from the White House. With Mrs. Roosevelt away too, the President misses Jimmy Roosevelt tremendously. Though Jimmy "sirs" his dad quite a bit, they're great pals, partly because the other New Dealers are more or less in awe of him.

Come to think, the last man in the White House who wasn't lonely was Warren G. Harding.

* * * *

Just to show how eager some people are to worry, I cite the case of tired business men who are worrying about the Monopoly Inquiry. It's a leisurely sort of inquiry, and even if it finds out anything, nothing will be done about it till 1940. Then Congress will have a whack at it; and you know Congress. (If they began letters to their Congressmen now, maybe they wouldn't have to telegraph in 1940.)

And maybe the dish they're cooking won't taste so badly.



"—Hugh Johnson's opposite"

That burning zeal among brilliant young men to go to Washington and help Roosevelt, which flared so high four or five years ago, is dying down, perhaps because there are fewer vacancies. Bill Douglas, the brilliant young chairman of SEC, is still looking for one or two $30,000 men to help investigate insurance companies and other things at $5,000 or $6,000 a year.

"Just as young men in other countries must serve in the army a year or two," says Douglas, "every man of great talent ought to be willing to serve our country for two years before he tries to get rich."

PAJAMA PORTRAITS

WAGES & HOURS CZAR.

In temperament Elmer Andrews is almost the direct opposite of Hugh Johnson, though this week he has tackled a job not unlike the general's defunct NRA. He is not a desk pounder, a yeller nor a name caller. These luxuries he leaves to the men across his desk, as he did last week to the textile and garment nabobs. When they have blown off steam and grown weary, he tells them some funny stories, talks to them softly and reasonably, but firmly. His favorite story is about the small boy who studied the weather data daily, and explained to his dad that he was watching the race between Min. and Max. "Min. never catches up with Max.," he says, apropos of wages and hours. He is an indifferent golfer, a glutton for motoring, an omnivorous newspaper reader. An engineer from Rensellaer Polytech, he laid out the Queens (N. Y.) boulevards, as his ancestors laid out Central Park. Placid, amiable, patient, the four-letter word "czar" scarcely fits him.

POTOMAC MEDLEY: F. D. R.'s favorite phrase "ill-fed, ill-housed, ill-clad" appeared in a poem by Law Professor Vernon Vrooman written in 1926 . . . There's talk of keeping American mailbags off German boats so they won't be rifled . . . Whisper to Constance Jordan: Many who would vote against war in a referendum feel we couldn't keep out of any world war—even after we had voted against it.

In the low-paid American foreign service there's a tale (ascribed to urbane Jimmy Dunn, adviser to Cordell Hull) that a depression is recognizable because then adorable girls marry young American attaches for their salaries.

The Briton who told me the French pun on Chamberlain's name got it wrong, quite naturally. It isn't "J'aime Hitler;" it's "J'aime Berlin" (I love Berlin) which is as near as many Frenchmen get to pronouncing Neville's name.

CAPITAL CAVIAR: Quite incognito, a couple representing Herr Hitler will see a dictator's purge trial in "Judgment Day," by the Civic Theater, composed mostly of American Government people. . . . An eminent diplomat from over there has been suggesting that the solution of the non-Aryan problem is not to free the Arabs to admit them to Palestine, but to persuade Hitler the Humanitarian not to expel them. . . . Sounds simple. . . . Some Government workers squeeze in three holes of golf during their lunch time.

D. C. Heads Kill Armory Fund Again

Cut From Budget U. S. Weighing Plan President Favors It To Cost $3,000,000

A District National Guard Armory, for the second time in as many months, was passed up by the District Commissioners, who disclosed yesterday they had eliminated an item of $2,750,000 from the 1940 budget estimates for the building.

At the same time, it was revealed the procurement division of the Treasury Department has recently started plans for a combination armory and drill hall, which might be used as an auditorium. The auditorium would seat about 8,000 persons.

Sources disclosed this plan has the tentative approval of President Roosevelt. The President has on several occasions in the last two years said he would approve an auditorium which would house Presidential inaugurations during inclement weather. It was stated the type building the President favored however would seat some 15,000 persons.

Seek Cheaper Building

The combination armory and drill hall now under consideration would not cost more than $3,000,000, it was learned, but the type of auditorium which the President has favored would cost considerably more.

It is expected officials of the National Guard here and other interested parties will seek approval of the President for the combined armory and auditorium project. They explain Congress probably would not consider the more expensive plan which the President favors.

The District does not feel it should assume the financial burden of building the National Guard Armory. With this in mind, proponents of the armory plan will attempt to obtain the $3,000,000 necessary to build the armory from the Federal Government.

Two Sites Possible

A site has been set aside for the armory on the south side of East Capitol street, near Twenty-first. The land is owned by the Federal government.

Another site has also been considered, facing Constitution avenue between Third and John Marshall place northwest. During the last session of Congress a bill was forwarded earmarking this site for the proposed Washington Auditorium.

Earlier last month the District Commissioners eliminated an item for $2,750,000 from the Public Works program, which would have paved the way for the District National Guard Armory. It was rumored at the time the Commissioners had eliminated the project to obtain more money for the Municipal Center development.

Seek 3-Story Building

Conventions would have in Washington a large enough meeting place when the proposed armory-auditorium is completed. Some have objected that national political conventions would be drawn to this city, which might cause considerable controversy throughout the nation.

It was said the drill hall could be used for sporting events, including tennis, basketball, ice hockey, track meets, several nights per week. Present plans call for a three-story building spread over a city block.

Mary Merrick Wins Award of Siena Medal

By the Associated Press.

Biloxi, Miss., Oct. 26.—The Sienna medal of Theta Phi Alpha, national Catholic social sorority, was awarded tonight to Miss Mary Merrick, of Washington, D. C., at the closing banquet of the annual convention of the National Council of Catholic Women.

The medal is presented annually to the Catholic woman selected as outstanding in the United States. Miss Merrick, an invalid since girlhood, is organizer and president of the Christ Child Society, which aids needy children.

Mrs. Arthur Mullin, of Omaha, national vice president of the society, received the medal for Miss Merrick. The presentation was made by Mrs. Frank Jettinghoff, of Mount Vernon, Ill., national executive secretary for Theta Phi Alpha.

The Sienna medal is a gold disc bearing the coat of arms of the sorority and inscribed with the Greek phrase from St. Catherine of Sienna, "nothing great is ever done without much enduring."

Miss Merrick founded the Christ Child Society at Christmas time in 1886 after a boy told her he needed "a big wagon to carry mother's wash." The organization now has centers in 31 cities.

Miss Merrick was chosen to receive the medal by a committee including Mrs. W. J. Green, chairman of the Theta Phi Alpha national board of trustees, chairman; Archbishop Joseph F. Rummel, of New Orleans; Mgr. J. Reary, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, and Miss Anna Rose Kimpel, of Washington, national president of the sorority.

Washington Sees Wonders of Cold Heat at Open Air Science Show

Post Staff Photos.

How heat is generated by induction was graphically demonstrated at General Motors' Parade of Progress last night in a tent set up in the triangle opposite the Willard Hotel on Pennsylvania avenue. At left, J. McElhany, chief lecturer, calmly holds his fingers in an induction furnace which heats a metal spike red hot without damage to himself. Smoke is from the spike, not from McElhany. In the center, Virginia O'Connell, of New Jersey, smiles at the type of kitchen her grandmother called modern. At right, J. M. Jerpe, director of the exhibition, fries an egg on an induction stove which leaves the hand of Francis G. Addison, president of the Washington Board of Trade, unscorched

Bits of modern magic calculated to destroy any faith in time-proven rules, like "where there's smoke there must be fire" were shown last night at the opening of the motorized world's fair at the Fourteenth and Pennsylvania avenue triangle.

The trick of cooking without heat was the high point in a show that filled the big tent to its 1,400 capacity four times during the evening. The "Parade of Progress" show, presented by General Motors, will be here until Tuesday.

The heatless cooking began as a sort of juggling act. The demonstrator placed a heavy aluminum ring on an electric coil and then turned on the current. The ring jumped several feet in the air. The demonstrator explained it was because of action of the magnetic field above the coil.

He next put two fingers, along with an iron spike into the coil. The iron spike became red hot, by molecular friction, but the fingers came out unscorched.

From this the next step was frying an egg. The egg went into an ordinary frying pan, the frying pan on top of a newspaper, the newspaper on the electric coil. Molecular friction fried the egg sunny-side-up, and left the newspaper, through which all the cold heat had passed, uncharred.

A second trick, with the more startling possibilities of turning any neon sign into a radio transmitter, was shown. A neon light, connected with a victrola, sent music across the stage to a photoelectric eye, which picked it up and passed it to the audience. The demonstrator was able to turn his hand into a radio volume control just by waving it in front of the light beam.

The heatless light, displayed as the potential great-great-grandchild of Edison's first light bulb, came in a couple of bottles whose contents mixed into a sharp flash of light, lasting several seconds and then dying into a faint bluish glow that continued for several minutes.

Seen by officials of the show as one answer to the question of how to save part of the 90 per cent of energy which escapes from an electric light bulb as heat, the liquid light has been under investigation for the past five months. Although it can be made without difficulty, the chemical reaction which is involved has not yet been learned.

While the cooking and lighting facilities of the future were displayed in the tent, and at a stand outside, a continuous line of visitors passed through two displays, showing the homes, and the methods of travel of past and present.

In the home display streamlined furniture, air conditioning equipment, radio, telephone, indirect lighting today were contrasted with back-breaking furniture, and dim lights of the past. A kitchen display did not include the heatless cooker, but emphasized the old-time woodbox and hand pump.

In a transportation exhibit, high speed, safety highways, and safety sidewalks were shown, opposite an old-time "main street" with hay and feed signs, horses and an automobile. A village blacksmith in person told visitors how his smithy had once been the only car repair shop, and then directed them to an up-to-date service station.

In the center of the exhibition ground Old Scout, first car to cross the continent in 1905—it took 44 days—is contrasted with the big streamlined trucks. Six of the big trucks are hooked together in threes and jacked up for the main progress displays.

The show started at the Century of Progress in Chicago, and when that closed was placed on wheels, manned by a crew of 55, handpicked for appearance and versatility, and started on the road. It has covered about 200,000 miles to date, circling the United States and down into Mexico.

Hours of the show are: Today and tomorrow, noon to 10 p. m.; Saturday, 10 a. m. to 10 p. m.; Sunday, 2 p. m. to 10 p. m.; Monday and Tuesday, noon to 10 p. m. After that they head South, following the weather like any circus.

About 7,200 persons visited the show yesterday from 7 p. m., the opening, until 10:45 p. m.

Laws Asks Citizens to Aid Justice Here

Cites Lessened Crime At Petworth Meeting Officers Sworn In

Justice Bolitha J. Laws, of the District Court, called on the citizens of the community to do their full share in aiding justice, at a banquet held last night by the Petworth Citizens Association in Petworth School Auditorium.

Guest speaker at the banquet, Justice Laws said:

"To promote efficient administration of justice, it is the citizen's co-operation that is needed. As witnesses and jurors, they are most essential for the proper function of our courts of today.

"As one example I am proud to point out the way citizens of different communities responded and joined forces with the police department, newspapers and the courts, during the crime wave of a year ago, resulting in a tremendous decrease in crime this year.

"As great a role as you play in the temple of justice," Justice Laws continued, "so must you play as great a role in the efforts to improve your community."

Earl W. Cooper, retiring president of the Petworth Citizens Association, told the gathering that after 36 years of existence they should be proud of their organization.

The installation of officers, conducted by Charles I. Stengle, who acted as the installing officer, followed the talks by Justice Laws and Cooper. The newly elected officers are George W. Potter, president; Harvey O. Craver, first vice president; Mrs. Edith L. Phelps, second vice president; Raymond E. Gable, secretary; Benjamin N. Brown, treasurer, and Harvey O. Craver and Horace J. Phelps were elected as delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Iceland Steers Neutral Course, Foreign Affairs Chief Says Here

'Feel Every Nation Must Find Own Salvation' Safety Guaranteed by Scandinavian Nations Parliament Member Seeks More U. S. Trade

Jonas Jonsson, chairman of the foreign affairs committee for the Icelandic Parliament, said last night his country was seeking to find its own way through today's democratic-fascist conflict without passing judgment on any other country.

"We are very democratic, but we feel every nation must find its own salvation," he said in an interview here.

This attitude held for Hitler, as well as for the democratic countries, he said, adding that the Icelandic people drew no conclusions for themselves from the example of Czechoslovakia. The safety of his 130,000 countrymen, he feels, is guaranteed by the other Scandinavian countries.

Jonsson, 53 years old, came to America four months ago in the role of lecturer and tourist rather than official representative of the Icelandic government. He was a teacher before his election to the Parliament.

Although he made no official visit to either the President or the State Department, Jonsson said his foreign affairs committee was working particularly for the development of trade with the United States.

The committee is sending an exhibit to the World's Fair in New York next year, and he hopes that will increase the market for Iceland's annual haul of cod and halibut. Expanded trade, he hopes, will bring a time when each country will send a representative to the other.

At present they do business through the Danish Minister, Otto Wasted. Interchange of representatives, he pointed out, would simply be in line with an old tradition of friendly relations between the two countries. Liefur Eirikssen, he pointed out, discovered the new world before Columbus.

Iceland is an independent country, he said, although it shares a king with Denmark on a "personal union" basis.

14th Street Crash Injures Man, 68

John C. Foster, 68, of 3932 Fourteenth street northwest, was seriously injured when he was struck by an automobile near his home. At Emergency Hospital he was said to be suffering a fractured leg, a possible skull fracture and a possible fracture of the pelvis.

Myer Pumps, 34, of 1728 Webster street northwest, said by police to be driver of the automobile, was not held when a test showed his brakes to be in good condition.

Mustache Bandit Loots Drug Store

A dimpled bandit with a toothbrush mustache last night collected $180 from James T. Malone, of 2844 Wisconsin avenue northwest, assistant manager of the Alban Towers Drug Store, at pistol point.

Malone said the man entered the store, where he was alone, and forced him to open a cash register which yielded $85 and another from which he took $40, then rifled Malone's pockets of $55.

Relief Held Enslaving D. C. Colored

Means Demoralization Jobs Called For Co-operation Needed Street Leads Forum

Continuance of colored persons on relief in Washington means their economic slavery and "utter demoralization," speakers at a panel discussion last night on "What Shall Washington Do With the Negro?" asserted.

"More and better jobs" was cited as the only solution for the "desolate picture of misery and want of the Negro in the Nation's Capital."

The discussion was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, in connection with the organization here of a branch of the National Urban League, a group seeking better conditions for colored people through co-operation of white and colored leaders.

Mrs. Roosevelt Regrets

Dr. W. W. Alexander, administrator, Farm Security Administration; Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, canon, Washington Cathedral; Dr. Garnett C. Wilkinson, colored, assistant superintendent of District schools; Newbold Noyes, associate editor, Evening Star, and Eugene Kinckle Jones, colored, executive secretary, National Urban League, New York City, composed the panel. Elwood Street, director of public welfare for the District, was discussion leader.

A letter from Mrs. Roosevelt, expressing her regrets at being unable to attend the discussion and inclosing a contribution toward the $10,000 budget required before the District branch of the Urban League can begin operation, was read by Street.

Speaking on the movement of colored people from rural areas of the South to the urban areas of Washington and other large Eastern and Northern cities, Dr. Alexander said this movement represents a "tremendous migration over a distance as far for the Negro as the distance the Italian peasant traveled from his hut to the steel mills of Pittsburgh."

Bridge Is Needed

Noyes, calling attention to the colored man's unpreparedness for urban life, said white and colored people must work together.

"There is a need for a bridge to cross the chasms of indifference, prejudice and mutual distrust on the part of white and colored people," Noyes said, asserting co-operation of both races is the only way the plight of the colored race can be improved.

It was brought out that 51 per cent of Washington's unemployed are colored. Dr. Wilkinson declaring that "jobs, not relief," will solve the problem. He pointed out that Washington colored leaders have contributed $5,321.81 toward founding of a branch of the National Urban League here, and said that in the league lies hope for ultimate solution of the problem presented by the Capital's colored population of about 150,000.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Myrna Loy Is Honored By Receiving No Votes!

Only Nominee Not Overrated, Says Poll
Drama of Splinter Fleet to Be Shown
News Notes and Chatter of the Theater

There is one Hollywood motion picture star who probably will feel enormously flattered when she happens upon the November issue of Scribner's Magazine, on the stands tomorrow.

The matter was brought to this column's attention yesterday afternoon by Bert Garmise, circulation director of Scribner's, in Washington to address a convention at the Mayflower, who took time out of a busy day to pay this desk a friendly and enjoyable call.

BELL.

In an advance copy of his book he pointed out an item in the "Straws of the Wind" editorial department, appearing on page 4, under the subhead, "Overrated." This has to do with the latest summary of the vote on Scribner's September feature on overrated Americans. Hundreds of voters, representing 42 States, it seems, have so far expressed themselves as to which Americans in a wide variety of distinguished, or at least conspicious, fields of effort are least entitled to the prominence they have attained.

To get to the gist of the matter by the shortest possible route, I shall quote the final paragraph of Scribner's editorial comment:

"On our list of 147 potential nominees, there was only one whom nobody considered overrated. Votes went freely to statesmen, artists and scientists, but not a single vote was cast against this one person. Her name is Myrna Loy."

Not only did the vote on the overrated embrace statesmen, artists and scientists. It included also novelists, radio celebrities, leaders in the field of sports, musicians, showmen, film stars, commentators and whatnot. And Myrna Loy was the only one whom no one deemed overrated.

Take a bow, Miss Loy—and on the strength of this, we will just forget all about "Too Hot to Handle!"

It is interesting to note that with the opening last night of the Civic Theater's production of Elmer Rice's play of "Judgment Day," the Rialto Theater completed its first year of operating as a civic and cultural center. During the 12 months ended last night, the Rialto has been conducted as a nonprofit-making forum for all manner of interests having something to do with civic consciousness. It has housed industrial, political, educational, social and racial groups and has afforded the setting of the Capital's closest approach to that community arena of discussion, the "town hall."

Opened in 1918 as one of the first of the nationally known palaces of the motion picture—and affectionately dubbed by its founder, Tom Moore, "The Temple of the Muses"—the Rialto has pursued an honorable and a varied career. It is by no means certain that its last year has not proved one of its most valuable.

Yesterday's contribution to the succor of a parched and starving press was a cocktail party tossed at 4 p. m. in the rooms of the Variety Club, in the Willard Hotel, by Marc Lachman and Sam Wheeler, of Twentieth Century-Fox Pictures, in preliminary celebration of the coming to town of that company's production of "Submarine Patrol."

This is the semihistorical film play that was heralded in this space some months ago under its working title of "Splinter Fleet" and concerns the activities of the "cracker box" little sub-chasers that played so important a part in the Great War. These tiny craft were only 110 feet long, weighed only 50 tons and were made of wood. Nobody thought they were capable of navigating a fair-sized bathtub, but once they got into commission they crossed the ocean time and again and covered more nautical miles than Columbus' caravels, despite the fact that they were smaller than those ancient ships.

Adventurous drama was instinct in everything they did. They made heroes of many obscure recruits and reserves who thought they were embarking on an in-shore yachting trip. It is that drama that is revealed in "Submarine Patrol," with Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Preston Foster and George Bancroft in the featured roles.

"Submarine Patrol" will be unspooled at an invitational preview at the National Press Club tonight and will be shown at the Naval Academy in Annapolis on Saturday night and Sunday. It will come eventually to a downtown screen, presumably that of one of the Loew houses.

Following the run of Deanna Durbin in "That Certain Age," at RKO-Keith's, the Fifteenth street house, so Manager Hardie Meakin tells me, will shelter an attraction that has been sweeping up box-office records all over the country. It will be comprised of a composite of Boris Karloff in "Frankenstein" and Bela Lugosi in "Dracula." Now is the time to get the spinal column well oiled for thrills and the gooseflesh in good working order!

When Ina Claire opens in "Yankee Fable," at the National Theater next Monday night, one of Gen. Howe's aides will be played by a young actor bearing the name of William Haskell. Mr. Haskell is the son of Frances Starr, a present Washingtonian and one of the stage's most distinguished actresses, and the noted artist Haskell Coffin. Young Haskell has played in summer stock, but this is his first appearance in a play aimed at Broadway.

Both Miss Starr and Miss Claire were Belasco stars—remember "Marie Odile," "The Case of Becky," "Rose of the Rancho," "Gold Diggers" and the rest?—but neither Cheryl Crawford, producer of "Yankee Fable," nor Miss Claire was aware of Haskell's relationship to the actress. He got his part solely on the basis of his able reading of the role before Director Otto L. Preminger.

Ladies of Variety will be honored guests at the Halloween luncheon to be given by the showmen-clubbers in the Willard next Monday afternoon at 1. Attorney Alvin Newmyer and Dr. Archie Engel will preside as co-kings for the day and announce a program of novelties especially planned to make the occasion memorable in the minds of the club's distaff membership, usually barred from these midday prandial pastimes.

A special gala preview, or premiere, or something is being planned for Shirley Temple's next starring picture, "Just Around the Corner," booked as chief feature at Loew's Capitol for the week beginning Friday, November 4. Mr. Lachman whispers surreptitiously in a waving ear that this is one of the best things the diminutive Duse has done. That would make it pretty good.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 26.—Flying up to San Francisco is no more exciting than sitting in your rocking chair at home, except for the panoramic beauty which greets the eye at sunset over the Golden Gate and your first glimpse of Treasure Island—whose black gold, sucked up from the bottom of the sea, is used as a foundation for the Golden Gate International Exposition—and your glimpse of the two fairy bridges. Your eyes see it; your mind refuses to believe it, and says: "'taint so."

HEDDA HOPPER

And with one swoop you're in one of the fairest cities in the world. Take time only for a nose powder and change of dress—then the opera. Again you're lifted to a new high, by Ebe Stignani, specially imported from Milan for one performance to sing Santuzza in "Cavaleria Rusticana." She does things to your emotions—lifts you as high as the plane. They gave her a perfect cast. Don't miss her if you're lucky enough to have her visit your home town.

The Town Hall lecture I gave the following morning was an eye and ear opener as to what the public wants from the movies. At its end we had half an hour of questions and answers. Here are some:

"Must we have more children on the screen?"

"Don't you like Shirley Temple and the others?"

"Yes, but we've had our fill."

"What will happen to the adopted children of screen stars when they lose their money?"

"Same thing that would happen to your children if you lost yours. But they'll still have loving homes instead of orphanages."

"Will they give us Bette Davis for Scarlett? Failing that, Katharine Hepburn first, Margaret Sullavan and Miriam Hopkins. Carole Lombard at no price."

That was that.

"Why did Shearer make mistake of announcing she'd play Scarlett?"

"If I could answer that I'd be a clairvoyant, not an actress."

"What do producers do with the beautiful costumes worn by stars?"

"They make them over for supporting members of the cast for future pictures. They end up on the backs of extras."

"Why couldn't they be preserved in a permanent museum? We'd pay a quarter to see them any time."

"I'll ask the studios—and that's a mighty fine suggestion for the World's Fair."

All agreed that the "Marie Antoinette" costumes were the most beautiful ones ever seen in movies.

"Where can young people get their training?"

"High school, little theaters, summer stock. If you can sing, do it any place, even on a street corner. If you're not arrested some talent scout may be passing by and pick you up."

"Why was Lawrence Tibbett's last picture so bad?"

"Because producers thought the fad for singing pictures was over. They didn't want to make it—were willing to pay Larry off, for less money, of course. So, with all those handicaps it was a miracle the picture ws as good as it was."

"Oh, then it wasn't Larry's fault?"

An emphatic "No."

"How soon can we expect another fine musical picture?"

"You got it in Alexander's Ragtime Band."

"We want high-class music, such as opera and classics."

"Producers think opera is old-fashioned."

"But year after year we keep looking forward to it, and never have a vacant seat during our opera season."

"You'll never get that kind of music on the screen until a producer with enough vision comes along—engages musicians, singers—the same kind of people who put over opera—and is willing to wait five years to get his money back. You see, ours is a cash-and-carry business and demands a quick turnover."

"But Disney is doing it; he's giving us the finest music on the screen today. Why can't others?"

"I'll put that up to the producers."

"Is there as much sin in Hollywood as we read about?"

"We're more sinned against than sinning, which is our own fault. When we can't think of anything better to say, we introduce sin. It's never failed yet as a topic of conversation."

The Post's New Yorker

New York, Oct. 26.

JOHN HARLAN AMEN'S first step as special prosecutor will to be to indict an assistant district attorney in Brooklyn. Those 7,200 missing police records never will be recovered. They were torn and thrown into the Atlantic.

They represented "washed-bonds" cases, wherein defendants' names were substituted for others, on legal surety bonds, and the premiums split between the bondsmen and the officials. The records also showed the desposits of cash bail; but would have revealed that the sums never were deposited with the city chamberlain . . . In any event, the records weren't removed on the day the police say they were . . . Lieut. Cuthbert Behan, who was arrested and charged with taking those records, has a perfect alibi.

AN ADVERTISEMENT appeared in the N. Y. Times recently, announcing that a young lady, of expensive tastes—tastes better than she could afford—was willing to share her $2,000-a-year apartment in the East 50's with another young lady, of similar tastes . . . And so another young lady, a Miss J. W., answered the ad, inspected the apartment, and told the occupant that she could not share that expensive burden . . . The occupant advertiser was last week's suicide—Dorothy Hale.

The reviews of "Case History" referred to 7-year-old Babs Savage, who mastered a lengthy role, and recommended her to the attention of film producers. Bobs was signed six months ago for the Bonnie role in "Gone With the Wind."

THE EDITORS of Pathe Newsreel decided to introduce a new touch into the field—a touch of "Culture," as a weekly feature of its reels . . . . As the first step, cameramen were dispatched to the Carnegie Art Exhibit, to photograph the paintings . . . The results were culturally satisfactory, but the idea was abandoned . . . For while the movies of the paintings represented good film photography, there was no movie action. They merely appeared to be still-pictures—of other still pictures.

BYRNES MacDONALD, sixth deputy police commissioner, will resign soon to become an officer of the chain of hotels purchased recently from Henry L. Doherty . . . Cora LaRedd, the night club entertainer whose death was reported by a columnist last year, has recovered completely and will entertain at the Kit Kat Klub next week . . .

Ina Claire in New Comedy Here Monday

"Yankee Fable" Is Title Comes to National Other New Bills

Ina Claire in "Yankee Fable," a new comedy by Lewis Meltzer, produced by Cheryl Crawford, will be the attraction at the National Theater for the week beginning next Monday night. The story deals with Gen. Howe's detention in New York at a crucial period in the American Revolution and the manner in which his dalliance with an attractive young matron defeated the cause of the British. Opposite Miss Claire will be seen Henry Daniell, who has come East from Hollywod expressly to assume the role of Gen. Howe. Others in the cast will include John Williams, Eda Heinemann, Maxine Stuart, Ralph Sumpter, Barry Sullivan, William Brisbane, Robert Strauss, Robert Pitkin, Maynard Holmes and Hollis Mitchell. There will be the usual matinee performances on Wednesday and Saturday.

Opening today on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, the major attraction will be Twentieth Century-Fox's far-flung picturization of the story of "Suez," the romantic tale of Ferdinand de Lesseps' struggle to complete the canal connecting the Mediterranean and Red seas. Principal love interest centers in the attachment between De Lesseps and the beautiful young woman who became the Empress Eugenie. These roles are played by Tyrone Power and Loretta Young. In the supporting cast, among others, are Anabella, Joseph Schildkraut, Henry Stephenson, George Zucco, Miles Mander, J. Edward Bromley, Sidney Blackmer, Maurice Moscovich, Sig Rumann, Nigel Bruce Leon Ames Frank Reicher, Georges Renavent, Albert Conti and Brandon Hurst. The picture is one of great beauty and variety of scene. It will be supplemented by the usual short reels.

"Brother Rat," the Warner Brothers' faithful picturization of the successful stage play by John Monks, jr., and Fred F. Finklehoff, will be the principal screen offering at the Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, with Waynes Morris and Priscilla Lane in the featured roles. The supporting cast includes Johnnie Davis, Eddie Albert, Ronald Reagan, Jane Wyman, Jane Bryan and Henry O'Neill. The scene of the play is laid at the Virginia Military Institute, at Lexington, Va. The stage portion of the new week's bill will be headlined by Herbie Kaye's Orchestra and Eleanore Whitney, dancing star of the films, in person. Others on the stage bill embrace Marian Bellett and the English Brothers and the 16 Earle Roxyettes.

Wallace Beery and Mickey Rooney are filmed in the costellar roles of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "Stablemates," opening on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater tomorrow as chief feature for the week. The story is one of a strange devotion that springs up around the race tracks and possesses much of the flavor of "The Champ," in which Beery and Jackie Cooper scored so decisively. Margaret Hamilton, Minor Watson, Spencer Charters and scores more are prominent in the lesser roles. The vaudeville bill will be headlined by Paul Haakon, one of the most distinguished dancers of the contemporary theater. Other notable acts and the 24 Chester Hale Capitol dancers will complete the bill.

For the week beginning tomorrow, the Metropolitan Theater will offer a revival of the RKO-Radio picturization of "Little Women," starring Katharine Hepburn, with Joan Bennett, Paul Lukas, Frances Dee, Jean Parker, Douglass Montgomery, Edna May Oliver and Spring Byington in the roles of primary importance. Short subjects will augment the program.

"King of Alcatraz," Paramount's film play of a prison escape, will be presented for the first time in Washington as chief feature of the bill opening tomorrow at the Columbia Theater. With J. Carrol Naish cast as Public Enemy No. 1, the picture reveals what can happen when a prisoner breaks away from "The Rock" and attempts to make off with an ocean-going steamer. Others in the cast include Gail Patrick, Robert Preston, Lloyd Nolan and Harry Carey. The customary short-reel subjects will round out the program.

Deanna Durbin, supported by Melvyn Douglas, John Halliday, Irent Rich, Jackie Cooper and a considerable cast of juvenile players, will continue for a third week as major film feature of the bill at RKO-Keith's Theater. This vehicle is one of the gifted Miss Durbin's best to date. Beginning tomorrow, a new issue of the "March of Time" will be added to the bill as a secondary feature. It is devoted entirely to first motion picture views of the Maginot line of fortresses on the Franco-German border.

A short-reel subject devoted to Phil Spitalny and his all-feminine orchestra, the best of its kind in existence; a Paramount Pictorial, including an art travelogue, in color, of the Canyon country of the West; "Sporting Test," with Ted Husing, and Walt Disney's cartoon comedy of "The Fox Hunt" will be the short features of the bill opening tomorrow at the Trans-Lux Theater. The bill, as usual, will be based on newsreel coverage of the world.

"The Ghost Goes West," costarring Robert Donat and Jean Parker, will be revived as foremost feature of the screen bill at the Little Theater, beginning Sunday. This Alexander Korda production was directed by Rene Clair, noted French director. The program also will embrace short-reel subjects and a new issue of the newsreel.

The Washington Civic Theater long since has established itself as a creative acting group capable of coping with the involved demands of long-cast plays, requiring minute co-ordination, skillful timing and fluent reading. Their proficiency in interpreting these dramas of unusual, if not unique, design has been demonstrated in "Yellow Jack," "Johnny Johnson," ". . . one third of a nation . . ." and numerous others, but perhaps never more vigorously emphasized than in Elmer Rice's three-act drama of "Judgment Day," presented for the first time in Washington in the Rialto Theater last night as the first offering of the Civic's new season.

In "Judgment Day," Mr. Rice, responsible for the direction of the recent "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," at the National, has launched a bitter and destructive attack against the crucifixion of human liberty and justice upon the bloody cross of dictatorship. The scene of the action—it is more a play of dialogue than action, until the last scene of the last act—is the highest court of justice in an imaginary state, under the heel of a tyrant who rules by intimidation and terror.

Trial Constitutes Drama

The case of the National Party against three representatives of the Peoples' Party, accused of treason and attempted murder of the minister president, is being tried. The trial comprises the alpha and the omega of the drama. Through the instrumentality of its testimony, cross-questioning, admonitions from the bench and verbal tilts of the opposing counsel, is brought out the full measure of the author's deep contempt for the rape of the world by lawless power.

The developments of the three acts and five scenes are pointed by the unveiling of a shrewd plot on the part of the National Government to safeguard its own continuance in power by means of a trumped up case against its enemies—a case which is hopelessly lost in the final moments of the play by a device which cheapens the whole structure of the drama and makes its chief protagonist of humane and orderly government guilty of an act of violence that refutes his every earlier argument.

While more of a declamatory preachment upon the present social ills of the world than a drama that expresses itself in situation and mobile action, "Judgment Day" still is a play that requires a deal of doing. It penetrates deeply into fundamental emotions and cries out for the robust treatment that will give verisimilitude to scenes of great human anguish, the struggle for life and liberty and the fight, even for the right to live. This the Civic Theater cast gave it last night. The performance was one of remarkable smoothness and genuine power—in so far as it lies within the lines of the play to carry a complete and convincing expression of its author's purpose.

Cast Covered With Glory

Particularly able portrayals were contributed to the continuously expansive ensemble by the five justices of the tribunal—Arthur Islar, Joseph Cochran, Kenneth Banghart, Harry Westcott and Murray Sheehan—Eileen Fowler and Arthur Westover, as the defendants; Marvin Beers, as Conrad Noli, the young American lawyer, returned home to aid in the defense of his sister; Norman Rose, as Prosecutor Bathory; Gloria Brandt, as Sonia Kuman; Joe Bourne, an amusingly bewildered witness; Bess Wilkerson, as Madame Crevelli, another, and Paul Walter, as the military overlord, Gen. Rakovski. There is neither time nor space to permit a detailed account of the excellence of their work beyond the observation that the play frequently was interrupted by the spontaneous applause they received.

The members of the supporting cast assisted ably in maintaining the high level of excellence established by the principal figures in the clashing forces of opposing philosophies of government—notably Robert Miller, as the catspaw of the plotting Nationals; Hugh Smythe, as Dr. Parvan and George Finger, as Dr. Stambulov.

The Civic Theater's new season is off to a distinctly auspicious start.

Wax Record

The first wax recording to be made on a motion picture set was made by Nelson Eddy and a marching band of 85 pieces for the "On Parade" number of "Sweethearts," in which Jeanette MacDonald costars.

Constipated? Then Ask Yourself This Question!

If constipation has you bogged down so you feel tired, sunk, all played out—it's time you asked yourself a question!

What have you had to eat lately? Just meat, bread, eggs, potatoes? It's no surprise you're constipated! The chances are you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If this is what you lack, your ticket is crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains both "bulk" and the great intestinal tonic, vitamin B_1. And it's not a drug, not a medicine!

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and take a new lease on life! All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Zaza's Can-Can Dancing Challenge

Claudette Colbert's revival of the can-can in "Zaza" is reported today having reverberations from the jitterbug arenas to Carnegie Hall.

Tommy Dorsey is sponsoring the can-can as a jitterbug dance with a special song, "When Zaza Does the Can-Can." And now comes word that Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo will make it a feature of its new ballet "Gaite Parisienne."

Warner Presents Gym to Sing Sing

Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., was the onor of the inmates' gymnasium at Sing Sing prison.

Mr. Warner donated the gymnasium after his studio had filmed Warden Lewis E. Lawes' original story, "20,000 Years in Sing Sing."

20 THE WASHINGTON POST: TUESDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Baseball Again!

Baseball bounces back on the sports pages with the announcement that the New York Yankees and the St. Louis Browns have swung a deal. It seems that the Yankees have shipped Outfielder Myril Hoag and Catcher Joe Glenn to St. Louis in a swap for Pitcher Oral Hildebrand and Outfielder Buster Mills.

POVICH.

More interesting to Washington folks is the possibility of an echo to that trade. The name that may involve the Nats in a deal that would be the outgrowth of the Yankees-Browns swap is that of Joe Glenn. Messrs. Clark Griffith and Bucky Harris have long been interested in Glenn. Time was when they were willing to go high for him.

The Nats' annual attempts to acquire Glenn were always futile, however. The Yankees would never talk trade for their No. 2 catcher, who was Bill Dickey's understudy. But with Glenn now the property of the Browns, Harris and Griffith are expected to evince new interest in the catcher.

The Washington club and the Browns never appear to have difficulties arranging trades. Clark Griffith has had more dealings with the St. Louis club than any other. In the past, if the Browns owned a player Griffith coveted, that player usually ended up with the Nats. There were, for example, Heinie Manush, Goose Goslin, Sammy West, Irving Hadley, Carl Reynolds, Buck Newsom, Angelo Giuliani and Elon Hogsett.

There's Cash Here

St. Louis is expected to be receptive to a deal for Glenn. The Browns' catching of last season was acceptable with Billy Sullivan and Tommy Heath alternating behind the bat. And acceptable, too, would be some of Mr. Griffith's veteran pitchers.

For four years Griffith and Harris have been high on Glenn, as they say in baseball. Only the presence of the redoubtable Bill Dickey has kept Glenn on the bench. With a half dozen other clubs in the league, he would be the regular receiver. When he filled in for the brittle Dickey, Glenn was always a thorn to the Nats.

In making their deal with the Browns the Yankees were motivated, of course, by the desire to acquire Oral Hildebrand. The string-bean pitcher's record of eight victories and ten defeats last season should not be held against him. In fact, that was an accomplishment with the last-place Browns. When the earned run averages are made available next month it will be learned that Hildebrand was one of the most effective pitchers in the league.

There's Mr. Jorgens

Thus the Yankees were willing to give up Glenn. Any time that Bill Dickey is not available they have an able substitute in Arndt Jorgens. During any of the past seasons the Nats would have been willing to buy Jorgens. They thought that highly of him.

The swap of the two outfielders, Hoag for Mills, was a comparatively trivial part of the deal. Hoag unquestionably will be a regular outfielder with the Browns, but Mill is fated for a spot on the Yankees' bench. The prospect that he can break into the Yankees' outfield, which has Charley Kellar coming up from Newark, and otherwise boasts Joe DiMaggio, Tommy Henrich and George Selkirk, is practically nil.

GLENN

The Browns, incidentally, are still manager-less. Since the discharge of Gabby Street, the club owners have made no move to replace him. But managerial talent is available. The release of Tony Lazzeri by the Chicago Cubs may coincide nicely with the lately created vacancy at St. Louis. Before the month is over, the Browns' ownership is expected to announce Lazzeri as the new boss.

His position at Chicago was quite untenable for Lazzeri in the light of Gabby Hartnett's managerial success with the Cubs. It was understood that Lazzeri was to be given Charley Grimm's job after Hartnett had been tried and found wanting, but Gabby upset the apple cart by taking over the demoralized Cubs and winning the pennant with them.

Gabby's Popular

Even the slaughter at the hands of the Yankees has not threatened Hartnett's position. Chicago fans are still strong for the stout catcher who brought them a pennant after taking over a team that was struggling in midseason, to stay in the first division. Lazzeri could have kept his job as coach, but he is bent on a manager's berth and the Cubs' job is closed to him.

Until they swung the deal with the Browns, the Yankees were supposed to be standing pat on the club that won three straight pennants plus world championships. It was the other clubs in the league which were supposed to go on a trading spree in an at-

ED MESKE

Dusek Meets Meske Robert Vs. McCoy Styles Are Varied First Bout at 8:30

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A study in contrasting wrestling styles will be offered Washington fans tonight at Turner's Arena, with Ernie Dusek, Bibber McCoy, Ed Meske and Yvon Robert, all nationally known grapplers, as the four subjects.

Ernie Dusek, who has replaced brother Rudy as the most famous of the Dusek "Riot Squad" wrestlers, will meet Meske, and Robert, the former world's champion, will take on McCoy in double windup matches.

The styles of Dusek and McCoy are alike, and those of Meske and Robert practically identical.

Dusek and McCoy are the rough and ready, villainous boys who will stop at nothing to lay low their opponents. They will slug referees, employ strangle holds, kick and gouge. They otherwise are identical as bad men.

Meske and Robert are handsome boys. They are clean wrestlers who are incidentally quite capable of using villlainous tactics to quell the opposition. Always they are the favorties with fans.

And that is what fans should expect tonight at the Arena when these four grapplers swing into action.

Tonight marks the second time Meske has been on top. Two weeks ago he headlined the show and made a terrific hit by bouncing Chris Zaharias. The week before that Robert, who is one of the fastest workers in the ring, took Johnny Katan into camp for an impressive victory.

There is reason to believe that Promoter Turner, should it work out that way, may match Dusek against McCoy and Robert against Meske. Either is a "natural."

A family feud will be started here when Chick Garibaldi, younger brother of Gino, meets Chris Zaharias, George's brother. Reb Russell, the old cowhand, meets Steve Budnas, of Montreal, and Tony Colisano, the Italian, engages Ed Newman, the Jewish star.

First bout is at 8:30.

Contrevent Wins Stakes

By the Associated Press.

Newmarket, England, Oct. 26.—An unusual series of triumphs by foreign-bred horses on English turf was climaxed today when the French-bred 3-year-old Contrevent, owned by Princesse de Faucigny-Lucinge, captured the 100th running of the Cesarewitch Stakes. On the outcome of the race hinged the distribution of $7,000,000 in Irish Hospital sweepstakes prizes.

Contrevent, which started at 100 to 7, held off a hard challenge in the closing stages to win by a length and a half from another French-bred entry, J. P. Hornung's Dubonnet. Edward Benson's Fet, the 1936 winner which made a game bid to be the first horse to win the 2¼-mile classic twice, was third, another length and a half behind.

Assigned only 92 pounds, low weight in the field of 28 starters, Contrevent led going into the final half mile. At the 2-mile mark it was Dubonnet, Fet and Contrevent, in that order, with the winner sticking his head out front 400 yards from home.

Contrevent's victory was the fifth this season by a foreign-bred horse. France also won the Derby with Bois Roussel, bought in France a few weeks before the race by Peter Beatty, and the Cambridgeshire with the lightly regarded Helleniqua, while Battleship and Flares, both United States entries, won the Grand National and Ascot Gold Cup, respectively.

Yankees Trade Hoag, Glenn; Make Room For Charley Keller

New York Gets Hildebrand and Buster Mills Buddy Rosar Will Also Be Brought Up Trade Is First of the Winter Season

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 26.—The champion Yankees made room today for their top two minor league farmhands, Clouting Charley Keller and Belting Buddy Rosar, in a straight-player swap with the St. Louis Browns.

They sent Myril (Little Feet) Hoag, one of the game's best throwing outfielders, and Catcher Joe Glenn, who hits a long ball, handles pitchers well, but is slow afoot, to the Brownies. In return, they receive Oral Hildebrand, one of the Browns' steadier pitchers last season, and Colonel (Buster) Mills, late of the Boston Red Sox.

The details, however, are only more or less incidental to the fact that the move "cleans house" in the fly-chasing and backstopping departments, thereby permitting the permanent importation of the Newark Bears' youngsters who finished one-two in the 1938 International League batting race.

Fresh From Maryland Campus

These two have been the most talked-of minor leaguers, excluding pitchers, in the past two years. Keller, particularly, has brought offers from other major league clubs involving fabulous figures. Fresh up from the University of Maryland campus, he won the league's batting crown in 1937 and followed it up this year by finishing not far behind Rosar's .387 mark. Rosar has been catching in the Yankee farm chain for two or three years, and was up for a tryout with the world champions last spring.

On that basis, therefore, the Browns-Yanks swap stands to benefit both clubs. Hoag wound up this season with a .271 mark, but for most of the year he batted in the .300 neighborhood. It was only when the injured George Selkirk returned to active duty, thus relegating "Hoagie" to the bench again, that his stickwork fell off. Obviously, he needed more daily work, and will get it with the Brownies, for his defensive ability alone would make him a varsity performer with any other club but the Yanks, who boast a first-string fly-chasing squadron of Selkirk, Joe DiMaggio and Tommy Henrich.

May Oust Jake Powell

For some time Glenn, too, has needed more regular action to show his stuff, and, but for the fact that his catching competition on the Yanks is Bill Dickey, he would have seen far more service. Although batting only .260, he drove 24 runs across in 41 games last summer, and can peg to second with the best of them.

Mills batted .281 for the Browns in '38, and probably will alternate with Keller in handling the utility chores next year. In that case, the Yanks also are likely to get rid of Jake Powell before spring training rolls around. Hildebrand won eight and lost ten games with the seventh-place Brownies during the season, but his record shows ten complete nine-inning performances. With a club like the Yanks behind him, he will definitely prove an asset to the championship hurling staff.

Navy Soccerists Tie Lehigh, 1-1

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 26.—With the score of today's soccer game here between the Navy and Lehigh knotted at one goal each, darkness prevented further playing after the regular playing time had elapsed.

Bud Schumann scored for the Navy on a high side kick after 11 minutes of play in the third quarter, and Joe Scott, for Lehigh, after Gus Riemondy's try had been partially stopped by Refo, the Navy goalie.

A persistent Navy attack through the first two quarters was led by Dick Parker and Bud Schumann, and good stops were made repeatedly by Al Snyder, the Lehigh goal tender.

To Big Time?

Charley Keller, former Maryland star athlete and a leading hitter in the International League, found the door to big time fame open when the Yanks traded Glenn and Hoag to St. Louis, making room for him

Cup Retained By Bluenose

By the Associated Press.

Aboard Gertrude L. Thebaud, Off Boston (Via Radio Telephone), Oct. 26.—Capt. Angus Walters' big Canadian salt banker Bluenose retained the International Fishermen's trophy by taking today's deciding race from the American challenger, the schooner Gertrude L. Thebaud. Bluenose finished the 35½ mile triangular course at 4:04:11 p. m. (Eastern standard time.)

Thebaud came across the finish line 3 minutes, 50 seconds later. Both Capt's. Walters and Capt. Cecil Moulton, of the challenger, sailed flawless races, but at the start, Moultin said he knew he could not win in the prevailing light air.

"My congratulations to Capt. Walters," Capt .Moulton said, "but Thebaud was beaten, not by Bluenose but by the chairman of the racing committee, Charles M. Lyons, United States steamboat inspector, who kept an appointment in Providence yesterday when there was enough wind to give Thebaud a chance.

"He postponed the race without consulting the other members of the committee or the two skippers."

The official times of today's race were:

Bluenose, 4:04:10; Thebaud, 4:07.

Eagles Beat Cards, 7-0, In Hard Rain

Score in 2d Period On Recovered Fumble 15,000 See Game Played at Erie, Pa.

By the Associated Press

Erie, Pa., Oct. 26.—Capitalizing on a Chicago fumble the Philadelphia Eagles shoved over a touchdown early in the second period tonight to beat the Chicago Cardinals, 7 to 0, in a National League professional football game.

A crowd of 15,000, sitting in a terrific rainstorm, saw George Rado, Philadelphia guard, set the stage for the game's only score by recovering Sloan's fumble on the Chicago nine on the last play of the period.

Emmett Mortell picked up four yards in two tries. After a pass was grounded, Dave Smukler zipped a 5-yard forward to Joe Carter for the touchdown. Hank Reese kicked the extra point from placement.

Redskin Ace Collects Six Touchdowns

Makes Extra Point Tops Don Hutson Has Gained 269 Yds. Locals Drill Hard

By Shirley Povich.

The name of Andrew Elmer Farkas, the touchdown-hungry Hungarian, today decorates the top of the National Football League scoring list, further evidence of his sensational debut in professional football.

Six touchdowns and one extra point have been amassed by the stocky Redskin fullback who has eclipsed Don Hutson, of the Green Bay Packers, for the scoring lead despite the fact that he has figured in only four of the Redskins' six games.

Farkas, who has made three of the Redskins' last four touchdowns, also moved into third place in the league in yardage gained for the season. The Hungarian's total of 269 yards represents an average of 4.8 on each ball-carrying attempt, which is the third best average in the league.

Whizzer White, hailed as a "flop" in his early appearances with the Pirates, leads Cecil Isbell, of Green Bay, for yardage honors in the league with 288. But White has figured in seven games compared to Isbell's six.

Ed Danowski continues to hold the lead in forward passing, both in point of yards gained and in efficiency. Danowski has completed 50 out of 84 heaves for 615 yards and an average of .595. Sammy Baugh is running him a close second with 32 completions in 55 attempts for an average of .581.

Yesterday the Redskins continued to emphasize their defense as the game with Brooklyn's Dodgers, at Brooklyn on Sunday, neared. Head Coach Ray Flaherty tried several backfield combinations in an attempt to insure no repetition of last Sunday's play when the Brooklyn Eagles passed to two touchdowns.

The Redskins will encounter at Brooklyn a threat not possessed by the Eagles when they held Washington to a 16-to-16 tie in the opening game of the season. He is Scrapper Farrell, lately acquired from Pittsburgh by the Brooklyn Club. League statistics reveal that Farrell is the fourth leading ground gainer in the league and one of the eight backs in it to show an average of better than 4 yards per rush.

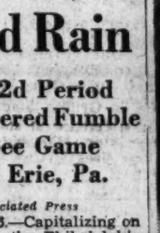
Loyola Juniors Beat Little Hoya Jayvees

Georgetown Prep Juniors were defeated yesterday by Loyola Juniors, of Baltimore, 13 to 6. Georgetown scored on a pass from Bentley to Berens. Loyola's first score was made by Glick, and Redding converted. The second score was made on a pass thrown by Kunkel and intercepted by Dresman.

Postscripts . . . .

It might interest those decrying the slump of Slingin' Sammy Baugh to learn he has connected with receivers for an average of .581, according to latest statistics, and his passes have been good for more than 400 yards. And that, my doubting friends, is fair throwin' . . . No graduate of any Ivy League school has ever played football in the National League. But that's no reflection on the ability of players from Yale, Harvard, Princeton and the rest, for lucrative business offers usually await them on graduation . . . Bill Gardiner, Gonzaga quarterback, is the best-looking scholastic back in the city, according to George Mar hall, Redskins' owner, who has recommended him to Jack Hagerty at Georgetown . . . The Hatchet, weekly student publication of George Washington University, currently is carrying a front-page story denying the story in a local newspaper that George Washington would "definitely" play both Maryland and Catholic University in football next season or in 1940 . . . This denial by G. W. is not news, for anyone familiar with the situation knows that Maryland could not possibly book three local elevens in one season if it continues under its present athletic policy. Because (1) the Terps must play four Southern Conference games; (2) their traditional game with Western Maryland is practically a fixture and (3) they desire to play at least two outstanding Eastern teams, such as Syracuse and Penn State.



SAMMY BAUGH.

Jack Beloit, Tech's All-High quarterback last season and a brother of Ivy Beloit, Tech lineman, who now is recovering from an appendectomy, is an employe of The Post's engraving department . . . Did you know that the Redskins, whose most bitter Eastern Division rivals are the Giants, sent one of their players to Jersey City, a Giant farm? He's Randall (Rink) Bond, brother of Chuck Bond, Redskins' guard . . . Incidentally, Redskins' officials are finding it increasingly difficult to defend their release of Dick Tuckey, who has been one of the "hottest" backs in the league since the Cleveland Rams got him for the $10 waiver price . . .

The George Washington Hatchet has a girl football writer, named Eleanor Isbell who seems to know the lingo . . . Ray Flaherty, Redskins' coach, went to the Virginia-Maryland game Saturday to scout Bill Gillette, touted Cavalier back, but returned singing the praises of "Rip" Hewitt, comparatively obscure Maryland utility back. He likes the way Hewitt passes . . .

Add Coincidences—V. M. I. and Virginia, deadlocked for the lead in the Big Six race, both have won two games and tied one, have scored 39 points and have yielded 18 in Big Six competition . . . The undergraduate Central "C" Club is reorganizing and, with Len Ornstein as president, hopes to recapture the power and influence it once wielded in scholastic circles.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

Friendly Enemies

New York, Oct. 26.—When traditional rivals meet the gate receipts roll in, a fact of which every graduate manager and athletic association treasurer is cognizant. But there are many colleges which have no traditional rival, which causes a great deal of anguish and mental gymnastics. Yet it has been fairly well established that traditional rivalries are born, not made.

VIDMER.

There have been several efforts to manufacture them. It's one game that any college can count on to fill the coffers, no matter how lopsided it figures to be. For instance, Notre Dame looks a top-heavy favorite over the Army, and Fordham apparently has little chance against Pittsburgh, yet the Yankee Stadium and Pitt Stadium will be filled to capacity because traditional rivals will be meeting in each.

What do I mean Pitt and Fordham are traditional rivals? It's a game that proves the previous statement to the effect that such rivalries are born, not made. And the Pitt-Fordham rivalry has been born in the last three years. It's something that can't be denied, or overshadowed by a synthetic substitute. When two teams play three successive scoreless ties, and each is a leader in its own right, pulses are stirred and enthusiasm flames over the outcome of the next engagement, which happens to be on Saturday.

In the books, I believe, Carnegie Tech is supposed to be Pitt's most important foe, and in the same books Fordham is supposed to feel a terrific urge to beat N. Y. U. But Pitt has developed beyond Carnegie's class, and Fordham has moved far in front of N. Y. U., strictly as to their football teams, of course.

And meanwhile Pitt and Fordham have fought three successive battles without a score on either side, and a natural rivalry has sprung up, surpassing in interest at both institutions the older games that have frayed somewhat at the edges.

Unknown Makes Good

As a matter of fact the Army-Notre Dame game, counted as one of the outstanding intersectional rivalries these many years, had its beginning in much the same manner. There is little that West Point and Notre Dame have in common. It isn't a rivalry that would have come about naturally through mutual interests, standards or background. But there it is, something to be mentioned in the same breath as Harvard and Yale, California and Stanford, Army and Navy.

As a matter of fact, there was a period when the Army considered a Notre Dame victory far more desirable than one over their service foes from the Severn's shores. But they had been beating the Navy rather too regularly at that time and, besides, the two academies were not on any too amicable relations regarding athletics.

But that has all been patched up and the Navy is taking its share of success in the games with West Point. The Notre Dame-Army game has become secondary in interest again, but the interest is still strong.

It all started 25 years ago when Notre Dame was unknown in the East, or practically unknown, and was scheduled as a minor opponent on the Army's list. But Notre Dame sprang a surprise, came out of nowhere and beat the Army, 35 to 13, and they've been playing ever since, the relations growing firmer and the interest greater almost with each succeeding year.

Sympathy's Company

In a way the Cornell-Columbia game is something of a main rivalry too, although, of course, Cornell's principal objective always is to beat Pennsylvania. But back there in the dark ages, meaning about a decade ago, both Columbia and Cornell were struggling to find their way out of the football wilderness. They were the doormats of the other Ivy teams and it was something of an achievement for either to produce one major victory in the course of a campaign.

So they suddenly discovered a keen enjoyment in beating each other. One season Cornell would show a single major victory on its record, and that would be over Columbia. The next year Columbia would find some solace from an otherwise disappointing year in having conquered Cornell.

And both began seeing the light at the same time. Lou Little came to Columbia to take over the task of coaching. A lot of good football players came to Cornell to strengthen the big red team which for some time hadn't been either very big or very red, and they have risen side by side.

Castiglia, Hurt, Lost to Hoyas for Temple Game

Injured Hand Will Prevent His Playing

He Breaks Thumb Tilt Is Crucial One Play in Philadelphia GameTomorrowNight

By Jack Munhall.

The dreaded injury jinx, which in turn had visited Maryland, American and Catholic universities, shifted its attack to Georgetown yesterday and stripped the Hoyas of one of their most valuable players just a few hours before their crucial game with Temple tomorrow night.

CASTIGLIA

The victim of the first really serious injury to Jack Hagerty's boys is Jim Castigilia, 195-pound regular fullback, who was found to have a broken thumb yesterday morning after X-rays were taken at Georgetown Hospital.

Castiglia, one of the best blockers and line plungers Georgetown has had in several years, hurt his thumb Saturday in the third quarter of the Manhattan game and later was removed. At that time it was believed he merely had suffered a sprain, a common ailment among football players.

Castiglia will be lost to the team for a week of ten days, doctors reported.

The loss of the hard-hitting Castiglia is a severe one for Georgetown, because he was a keyman in the forward passing attack upon which most of Georgetown's hopes for an upset of Temple are based. And although Myron Darmohray, a junior, should prove a capable replacement, Castiglia's blocking on pass plays will be sorely missed.

Meanwhile the undefeated Hoyas squad continued preparations for their fifth straight victory with a lengthy punting and passing practice at Griffith Stadium. Tonight the G. U.'s will work out at Griffith Stadium, the first time this season they will have played under the artificial light.

Colonials Out To Stop Hall

George Washington's undefeated, untied, unscored on and unextended Colonials devoted yesterday's practice at Griffith Stadium to designing a defense to stop Parker Hall, Mississippi star and reputedly the finest back in the Southeast Conference.

Hearing Scout Tim Moniyan's report of the exceptional all-around ability of the 195-pound Hall, who leads the conference scorers with 47 points in five games, Coach Bill Reinhart went about seeing that he won't be the first player to cross the Colonials' goal line.

G. W.'s defense measures for Ole Miss are far different than for any previous game, because for the first time this season it will meet a team employing the Notre Dame system.

Parker Hall, undoubtedly one of the best backs in the entire South, perhaps will afford local fans a rare chance to preview an All-America player. The powerful and deceptive-running halfback does everything and does it well, and records to prove his phenomenal talents are available.

In five games, Hall has carried the ball 66 times and gained 615 yards for an average of better than nine yards a try. He has completed 26 out of 43 passes for a gain of 337 yards. He has scored seven touchdowns and one extra point and his punts have averaged from scrimmage more than 41 yards.

In the Louisiana State game, Hall completed a touchdown pass that traveled 53 yards and several plays later he returned a punt for 58 yard and another touchdown.

Weidinger May See Some Action

Maryland was forced to use three 60-minute men against Virginia last week and Coach Frank Dobson was hoping yesterday that would not be repeated Saturday when V. M. I. invades College Park for a homecoming Southern Conference game. Albatano, Lawrence and Smith went the route against the Cavaliers.

The Terps, losers of four out of five starts, spent their practice in mapping out a defense for the Cadets' fearsome array of backs, led by Paul Shu and Andy Trezciak.

The condition of the Terps' cripples is still unsettled. Quarterback Charlie Weidinger, Halfback Joe Murphy and Tackle Bob Brown all are doubtful starters. Weidinger, however, is certain to see action for at least half the game.

Cardinals Eye St. Louis Star

Halfbacks Denny Cochran and Mel Aussieker are touted as the two most dangerous performers St. Louis will throw against Catholic University Saturday at Brookland Stadium, but the Cards will have their eyes focused on Charlie Harris, Billikens' quarterback.

For it was Harris who last year smashed off tackle and raced 72 yards for the touchdown that allowed St. Louis to beat C. U., 7-2. Last year Charlie was occupying the fullback position but a shortage of capable quarterbacks necessitated his shift.

Another invader whom C. U. has marked for close observation is Mel (The Great) McConnigle, a halfback, who is supposed to be uncannily accurate with long passes. A completion for 35 or 40 yards is nothing for Harris, it is said.

Pitcher of Famous Old Team Tells His Story Found Japanese Most Courteous on Tour Baseball Was Even Played in the Jungles

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Navy Day to the average citizen means colorful parades of bluejackets, patriotic speeches, bands marching briskly to martial strains, and awe inspiring display of modern naval battle equipment; but to a lithe, pleasant gentleman with a twinkle in his eye and a military bearing, it recalls an around the world cruise of 30 years ago and a hard-hitting, clean fielding All-Navy baseball team that was the pride of the service.

Sitting at his desk in Saltz Brothers' clothing department, which he manages, William Bradford Garniss yesterday let his mind drift back over the seven seas to the innumerable ports the fleet touched, to the scenes of some of the earliest international sports rivalries—the Navy vs. any opponent available. His desk, incidentally, is surrounded by naval pictures and literature, and it is not hard to imagine that sometimes, when the hours hang heavy on his hands, when business is a little slow, Mr. Garniss goes back and sails with the fleet, and plays those ball games all over again.

He was Chief Yoeman Garniss in those days, and one of the cleverest southpaws that ever struck out a batter for the Navy. He doesn't say so, but you dig it out of his yarn, piece by piece. He picked up a picture of the team reposing on his desk, and gazed long and fondly at the faces.

"That was a team," he said. "I'd class it about on par with your AA baseball today. I say that because we had men in the fleet who couldn't make the team but who later played in the major leagues. Why I had a catcher—a southpaw, too, who'd look at first base and catch a runner off third. He could hit any blade of grass in the infield with a peg, and get anything thrown within 6 yards of him.

"And most of the others were as good. We'd play on any kind of field—sometimes in sand up to your ankles, and the next time on a sun-baked mudflat. It was like going from a bowl of mush to a billiard table, but it didn't make any difference to us. We just loved to play ball, and that's all we did in our free time."

Two of Garniss' teammates of those days are in Washington, incidentally, one on duty at the Bellevue experimental station, and the other awaiting a transfer in posts. Capt. C. C. Gill, awaiting orders, played shortstop on the team, and also held the fleet tennis championship. He still is regarded as one of the best netmen in the service. Lieut. Comdr. Arthur McCrary, stationed at Bellevue, was a pitcher—one of two orthodox twirlers on the squad. The other right-hander, Lieut. Butler, retired several years ago, and makes his home in Newport, R. I.

President Theodore Roosevelt was the man responsible for that around-the-world cruise, and Admiral Robley Evans responsible for the All-Star team and Garniss' berth on the squad. It was drafted during the Jamestown Exposition in 1906, where the battlewagons had put in for a spell. During the visit a baseball tournament was organized, and Admiral Evans, an ardent baseball fan, went to see every game with his staff.

Unknown to the players themselves, the admiral and his staff carefully noted the strong points of each one, finally eliminating all but the select few. Even then the all-star plans were not announced. Instead the various players received orders to report on board the flagship, where they were assigned new posts and instructed to play ball together. It was a good billett.

Admiral Evans' health failed when the fleet dropped anchor at 'Frisco, and the command was given to Admiral Sperry, who led the cruise. The team played up and down the West Coast, in Honolulu, Japan, China, India and way stations. Its opponents consisted chiefly of teams comprised of Americans, British cricket players or Orientals who had been educated in the "States."

English Were Tough

"The game wasn't entirely new to them," said Mr. Garniss. "You know, the American missionaries to those countries introduced baseball as well as Christianity, and in most places we found the natives had more than a working knowledge of the game.

"The English cricket players gave us particularly hard games. Baseball is similar to their game of 'bowls,' and we had to fight for it. They were death on low pitches, because they were used to swatting cricket pitches, so we merely fed 'em fast balls about chest high whenever we got in hot water. It never failed."

Mr. Garniss found the Japanese the most advanced in the game, and extremely polite and courteous on the field. Arguments were unheard of in the land of the Rising Sun. The umpire always was right, and the visitors got the best of everything.

"They treated us royally off the field, too," he recalled with a smile. "The place was ours. All we had to do was show a ticket they gave us and we could go any place.

"Fought" on Diamond

"You know there was trouble in the air between Japan and our country when the fleet departed, and President Roosevelt told the Admiral we were going "for a fight or a frolic. Well, we fought and we frolicked, but we did all of our fighting on the baseball diamond."

Garniss also knew Admiral Richard E. Byrd well during his hitch in the Navy, and when Byrd was preparing for his last venture into the frozen wastes of the Arctic regions he asked Garniss to come along. But Garniss, accustomed to inside work after being retired in 1921, developed a case of cold feet just thinking about the trip.

You see that was during the depression and jobs weren't plentiful. Admiral Byrd tried to get him reinstated to active duty, but that would have established a precedent, and the Secretary of the Navy frowned on it.

Garniss still follows baseball closely from his swivel chair, but frowns on the modern game. He doesn't think the breed is as hardy as it once was—particularly in the Navy, when only a typhoon, earthquake or an actual battle could keep the Bluejackets from getting into action.

Quarles Set For Battle

He Signs Here Opponent Sought Canzoneri Out

The fistic firm of Turner & Ahearn is beginning to believe that the Hobgoblins are chasing 'em, for up until a late hour last night they had produced only one-half of the principals for next Tuesday night's boxing show at Turner's Arena.

Ahearn reported the signing of Norment Quarles, North Carolina's blond battler, for a ten-round headline bout, but he was going through a series of headaches trying to secure a suitable opponent for the Tarheel college sensation.

He had hopes of signing Tony Canzoneri, Sammy Goldman already having promised Ahearn the services of the former champion, but these were dashed when it was learned that Canzoneri fought Cowboy Scott last night in Jersey City.

Lou Ambers, the former world's lightweight champion, has a little too much respect for Quarles, and wants a little bit too much cash. So Ambers is out of the picture, at least for the time being.

Ahearn, however, had hopes of booking Billy Beauhold, George Zengaras, Irish Eddie Brink, Maxie Berger, Maxie Fischer, Jimmy Rohrig, Nick Camarata's conqueror; Carl (Red Guggino, Wesley Ramey, Joey Ferrando, Sammy Angot, all nationally known lightweights.

Quarles, it seems, has caught the fancy of Washingtonians, having beaten Lew Gevinson and Lew Feldman in his last two appearances.

Army-Notre Dame Game a 'Tossup,' Layden Says

LAYDEN

"This is one series," he said, "in which the underdog is always the favorite. We would much rather go into the Army game the underdog any time than the favorite. I envy the Cadets the position (underdog) they've been given by the experts this year."

The game will be the twenty-fifth in the Notre Dame-Army series, described by the Irish sports department as the "oldest continuous intersectional rivalry in the record books." Notre Dame has won 17 from the Cadets, lost 5 and tied 2.

The Irish will entrain for Rye, N. Y., tomorrow and work out at the Westchester Country Club Friday.

Ole Miss Entrains

University, Miss., Oct. 26 (AP).—The University of Mississippi Rebels entrained tonight after a light workout for the game with George Washington at the National Capital Friday night.

Mrs. Stokes, Rut Coffey Win Lady-Pro Event at Belle Haven

Two Teams Tie for 2d 4 Birdies for Winners Shorey Misses Tie

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

A combination of Rut Coffey's long game and the chipping and putting touch of Mrs. Walter R. Stokes won the District Professional Golfer's Pro-Lady tournament yesterday at Belle Haven with a 75 card, 3 over par.

A 2-over-par 6 on the thirteenth hole had apparently ruined their chances to beat a 76 already turned in by Helen Dettweiler, Congressional, and Benny Loving, Saranac Inn, N. Y., pro, but Mrs. Stokes and the Winchester mentor proceeded to birdie the next three holes, including Coffey's 40-foot putt on the sixteenth, and they finished with a bogey 4 on the eighteenth to win by a stroke.

In the foursome that preceded the winners to the eighteenth green, Mel Shorey, East Potomac mentor, missed a 4-foot putt for a 75 that would have put him and Mrs. Florence Godfrey, Beaver Dam, in the lead. They finished with a 76 that tied the Dettweiler-Loving duo for second-prize money.

Miss Dettweiler and Loving played in the morning and recorded the 76 that held up until the last two foursomes to finish. They were out in 37, including a pair of 30-foot putts by Loving, and back in 39, playing the last four holes in par figures.

Mrs. Stokes and Coffey were 3 over par for six holes, but the Indian Spring linkswoman nearly holed her tee shot for an ace on the seventh hole and Coffey easily dropped the 2-foot putt for a birdie. They stuck close to par until the disastrous thirteenth, where they required two shots to get out of a trap, and then they finished with the birdie barrage for the victory. They missed by a stroke in a previous tourney at Beaver Dam.

Mrs. Godfrey and Shorey were out in 41, after starting with a 7, but knocked in three birdies on the back nine for a 35 and the 76.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Walper bested three husband-and-wife duos with a 38, 39—77, while Marion Brown and Al Treder, Manor, also scored a 77, including a 35 on the back nine after starting 5, 3, 3, 3.

Mrs. Walter Stokes (Indian Spring) and Rut Coffey (Winchester Country Club), 38, 37—75.

Mrs. Florence Godfrey (Beaver Dam) and Mel Shorey (East Potomac), 41, 35—76.

Marion Brown and Al Treder (Manor), 42, 35—77.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Walper, 38, 39—77.

Mrs. John Howard and Tommy Ryan (Belle Haven), 39, 39—78.

Mrs. Myron Davy and Wiffy Cox (Congressional), 41, 38—79.

Mrs. Betty Meckley and Al Jamison (Indian Spring), 39, 39—78.

Mr. and Mrs. George Diffenbaugh (Kenwood and Manor), 41, 40—81.

Louise Clarior and Robert T. Barnett (Chevy Chase), 39, 43—82.

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Larkin (Woodmont), 44, 38—82.

Mrs. Grace Long and Tommy Doerer (East Potomac), 46, 45—91.

D. C. Bowlers Point For Holloween Stakes

Takoma Park bowling alleys will hum with activity over the weekend as local and out-of-town bowlers vie in the second annual Charlie Olive Halloween Handicap sweepstakes Saturday and Sunday.

Manager Red Megaw is making arrangements to take care of over 150 entries. The event calls for three games at only $1.45 fee and handicaps will be awarded on last year's highest average and scratch, 120.

There will be no waiting. Entrants can bowl their three games immediately.

Red Wings Sign Teno

Detroit, Oct. 26 (AP).—The Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League announced today the signing of Harvey Teno, goalie formerly with the Atlantic City Sea Gulls. Red Wing officials said Teno would be sent to the Pittsburgh Hornets, Detroit's "farm" team in the International American League. Salary terms were not disclosed.

MRS. WALTER STOKES AND RUT COFFEY

Mrs. Arnold McNitt Winner In Cup Event at Kenwood

Mrs. Arnold McNitt, Congressional, who made her debut in tournament victories when she won The Washington Post Match Play event last month at Manor, added a second newspaper title to her list yesterday by defeating Mrs. L. F. Hurley, Columbia, in the playoff for the Times Cup at Kenwood. The net scores were 82 and 87.

MRS. McNITT

Mrs. McNitt and Mrs. Hurley tied with net 72s in the tournament last week, when the latter cracked the 100 mark for the first time in competition with a 96, 24—72, while Mrs. McNitt scored 91, 19—72.

They both slipped several shots over their previous efforts in the playoff, with the Congressional player scoring 47, 54—101—19—82, and Mrs. Hurley 59, 52—111—24—87.

Mrs. McNitt, with a handicap five strokes lower than her opponent's made up the difference in the first two holes as Mrs. Hurley was off to a bad start. The Post champion's 47 on the front nine held a 12-stroke advantage, and although she slipped to 54 to Mrs. Hurley's 52 coming back, the first nine margin was too great.

Mrs. McNitt's handicap has been cut to 17 for the N. B. C. tournament at Manor today.

tempt to end Yankee domination of the circuit. But the Yankees have stolen a march.

The rest of the league, though, will have its opportunities, six weeks hence. At the annual winter meeting starting December 12, trades are supposed to pop. Alva Bradley, Cleveland owner, has already put half a dozen of his regulars on the block. The rich Detroit club will be bidding for infielders and pitchers. Tom Yawkey may give up one of his star outfielders for a pitcher. The White Sox will be seeking outfielders who can hit and pitchers who can pitch, also a catcher. It's no secret that the Nats will be in the market for pitchers. It may be the most furious trading session in years.

Bill Ackerman

On Fishing

As guest columnist today, Talbott Denmead, president of the Maryland Game and Fish Protective Association, gives several reasons why Maryland should pass the Black Bass bill.

ACKERMAN.

At the time the United States Bureau of Fisheries took over the administration of the Federal black bass law, only 18 or 20 States had anything like adequate laws prohibiting the sale of these game fish. Today there are 38 States that absolutely prohibit the sale of black bass regardless of where taken and throughout the entire year. In addition six more prohibit the sale if the fish are taken within the State limits.

Certainly we have progressed, but still there are a few sore spots left, where black bass are not yet accorded the respect and the legal protection they deserve. One of these spots is Maryland, where black bass can be sold eight months of the year without limit and exported without restriction. There is, however, an exception to this statement in that city ordinances in Baltimore City, Cumberland, Frederick and Annapolis prohibit the sale throughout the year and regardless of where taken. If this is good for these cities, it is also good for the whole State.

Black bass are sold in quantities from around the head of the the Chesapeake Bay. It has been stated on good authority that over 100,000 black bass were shipped mostly by truck from that region last spring; where they went is the question, as all surrounding States prohibit the sale of black bass regardless of where taken. One shipment was picked up in Chester, Pa.; another in Omaha, Nebr. It is believed some are bootlegged and sold in Washington, D. C., and Baltimore suburbs. This is done always under cover and generally by itinerant fish peddlers. Occasionally a dealer is apprehended, which makes the others just so much harder to catch. The fish reported shipped to towns in Pennsylvania, where, of course, it is illegal to sell black bass, are said to be cleaned, beheaded and tails removed and called "yellow perch."

TALBOTT DENMEAD

Many black bass are taken by commercial netters in Maryland and sold alive to the State for restocking depleted waters, and some are sold to individuals for the same purpose outside of the State; while restocking and propagation are commendable, and this practice is legal at the present time, many anglers in Maryland object to the practice of shipping such bass out of the State. Anglers have also strenuously objected to having two opening dates on bass in Maryland, and different daily bag limits in tidal waters, and above where the tide ebbs and flows. And the important question today is: Do they wish this situation to continue? I think the answer is "no."

The proposed black bass bill, which will be introduced in the Maryland Legislature sometime during the coming January will cover these points: It is the same old bill that has been introduced at many previous sessions; in some little detail, it may differ from the views of a few anglers, but as a whole, it appears to be 100 per cent satisfactory to the majority of individuals and organizations interested. The latter should not get to quarreling among themselves over any little minor points, or certain wordings, or perhaps some local condition—all should get behind the measure as drawn, and take an undivided backing to Annapolis, and stock to this proposed bill until the Governor annexes his signature thereto.

Quoting Dr. Lewis Radcliffe, president of the Izaak Walton League, District-Maryland-Virginia Council, which has just recently endorsed the bill in toto in a letter written sometime ago to to a member of the Maryland Legislature: "As president of the council, and particularly on behalf of the chapters in Maryland and the thousands of your people interested in this subject, permit me to urge the introduction and passage of a bill prohibiting the sale of black bass at any time, making seasons and limits uniform, etc., and thus help to afford the protection which this fish, inch for inch the greatest game fish in our waters, justly merits."

Let us not forget in urging this measure that black bass under lily pads are worth more to the State for recreation purposes than when sold for a few cents per pound in the market. Many persons think the black bass inferior to most of our bay fish for food. When they are sold in Maryland, they displace an equal amount of other food fish, many species of which bring better prices than black bass—a net loss to the commercial fishermen as well as to the sportsmen.

Filly Wins Elk Purse At Laurel

Favorite Is Second Trails by Length Winner Pays $13.90 7,500 Watch Races

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 26.—Jockey Johnny Gilbert, whose riding has fallen off since he won the saddle championship at Delaware Park and Havre de Grace, was booed after Redlin, W. H. Lipscomb's speedy filly, was defeated in today's feature race, the Elk Purse. Redlin, backed into odds-on favoritism by the crowd of 7,500, finished a length behind Morestep, of the Shandon Farm.

Gilbert, who had ridden the winners of the first and fourth races, seemed to hustle Redlin throughout but he was outsmarted by Jockey C. Stevenson on Morestep. These two raced head and head from the 6-furlong chute to the turn. When Stevenson saw that Gilbert insisted on staying on top, he took back and reserved his mount.

In the stretch, Stevenson shook up Morestep with the whip and the filly responded with a rush. Meanwhile, Redlin had had enough and was beginning to tire. Morestep, given her head, bounded to the front and was opening a gap at the end.

Morestep paid $13.90 and was timed for the six furlongs in 1:15 1-5 over a heavy track.

The daily double shrunk considerably from Tuesday's big payoff. Those who had the combination of Sun Antioch and Army and Navy collected only $27.60.

Gilbert had the mount on Sun Antioch and he got home by winning a photo decision from Mintson. It was a whale of a stretch battle and Gilbert urged Sun Antioch up after he had surrendered the lead inside the eighth pole. Sun Antioch, making his first start since last summer, paid $9.60.

Army and Navy, after failing to win in a dozen starts this year and the same number last year, found the field in the third race easy. He came from far back to win with ease under the guidance of Apprentice Jockey P. McDermott. Army and Navy was the favorite at $4.10.

A little bit of everything marked the day's steeplechase. Editeur, a gelding owned by Mrs. D. Chamblin, lost his rider, interfered with Big March, the ultimate winner, and caused Promoter, the heavily played favorite to fall. In addition, Guatemala opened what appeared to be a safe lead in the first mile, holding an advantage of 10 lengths over the nearest horse. However, he bore out badly and Jockey W. King couldn't do anything about it. The gelding finally went over a jump at the right end and King began to take up.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BIG MARCH, $6.80, $4.30, $3.50; BELL MAN, $12.30, $4.70; CLAQUE, $3.50.

BIG MARCH, always forward factor, recovered after suffering interference from loose horse at ninth fence, disposed of BELL MAN to take command, but had to be kept to drive to end. BELL MAN, well placed throughout, got to front after mile, but could not resist winner while put to punishment on final flat. CLAQUE was never dangerous.

THIRD RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:37. Off 2:40. Winner, Mrs. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ARMY AND NAVY, $4.10, $3.00, $2.60; MAYRO, $3.50, $3.00; JOLYON, $3.50.

ARMY AND NAVY, allowed to settle into best stride, came wide for racing room, improved position with rush approaching stretch, took command and won with speed in reserve. MAYRO took lead going to first turn, dropped back when kept in heaviest going along rail and closed gamely when taken out. JOLYON went evenly, but was not a serious factor.

Daily Double, Sun Antioch and Army and Navy, Paid $27.60.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-old maidens. Start good from stalls. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 3:09. Off 3:12½. Winner, J. P. Jones' ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHORT CAKE, $22.40, $9.40, $6.40; ELLACAW, $25.80, $11.00; BALLINDERRY, $11.10.

SHORT CAKE, tiptoed to front and swung over in front of horses to take command at first turn, drew out gradually, but was tiring badly at end. ELLACAW, slow to begin, improved position inside and gamely closed with punishment. BALLINDERRY went forwardly placed from start and held on gamely.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:41½. Off 3:46. Winner, Shandon Farms' ch. f. (2), by Misstep—Mormaw. Trained by J. J. Greely. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:15 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MORSTEP, $13.90, $3.90, $2.90; REDLIN, $2.80, $2.40; GOOD ODDS, $3.10.

MORSTEP, taken under steadying restraint after running with REDLIN to turn, responded to intermittent punishment in midstretch and rushed to front to win going away. REDLIN set a strong pace, but weakened in final eighths. GOOD ODDS, off poorly, had to be taken up when in close quarters approaching turn, came through on inside, but tired suddenly.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:11½. Off 4:13. Winner, P. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHIMNEY TOP, $4.00, $3.00, $2.50; FRENCH TRAP, $7.50, $4.60; PALAN, $3.40.

CHIMNEY TOP, sent to front at once, drew out along backstretch, but had to be put to punishment to hold FRENCH TRAP safe. The latter worked his way to contention on outside, bet was no match for winner while under strong handling. PALAN, trailed for half, improved position on inside and closed with bold rush.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:42. Off 4:43. Winner, Motor City Stable, Inc.'s blk. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLY ME, $9.90, $5.90, $3.60; CRUSAND, $9.80, $5.30; SCHLEY NURSE, $3.40.

FLY ME, forwardly placed from start, was rated when CRUSAND went to front, rallied when placed to drive and was opening gap at end. CRUSAND took command with bold rush leaving backstretch and closed willingly, but was no match for winner. SCHLEY NURSE improved position steadily from slow beginning, moved up menacingly in midstretch, but faltered suddenly.

EIGHTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:11½. Off 5:13½. Winner, Mrs. R. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WISPY, $6.40, $3.40, $3.30; IN MEMORY, $5.00, $3.60; ORTHOPRISM, $4.00.

WISPY, forwardly placed from beginning, came with rush when shaken up entering stretch and was up in concluding strides. IN MEMORY went to front at once, set good pace and just failed to last. ORTHOPRISM lacked racing room at first turn, improved position steadily on outside and came gamely at end.

Our Guest Selector

Our guest selector for today is Milton Feldman, one of Bill Bennings' rooters from Baltimore. Feldman, who follows the horses from Timonium to Cumberland and from Bowie to Havre de Grace, can talk the subject with authority. He's another of those fellows who looks at all selections, checks all ratings and then plays his own picks. Feldman doesn't claim to make a living this way but he does keep racing within the bounds of profit sport. Here's how he prefers them on today's program at Laurel:

1—Balcony, Cancel, Browl.

4—Happy Knot, Joanny, Alexandrine.

6—Proph, Maecloud, Chalphone, 7—Ponce Entry, Butler, Over Yonder.

Best bet—Happy Knot.

Bishop Again Heads D. C. Loan League

Executives Re-elected
Assets $125,000,000
O. K. La Roque Speaker

At the annual meeting of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League held Tuesday evening in the board rooms of the Oriental Building Association, Arthur G. Bishop was unanimously re-elected president. Other officers named were also last year's executives and had no opposition. W. N. Payne, jr., vice president; Millard T. Dixon, treasurer, and F. Willson Camp, secretary.

Board elections were as follows: Shapin Bauman, Oriental Building; Wilfred H. Blanz, American; R. W. Santelmann, Metropolism C. Clinton James, Columbia Permanent; Carl J. Bergman, Washington Permanent, and C. E. Kefauver, Columbia. Immediate Past rPesident Robert E. Buckley will also serve on the executive council.

Reports of all officers were received with interest, particularly those of the chairman of the legislative committee, C. C. James, and Willson Camp, secretary. Camp's report discloses that the assets of the D. C. League, in excess of $125,000,000, constitute 98½ per cent of all building and loan resources in the District.

The speaker for the evening was O. K. La Roque, president of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Winston-Salem. He stated that the Fourth District, consisting of the District of Columbia and seven Southeastern States, now has a membership of 420 associations and shows a balance sheet exceeding $23,000,000.

Carl J. Bergmann, chairman of the on-to-Chicago convention stated that already over 30 reservations had been made. The 1938 gathering of the United States League will be held on November 15-18 and will mark the retirement of president Edward C. Baltz, local loan leader.

ARTHUR G. BISHOP, who was unanimously chosen to again head the District of Columbia Building and Loan League

Cotton Lower; December 8.48

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Cotton was narrowly irregular today in quiet trading. December, which eased from 8.50 to 8.45, closed at 8.48, with final quotations 1 point net higher to 4 points lower.

The market opened 3 points higher to 1 point lower with the effects of steady Liverpool cables partly offset by liquidation and hedge selling. Trade price fixing caused December to rally to a new high for the current movement early in the day, but a little more liquidation appeared. Wall street selling developed while late months were again under moderate pressure.

	High.	Low.	Last.
December	8.50	8.45	8.49
January	8.42	8.38	8.40
March	8.40	8.36	8.38
May	8.27	8.22	8.23
July	8.17	8.11	8.12
October	7.91	7.86	7.88

Spot nominal; middling 8.80.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil was irregular today. After early losses under liquidation, the market rallied on covering, encouraged by steadiness of some allied markets. Final prices were unchanged to 1 point net higher. Sales 39 contracts. December closed 7.65, March 7.67, May 7.77, July 7.85.

U. S. Treasury Receipts

Receipts for the fiscal year (since July 1), $1,760,557,844.94; expenditures, $2,846,498,950.84, including $896,117,219.96 of emergency expenditures; excess of expenditures, $1,085,941,405.70; gross debt, $38,423,587,668.11, an increase of $2,882,634.84 above the previous day; gold assets, $14,021,341,925.61.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Oct. 26 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—A fair amount of business was being transacted in Boston today on fine territory wools and prices were showing a strengthening tendency. Good French combing lengths fine territory wools, in original bags, were bringing 66 to 68 cents, scoured basis. Asking prices were being marked up and offerings available at prices within this range were becoming restricted. Graded staple combing lengths fine territory wool was moving at 70 o 73 cents, scoured basis.

'Penny' Issues Quarter of Trading
Market Lost in Spite of Rally
Treasury Issues Take Spotlight

New York, Oct. 26.—It was 5-and-10 day on the New York Stock Exchange, a rush to acquire low-priced issues being intensified in a late rush that taxed reporting facilities and caused seven stocks selling under $10 a share to account for about 22 per cent of total volume— 1,702,180 shares. During the height of the flurry the largest single block of stock traded in quite some time came out, 56,000 shares of Commonwealth & Southern, at 21-7. Packard, the day's leader, ended with transactions of 179,200 shares, the last price, 5 5-8, being up half a point.

The activity in so-called "penny" issues, however, failed to obscure underlying weakness in pivotal industrial and some carrier descriptions. The list as a whole, in fact, lost a bit more ground than it had gained in the two preceding sessions. Blue-chip manufacturing shares, coppers, stores and motors led the recession, while a few steels gave up sizable fractions. Aircrafts were an exception to the general decline in higher priced equities, with persistent buying in evidence throughout.

In the bond section trends were mixed, high-grades being generally firm with governments, while speculatives sank with stocks. An exception was Lehigh Valley Liens, which moved up sharply on news that assents to the interest-reduction proposal have increased to near the required amount. Leading foreign exchanges again rose against the dollar. Wheat turned soggy in Chicago and other trading centers as the trade learned that Rumania has been selling a good deal of the staple to British and other customers of the United States and Canada. Cotton closed 1 up to 4 lower.

Copper Issues Heavy

Copper issues were sold heavily on the Chilean political developments, where the more pessimistic fear something may occur paralleling Mexico. Anaconda, Nickel and Kennecott lost 1 to 2 points despite improved copper export prices. Allied Chemical, American Can, Johns Manville, Union Carbide and Western Electric were losers to the extent of 2 points or more. United Airlines, Martin and United Aircraft were strong and active in the aviation section.

Intentional Paper & Power preferred was heavily traded at an advance of 3 points. Buying of paper shares has been noted recently in fair volume on the theory that inventory buying by consumers may be expected at this season.

Freight Forecast Is Low

Forecast of freight loading indicated a slightly more than seasonal drop from the preceding week. Postponement of the deadline for the recommendations of President Roosevelt's fact-finding committee on the rail wage situation did not find much reflection in the group.

Bonds List Dull

Listed bonds were dull and irregular today, largely because speculative enthusiasm was dampened by the equity decline. Highest grade issues were well maintained, and still another success was chalked up in the series of large new offerings. With few exceptions, however, the speculative bonds tended to drift lower. In the foreign section Chileans were down on the overturn in the election, which brought a radical into power. Turnover in all issues was $8,710,000.

Treasury Issues Advance

United States Treasury bonds advanced 1-32 to 6-32 point, which sufficed to produce more high records for the year. The guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations also were good. Best grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds were held at or close to peak levels. The new Firestone $50,000,000 debenture issue went "out the window."

Among speculative railroad bonds the main trend was toward lower levels, but there were some prominent exceptions. Lehigh Valley bonds shot forward on the indication that the debt extension plan is nearing success. Default rails were dull. Holding company bonds and convertible issues remained quiet, owing to the downward move in related equities. Local tractions, amusement issues and other special groups were irregular.

Chilean bonds lost 1 to 2½ points on the election of a radical President, whose program is not satisfactorily known here. Other Latin-American default issues also were dull, but Argentines improved. The Japanese issues continued their uncertain upward march. High-grade European issues were well maintained, but little interest was displayed in German and other default bonds. Canadian and Australian obligations held their ground.

Packers' Meat Bill 1.8 Billion in 10 Months

Chicago, Oct. 26 (AP).—Thomas E. Wilson, of Wilson & Co., in a statement today said despite declining consumers buying power during the first ten months of the year, meat packers will have paid $1,800,000,000 for livestock bought by them during the fiscal year closed October 31.

Wilson told the Institute of American Meat Packers at the annual meeting that the amount paid for livestock during the current meat peking fiscal year was almost twice as much as in the depression year 1932-33. In the fiscal year 1936-37, meat packers paid an estimated total of $2,025,000,000 for livestock while in 1932-33 the cost was an estimated $1,015,000,000, Wilson stated.

Wheat Dips With Fading Export Sales

Rumania Wins English
Sells 9,000,000 Bu.
Liverpool Tumbles

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—Announcement Rumania had captured export business on a large scale, with demand dwarfed for North American shipments, did much today to pull wheat prices down.

Confirmation came that the British government has bought more than 9,000,000 bushels of Rumanian wheat. In contrast was word that European purchases from North America today were restricted to 400,000 bushels of Canadian wheat and 300,000 bushels of United States corn. Acting as additional weight on values here were sharp tumbles of Liverpool quotations, 1⅝ cents a bushel overnight drop for October contracts.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures here were ¼@⅞ lower compared with yesterday's finish; December 65⅝@65½, May 67⅜@67½; corn ¼@⅝ down, December 46¼@46⅛, May 49⅛@49½; oats unchanged to ⅛ off; rye varying from ¼ cent decline to ¼ advance, and provisions showing 2 cents to 7 cents setback.

Bankers Hear Frothingham

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—Francis E. Frothingham, president of the Investment Bankers Association of America told the opening session of its twenty-seventh annual convention today that "There are signs of a growing realization that government and business must be more mutually co-operative and realistic."

He added, "It is high time that this should be so, as a proof of our ability to function under a democratic form of government."

Close to 600 delegates from all parts of the country appeared at the opening session, and the tenor of comment was much more optimistic than a year ago, when the bankers were suffering from the shock of the 1937 collapse in the securities markets. Some said informally that they were virtually deluged with inquiries from corporations concerning possibilities of financing, although most of the business was still in the "talk" stage.

Egloffstein Named Certain-teed Head

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—C. L. Von Egloffstein, an industrial management consultant, has been elected president of Certain-teed Products Corp., manufacturers of building materials, it was announced today. He succeeds Walter G. Baumhogger.

Von Egloffstein, a native of Davenport, Iowa, has been executive vice president of Holton, Richards & Co., industrial management consultants. Baumhogger remains a director of Certain-teed.

Altmeyer Asks Medical Tax Of $10 Yearly

Presents Program Envisions Saving Health Strides Told

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Oct. 26.—Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board, declared today the national medical care program proposed recently by a Federal committee would cost only $10 or less per person yearly in new taxation.

Addressing the annual meeting of the American Public Health Association here, he said the program to be presented at the next session of Congress provides for gradual expansion of Federal and State expenditures for health activities which would reach a total of $850,000,000 annually at the end of ten years.

This sum would be distributed roughly as $200,000,000 for expansion of public health activities, $165,000,000 for maternal and child health work, $150,000,000 for building and maintaining new hospitals, and $335,000,000 for care of those too poor to afford medical attention.

In the latter group "it is estimated that, on the average, $10 a year per person in the groups to be aided would be required to meet the minimum needs for essential medical and surgical care, hospitalization, medicines and emergency dentistry," Altmeyer said.

These expenditures are undoubtedly less than current costs of maintaining on relief employable persons suffering from curable ailments, he declared.

"Without great increase in total National expenditure, the burdens of sickness costs on families and on the public can be greatly reduced through arrangements to distribute these costs among groups of people and over periods of time. The more adequate prevention and care thus made possible would lessen both individual disasters and the public burdens arising from dependency," Altmeyer declared.

Speaking at a special symposium on "Socialized Medicine," Dr. C. E. A. Winslow, professor of public health at Yale, and Dr. Martha M. Eliot, assistant chief of the United States Children's Bureau, told association members they should take positive action to promote a Federal-State health program.

Dr. Irvin Abell, Louisville, Ky., president of the American Medical Association, explained the attitude of his organization as favoring most of the aims of the health program, but opposing compulsory health insurance.

Swing Version of Bach Irks Octogenarian

Newark, N. J., Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Alfred L. Dennis celebrated his eighty-first birthday today by revealing he had asked the Federal Communications Commission to revoke the licenses of radio stations which broadcast swing versions of the music of Johan Sebastian Bach.

Accused and Victim of 'Witchcraft'

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Wilfred Pichette (left), self-styled "son of Jehovah," and his wife (right), of Dollar Bay, Mich., are accused of the "witchcraft" slaying of Marian Doyle (inset), 20-year-old housekeeper. The prosecutor said Pichette had told him he believed Marian was "possessed of the devil."

School Board Asks Powers Be Increased

Restricted in Progress Desires Budget Control Its Estimates Slashed

Broad extension of the powers of the District Board of Education as a step to obtain "a complete and adequate public school system" for Washington was strongly advocated yesterday by board members.

The board is "so restricted by legislative 'riders' and judgment of two other agencies that officials can make no great headway under the present system," it was said.

Asks Budget Control

Commenting on the report of the President's Advisory Committee on Education, made public yesterday, board members said that until the board is given the power to make its own budget and the responsibility for selecting building sites and maintenance of buildings no forward-looking plan for the schools can be put in operation.

The committee's report pointed out that post-high school education, comprehensive health programs and other specific training facilities are lacking.

"With the situation now where we can not get sufficient funds to support present schools, it is impossible to consider higher institutions such as a junior college," Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, said.

He refuses to comment on points in the committee's report but said they would be taken up at the next meeting of the Board of Education.

Pleads Closer Acquaintance

Henry I. Quinn, member of the board, said "the board is better acquainted with the needs than either the District Commissioners or the Budget Bureau of Congress and should be given more power to make its own budget."

"We should have responsibility for repairing and maintaining our school buildings as well as power to select sites and architectural design for schools," he added.

Mrs. Lenore W. Smith, board member, said that under the present system board members have "no way of knowing where we are when we make estimates, which are disallowed or heavily slashed by Congress."

TRUSTEE'S SALE OF VALUABLE IMPROVED REAL ESTATE, CONSISTING OF A MODERN TWO-STORY BRICK, SEMIDETACHED DWELLING KNOWN AS PREMISES 728 TEWKESBURY PLACE NORTHWEST, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Default having been made in the payment of the principal and interest on the debt secured on the hereinafter described land and premises by a certain deed of trust bearing date September 1, 1928, and recorded September 19, 1928, in Liber 6223 at folio 22, et seq. one of the Land Records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of the holder of the note secured by the said deed of trust, the undersigned as Substituted Trustee under said deed of trust by virtue of a decree passed October 6th, 1938, in District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia in Equity No. 67907 will offer for sale under the provisions thereof at public auction in front of the premises on FRIDAY, THE FOURTH DAY OF NOVEMBER, A. D. 1938, AT THREE-THIRTY O'CLOCK P. M., the following described land and premises situate in the County of Washington, District of Columbia, known and distinguished as Lot numbered Twenty-seven (27) in the Subdivision of lots made by Harry Wardman and Thomas P. Bones in Square numbered Thirty-one Hundred and Sixty-three (3163), as per plat recorded in the Office of the Surveyor for the District of Columbia in Liber 83 at folio 41.

TERMS OF SALE: Sold subject to a prior deed of trust securing $4,000, further particulars of which will be announced at time of sale. Of the purchase price over and above said deed of trust, one-third is to be paid in cash, of which a deposit of $250 will be required at time of sale and the balance to be secured by second deed of trust on the property sold, payable in one and two years after date of sale, with interest at the rate of five per cent (5%) per annum, payable semi-annually, or all cash, at the option of the purchaser. Terms of sale to be complied with within 15 days from date of sale in default of which the property will be resold at the risk and cost of the defaulting purchaser after five days' re-advertisement in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C. All conveyancing, title examination, recording and revenue stamps to be at the expense of the purchaser.

UNION TRUST COMPANY OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, Substituted Trustee by Decree passed on Equity No. 67967.

TO SETTLE AN

Bridge

I HEARD SOME NICE COMPLIMENTS FOR YOU AT THE BRIDGE CLUB THIS AFTERNOON. I WAS ASKING THE GIRLS WHAT THEY THOUGHT OF YOUR GAME, AND KATE HARTWELL SAID IT REALLY WASN'T BAD AT ALL— THAT ALL YOU NEEDED WAS A LITTLE MORE EXPERIENCE. MAY HELM SAID YOU PLAYED QUITE WELL, BUT WERE A LITTLE WEAK IN BIDDING, AND THAT A DOZEN LESSONS OR SO MIGHT CORRECT THE TROUBLE. COMING FROM THE TWO BEST PLAYERS IN OUR CLUB, I THOUGHT IT QUITE FLATTERING
RECOGNITION AT LAST

Bob Burns Says—

Maybe one reason why the police force is beginnin' to shut down on crime so much is because the public is beginnin' to take an active interest in the police force. The taxpayers are beginning to realize that they have a right to expect some service from the people they pay to enforce the law.

The other day a big headline appeared in the paper that said, "Man found murdered! Police at sea." My aunt pointed at the headline and said, "No wonder there's so much crime in this town—with the police force all out deep sea fishin'!"

Forum Finds Labor Peace Still Distant

Green Fails to Appear
Lewis Lists 'Enemies'
Willkie Is Speaker

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 26.—Spokesmen of labor, industry and Government met on a single stage and talked of co-operation today, but reported no signs of progress toward peace in the labor movement.

John L. Lewis of the Committee for Industrial Organization and William F. Green of the American Federation of Labor, were listed as speakers at the New York Herald Tribune forum on current problems, but Green did not appear and the meeting chairman announced he had "found it necessary to withdraw after the program had been printed."

Neither the American Federation of Labor representative, Chief Counsel Joseph A. Padaway, nor Lewis referred to the rival organization by name, but both indicated plainly that recent moves from the outside had failed to heal old wounds.

Padway, expressing concern over the possibility of too much Government control of both industry and labor, said the A. F. L. "has had a concrete and bitter example of Government autocracy" in the national labor relations act and declared it was going to Congress to "procure amendments which will prevent the board from showing favoritism to any particular labor organization."

Lewis listed among "enemies" of American democracy "the labor spokesmen who are carrying the torch for their new-found soulmates of capitalism."

Other speakers at the session on "labor, management and Government" included Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Co. and chairman of President Roosevelt's commission on foreign industrial relations; Charles R. Hook, president of the National Association of Manufacturers; Dewitt M. Emery, president of the National Small Business Men's Association; William O. Douglas, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission; Thurman Arnold, Assistant United States Attorney General, and Wendell L. Willkie, president of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation.

U. S. to Open Second Hospital For Drug Addicts

The United States Public Health Service will dedicate its second hospital for narcotic addicts Friday at Fort Worth, Tex., it was announced yesterday by Surgeon General Thomas Parran.

The $4,000,000 institution covers 1,400 acres and includes administration, clincal ward, maximum custody buildings, personnel residences, and maintenance buildings. About 300 beds are ready for occupancy. The other Government narcotic hospital is at Lexington, Ky.

Dr. Parran will deliver the dedication address. Other speakers will be Assistant Surgeon General Lawrence Kolb, mental hygiene division chief, and United States Prisons Director James V. Bennett. Attending from Washington will be Stephen Olop, health service engineer, and Dr. J. K. Fuller, of the prisons bureau medical service.

Henrietta Byers, 8, Now Knows Why McReynolds Is a 'Liberal'

Henrietta Byers, 8, of 2826 Twenty-eighth street, holds the Snow White doll which resulted from a flirtation with Justice McReynolds in the Supreme Court dining room

Has 'Snow White' Doll to Prove It Wink While Lunching Started It Supreme Court Justice Is 'Vamped'

Take is from 8-year-old Henrietta Byers, of 2826 Twenty-eighth street, the liberality of Justice James McReynolds is a fact that needs no further demonstration.

Out to show her visiting grandmother the high spots of the city, Henrietta dropped into the Supreme Court Building for lunch in the cafeteria there.

At a nearby table was a big gray-haired man who engaged her attention immediately. It was a mutual attraction, for the big man took one look at Henrietta's long, golden hair and big eyes—and gave her a wink.

Although noted as a shy little girl, Henrietta winked right back. From then on the wheels were oiled.

"Hello," Henrietta answered. But she kept right on eating.

When she and her grandmother were ready to go, the big gray-haired man queried: "Did you get a boy doll for Christmas?" Henrietta had to say "no." Very few little girls get boy dolls for Christmas.

The man—still unmindful of his food—produced two $1 bills and handed them to Henrietta.

"Will you see that the little girl gets the doll?" he asked the grandmother.

The grandmother smiled and said: "Thank you." For she had seen "McReynolds" written on the wallet and knew it would be nice for Henrietta to have a doll bought by a Supreme Court Justice.

Henrietta called off the sightseeing and set out to find a boy doll. She could not find a single one she liked, for her eyes always turned to the Snow White dolls smiling at her from every shelf. She bought a Snow White—which she hopes will be all right with Justice McReynolds.

The father of Henrietta is Horace R. Byers, a meteorologist with the Weather Bureau.

French Forget Debt

Boston, Oct. 26 (AP).—Count Rene de Saint-Quentin, French ambassador to the United States, today asserted "France has not even thought about negotiation with the United States on settlement of the war debt."

Attitudes Held Real Problem Of Education

Meeting in Mayflower
Dr. Britt Is Speaker
Social Work Described

Development of fundamental attitudes for the good of society and the individual himself is the real problem of education today, Dr. Steuart H. Britt, professor of social psychology at George Washington University, said last night at the Mayflower Hotel dinner meeting of the National League to Promote School Attendance.

Drawing attention to the changing character of "facts," he declared that, "the citizens of tomorrow must be concerned with attitudes rather than facts, because what may be considered truth today may in the future be found to be basically unsound."

The real danger in education at the present time, he explained is that ritualism and rule making develop antipathy to learning in bright children.

Earlier in the day members of the organization were told of the work of school social workers and social service agencies in reducing the number of absences from classes in Baltimore. A report on their progress was presented to the conference by William Lehr, Baltimore public schools supervisor.

Greetings were extended by Judge Fay L. Bentley, of the Juvenile Court, and "Problems of Attendance and Character Education" were discussed by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of District schools.

A summary of the conference's work was made by R. C. Thompson, director of attendance of the Maryland State Department of Education, and musical selections were given by Miss Margaret Fleming, George Garret and Ellsworth E. Condron, Mrs. Bernice Angelico was their accompanist.

President Martin M. Hihn, director of attendance of the Baltimore schools, presided.

First day sale of the 16-cent Lincoln stamp of the new regular series at the Washington Postoffice brought $16,851.84 from 105,324 stamps sold. First day covers canceled amounted to 59,566, including 7,085 bearing blocks of four.

The Postoffice Department announced that the $2 stamp of the current regular series had been withdrawn from sale at the Philatelic Agency.

Jersey Doctor Elected Head Of Physical Medicine Group

Dr. H. D. Corbusier Named President
Dr. G. J. P. Barger, of D. C., Chosen to Board
Boston Physician Tells of Cold Treatment

Dr. G. J. P. Barger, of Washington, was elected to the board of directors.

Other officers for 1938-39 are Drs. Fred H. Albee, New York, and William H. Schmidt, Philadelphia, vice presidents; Dr. Herman A. Osgood, Boston, secretary-treasurer, and, as directors, Drs. Byron S. Price, New York; Franklin P. Lowry, Newton, Mass.; Frank H. Krusen, Rochester, Minn.; William D. McFee, Boston; Rolland A. Case, Cleveland, and Barger.

Dr. Case is the retiring president.

Clinical results which indicate that further experiments should be continued along the same line were reported by Dr. Osgood in connection with X-ray treatment for common colds and hay fever.

Emphasizing that ultraviolet ray therapy for rhinitis is still in the tryout stage, he told the assembly that a fair degree of success has been achieved in the trials to date.

He said his studies indicate that X-rays are useless in preventing a cold but of value in arresting its course once the sniffles are under way.

Dr. R. Rhett Rathbone, of Garfield Hospital, reported encouraging results in the treatment of chronic sinusitis in children with X-rays.

Yesterday afternoon the convening physicians were guests of Brig. Gen. Wallace De Witt, commandant, at Walter Reed Hospital. Speakers were Lieut. Col. Lincoln F. Putnam, chief of the physical therapy department, and Commander John P. Owen, U. S. N.

Oriental Palace Will Be Setting for D. C. Auto Show

The Chevy Chase Ice Palace, in the 4400 block Connecticut avenue northwest, is going Oriental for the nineteenth annual Auto Show November 5-12.

Decorators are going back to an "Arabian Nights" color scheme, the idea being that the proper setting for the streamlined autos of 1938 is provided by the atmosphere of magic lanterns.

Banners and flags will cover the entire Connecticut avenue side of the building, which will be flood lighted at night. Inside, towers and mosques will conceal walls.

350-Mile Average Army Air Record

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 26 (AP).—Lieut. Benjamin S. Kelsey flew a new Army pursuit plane from Dayton, Ohio, to Buffalo today at an average speed of 350 miles per hour, which he said was a record for an Army Air Corps ship.

Taking off from Wright Field at 3:30 p. m. (Eastern standard time), Kelsey covered 360 miles and landed here at 4:31 p. m. (Eastern standard time). Kelsey's speed was approximately 2 miles an hour slower than that of Howard Hughes in a recent transcontinental flight in a specially-built racing plane.

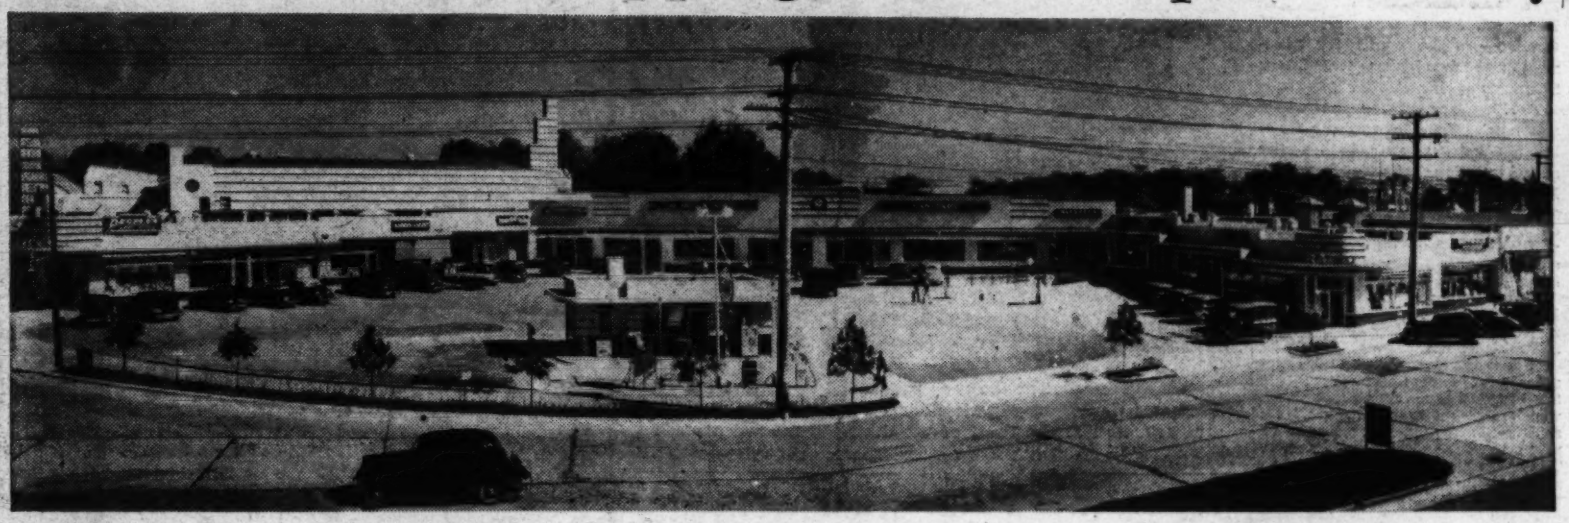
Silver Spring Shopping Center Opens Today



This general view of the Silver Spring Shopping Center gives an idea of the compact arrangement of the shops, and shows the front parking area and the convenient location of the gasoline service station

Comprises 19 Stores, Gas Station, Movie

Motto, Park and Shop, Open Day and Night Even Has Restaurant

One compact shopping center designed to serve the buying needs of 50,000 persons!

That is the plan behind the Silver Spring Shopping Center which is being opened formally today.

Comprised of 19 stores, a Warner Brothers theater and a gasoline service station, the shopping center is one of the most complete ever built in America and is representative of the best ideas in modern business center development.

"Park and shop" is the motto at the center, which provides the parking place as well as the stores. Everything from toothpicks to radios can be purchased within one area and with one parking.

To Be Open Day and Night

After all the "hard work" in the shopping program is over, the day can be ended with a visit to the beauty parlor or barber shop, a sundae at the drug store and an evening at the movies—all without moving the car. Even a restaurant is part of the set-up

Begun last year after more than a year of surveys to determine whether the fast-growing Silver Spring area was the logical place for such a development, the Center has a frontage of 600 feet on Georgia avenue and the Colesville pike and contains approximately 300 acres.

Parking areas have been provided, both in the deep-set front and at the rear. Connecting the two areas is an underpass which eliminates "going around the block again." Sidewalks for pedestrians are on both sides of the underpass. Room for more than 200 automobiles at a time has been provided.

Leases in Big Demand

All leases for shops in the area were made long before completion of the center and, according to officials, every space could have been rented to "five other applicants"—so confident are the merchants of the center's future.

The first merchants ready for business have enjoyed sales that justify them in certainty they had that the development is strategically located and easily accessible to large groups of shoppers. The center was planned with the future in mind, as well as the present. It is definitely on the "line of march" as Washington continues its spectacular growth.

Montgomery County, in which Silver Spring is located, has developed with amazing rapidity—and the end is not in sight. Silver Spring leaders have planned recent town improvements and public utilities and roads in such a way as to care for urbanization as far up as Rockville.

It is believed that the shopping center will attract many future residents, so well has it been arranged to fit in with the modern scheme of living where nothing is haphazard and compact, time-saving, energy-saving ideas are the popular ones.

Owned by a local corporation, built by the Mohler Construction Co. and designed by Architect John Eberson, the center is grouped around Warner Brothers' Silver Theater, air-cooled and with a seating capacity of 1,100. The theater will be operated under a long-term lease. Peoples' Drug Stores, which operates another store in the neighborhood, had enough faith in the future of the area to open a large establishment in the center.

Other tenants in the development are: S. S. Kresge Co., Sanitary Grocery Co., Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., Barker's Bakery, Gulf Oil Co., Modern Radio Co., Robinson's Men's Wear, Lilyan's Lingerie Shop, Frazee-Potomac Laundry Agency, George's Furniture Store, Venerable Grocery Co., Peggy's Hall of Beauty, Irene's Women's Wear Shop, Ethel's Millinery Shop, Gross' Novelty Shop, Alexander Jewelry and Gift Store, Silver Barber Shop and a restaurant —which is the only place of business not yet open.

Stores' Stocks All Modern

Many of the stores have double entrances and can be approached from both the front and rear parking areas. All have stock as new and up-to-date as the center itself. Wide sidewalks around the deep inset permit "window shopping" with ease. Flood lights make shopping at night a gala occasion. Most of the shops cater to night-time shoppers, and have scheduled their hours to meet the shoppers' convenience.

The enterprise, which is described as the most comprehensive and complete of its kind in the Eastern States, was originated, developed and leased by the C. H. Hillegeist Co. and the offices of Albert Small and S. E. Godden.

The center will be floodlighted and specially decorated for the opening. The Maryland State Police will serve as "guardians of safety" and help prevent traffic tie-ups. LaMar Keene, manager of the theater, served as head of the tenants' committee planning the program of celebration.

Program of the Day's Activities

Nineteen stores, one theater and a gasoline service station will be "at home" to visitors today for the gala opening of the Silver Spring Shopping Center.

A day of Bargains, beginning at 8 a. m. and continuing until 10 p. m., has been arranged for all callers. In addition, gifts and prizes are on the schedule.

To climax the full day, a program of sparkling entertainment will be given as follows:

Swing and popular music by Sidney's Mayflower Hotel Orchestra..... 7 p. m

Brooke Johns, formerly with Ziegfeld's Follies, will "take over" as master of ceremonies..... 7:30 p. m.

Audrey Seiber, former mistress of ceremonies at the Earle, will assist him, beginning at..... 7:30 p. m.

Montgomery County and Maryland State officials will be on hand to be introduced as honor guests. There will be no real speeches.

Songs, dances, band music and fun will continue until.....10 p. m.

All automobiles must be parked in rear of center after 4:30 p. m., in order that everyone can get near the temporary front platform from which the program will be given.

Designed To Serve Needs Of 50,000

Planned for Future In Line of D. C. Growth Extends Urbanization

Hillegeist, Small, Godden Real Builders

Option Was the Start Prestudy Took a Year Filled Book With Maps

To three real estate men—C. H. Hillegeist, Albert Small and S. E. Godden—go the credit for planning and developing the Silver Spring Shopping Center.

The background for the whole venture is found in a survey made by Hillegeist a year before any actual building designs were drawn. Believing in the future of Silver Spring, Hillegeist took an option on land now occupied by the development along Georgia avenue and Colesville Pike and set out to interest others in his idea.

From every angle Hillegeist studied the area. In a book filled with maps, pictures and graphs, he set forth his opinions.

"The size, importance and character of the population of Silver Spring and the contiguous area which the center will serve," he said in the book, "can no longer be properly serviced at long distance. The town requires and is ready to give its substantial support to local business enterprises such as will find proper facilities in the center."

The importance of Washington as a growing city was stressed in the study, which stated: "In Silver Spring and its immediate neighborhood are approximately 30,000 people. And it is a conservative estimate that there are as many more tributary to Silver Spring."

Turkey Dinner Tuesday

The Woman's Guild of Grace Episcopal Church, Woodside, will hold its annual turkey dinner Tuesday from 5:30 to 7 p. m. in the parish hall. Mrs. Hugo Winkler is chairman of arrangements.

Woodside Citizens Plan Halloween Dance Friday

North Woodside-Montgomery Hills Citizens Association has completed plans for its annual Halloween dance Friday night at Grace Parish House, Woodside, which will begin at 9:30 p. m. Prizes will be awarded for the best costumes.

Proceeds will be used for improvements in the community.

The association voted to ask for additional police protection, especially on Halloween night. Plans are being made to trim trees in the area.

Parking in Rear Of Shop Center

Residents of Silver Spring and visitors during tonight's celebration are asked to park in the rear of the Shopping Center where a large lot has been provided. The program and entertainment will be offered in the front parking section and there will be no parking allowed there after 4:30.

Because of the large crowd expected Montgomery County officials have provided seven extra police.

North-bound traffic on Georgia avenue near the Silver Spring Shopping Center probably will be diverted to the west drive after 7 p m..

13 of 450 Pass State Police Test

Baltimore, Oct. 26 (AP).—The most popular job in Maryland's civil service—that of State policeman—took its place today as the hardest to get.

When final "weeding out" preliminaries were completed at the State employment commissioner's office, involving some 450 applicants for seven vacancies on the force, only 13 names were on the eligible list.

Another 25 names are on reserve, but they must hurdle additional tests. Employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones, whose examiners have spent weeks "separating sheep from goats," said names of the eligibles would be announced tomorrow.

Tests Completed In Hagerstown of New-Type Plane

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Oct. 26.—The Clark Aircraft Corporation, which has been doing experimental work on a new-type airplane at the Fairchild Aircraft Corporation plant here an at the Hagerstown Airport, announced that it will begin production in a factory at Columbus, Ohio. Col. V. E. Clark is president of the company which has been experimenting with the new airplane, the wings and fuselage of which are moulded in a single piece.

Cow's Death Laid To State Paint; Board to Settle

Baltimore, Oct. 26 (AP).—Mrs. George Turner's cow licked some paint from the tops of paint cans thrown into Mrs. Turner's cow pasture by State roads commission workers.

Unless, she continued, the State paid $100 for the cow, the commission would not be permitted to build a snow fence—which it wants to build—along her property near Frostburg.

Stumped, the roads unit decided today to offer Mrs. Turner $80.

Silver Spring Business Asks New Overpass

Nice, O'Conor Favor Also Tydings, Radcliffe Now Traffic Hazard

With promises of support from gubernatorial candidates of both political parties in Maryland and from both Senators, the Silver Spring Business Men's Association is pushing its drive for reconstruction of the B. & O. Railroad overpass on Georgia avenue to eliminate traffic hazards.

William F. Carlin, president of the association, has received assurances of assistance from Gov. Harry W. Nice, seeking re-election, and from Herbert R. O'Conor, opposing Nice on the Democratic ticket. Senators Millard E. Tydings and George L. Radcliffe also have promised to do their best to help obtain Federal funds for improvements to the overpass.

The Business Men's Association claims the structure, built in 1925, is outmoded. Since its construction, the association points out, Silver Spring and its surrounding subdivisions "have grown so rapidly the viaduct is too narrow to allow passage of traffic without serious danger."

A traffic count made this year at the overpass showed an average of 15,000 automobiles pass beneath the viaduct every 24 hours. On the basis of this figure, Georgia avenue is one of the heaviest traveled thoroughfares in the State, according to the businessmen's group.

In addition to traffic hazards caused by the viaduct, almost any heavy downpour will cause a minor flood beneath the structure. This ties up traffic and causes serious inconveniences to thousands of residents of Silver Spring and neighboring communities.

Mayor to Employ 50 Special Police For Mummers' Fete

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Oct. 26.—Mayor W. Lee Elgin announced today he will swear in as special officers 50 city employes to assist the regular police force on Halloween night, October 31, when 75,000 persons are expected here to view the annual Mummers' parade sponsored by the Alsatia Club.

Special traffic regulations are being arranged for the occasion, which attracts more people to Hagerstown than any other event.

Captain of Police Carl McCleary said that his department will arrest any person found using paint, grease or any other material in defacing property.

Takoma-Silver Spring 'Book Fair' Nov. 23

The annual "Book Fair" of the Takoma-Silver Spring School will be held November 23 in the auditorium of the school to raise money for the library.

Featuring the "fair" will be booths, each built to represent some famous book. Students attending the booths will be dressed as principal characters in the books.

School Strike In Second Day; Spirit Wanes

250 Students Out Ired at Coach's Ouster 43 Attend Classes

By the Associated Press.

Lonaconing, Md., Oct. 26.—A strike of Central High School students against ouster of Melvin "Newt" Henry, Central's basketball coach, entered its second day today with strikers' enthusiasm perceptibly on the wane but only 43 of the institution's 293 pupils in class.

Knots of students gathered in front of the building at 9 a. m., but made no effort to interfere with the 43 who attended classes.

Later, Richard T. Rizer, Allegany County superintendent of schools, and Principal Arthur F. Smith, conferred with members of the basketball team whom they identified as leaders of the walkout.

The student-body went on strike yesterday after the school board refused to rescind an order barring non-faculty athletic coaches in county schools. Henry, a Cumberland businessman, was lost to the team as a result of the order.

Rizer told strike leaders their demonstration would have no effect on the board's position.

Crisfield to Pave All Its Streets

Crisfield, Md., Oct. 26 (AP).—Mayor William E. Ward predicted today virtually every street in Crisfield would be paved within the next year.

Mayor Ward said the work, to be done as a Federal-aid project, would cost an estimated total of $50,000, of which approximately $35,000 must be put up by the city.

Low Bid Is $114,608 On Williamsport School

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Oct. 26.—The $114,608 bid of J. B. Ferguson & Co., Hagerstown, was low when bids were opened for the new Williamsport High School building. The awarding of the contract will be made after the New York office of the PWA gives its approval.

The new school, to be constructed with PWA grant and county funds, will have 21 rooms, will be two stories high and will include a gymnasium and auditorium, and will be of brick and steel construction.

Boy Bleeds to Death After Truck Hits Ditch

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Oct. 26.—Harvey House, jr., 7, residing near Middletown, Frederick County, bled to death last night en route to the hospital here when the jugular vein was severed while he was riding in a truck with his grandfather, Harry House. The truck went into a ditch and the boy was hurled against the windshield, which broke.

Hancock Plans Fete

Hancock, Md., Oct. 26.—The Hancock Volunteer Fire company will sponsor a Mummers' parade to be held the night of Tuesday, November 1, to be followed by a street dance. A number of prizes are being offered.

Duncan Scotts Win

Frostburg, Md., Oct. 26.—The Duncan Scotts defeated Midlothian 3-2 in a Frostburg Soccer League battle. The score was tied 1-1 at the half and was deadlocked 2-2 until Cole came through with a field goal late in the game to decide the issue.

Montgomery Democrats Deny Split

Solid for O'Conor 'Emanated From G.O.P.' 'Try to Upset Campaign'

Flat denial of any dissension in Montgomery County Democratic ranks concerning the candidacy of Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor for Governor, is made in a statement issued yesterday by five leaders of the party.

Those signing the statement, which charges that the rumors of dissension are of Republican origin, were:

James H. Pugh, co-chairman of the United Democratic committee and an O'Conor supporter in the primary; Lacy Shaw, co-chairman with Pugh of the committee and a supporter of Mayor Howard W. Jackson in the primary; Robert Peter, chairman of the United Democratic organization, candidate for State auditor and a Jackson backer in the primary; Joseph A. Cantrel, co-chairman of the speakers and publicity committee and a primary O'Conor backer, and J. Bond Smith, previous Jackson supporter and now co-chairman with Cantrel of the speakers and publicity committee.

"No Leader Admitted Doubh"

The statement follows:

"We were amazed to read a political dope story in one of the Washington daily papers of October 24, which boldly stated that in several sections of the State, including Montgomery County and Baltimore, doubts as to the whole-heartedness of the support offered Mr. O'Conor by the former supporters of Mayor Howard W. Jackson have been raised. While they may be allayed eventually, leaders of the O'Conor campaign admit they have doubts.'

"Not only has no leader of the O'Conor campaign admitted any doubt of whole-hearted support of the mayor, but they have never had any such doubt.

"This article is obviously the handout of the political publicity agent of the Montgomery County Republican machine, and we believe that this totally unfounded report is the desperate effort of the Republican county politicans to disrupt the harmonious and efficient support that all factions of the Democratic Party are now giving the Democratic State, Congressional and county candidates in Montgomery County.

"Try to Upset Campaign."

"The only chance the Republicans have to make even a showing in Montgomery County is to so create strife and dissensions in the united Democratic ranks. After last Saturday's Democratic rallies in support of the Democratic State and county candidates at Rockville with an attendance of over 600, at Bethesda with an attendance of over 600, and at Silver Spring with an attendance of over 1,400, and with each meeting addressed by both the successful and unsuccessful Democratic candidates in the recent primaries, the Republican county politicians have clearly decided that they must make this last desperate effort to try to upset the united Democratic campaign which now appears to be sweeping Montgomery County.

"So the baseless charge of treachery by foremer Jackson supporters to the candidacy of Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor is anonymously made.

"As the active leaders of the Democratic campaign in Montgomery County we assure the party workers and voters that this charge is not only 100 per cent false but that we believe it emanated from Republican politicians as above stated."

Silver Spring Singers Meet Next Tuesday

The Silver Spring Singers, a choral group which made its debut last year, will discuss plans for this season at a meeting Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Clayton Bacon, of Woodside Parkways, their director.

The society includes 20 singers, mostly members of church choirs. Miss Mary Lehman serves as accompanist.

G. O. P. Rallies Slated In St. Mary's County

Judging Delayed As Exhibits Flood Fair in Calvert

By the Associated Press.

Prince Frederick, Md., Oct. 26.—Exhibits poured into the second annual Calvert County Fair headquarters here in such numbers today that officials were unable to complete arrangement of their offerings and begin judging.

Arrangement of exhibits will be finished tomorrow morning, officials said, with the judging following immediately, and the exhibition rooms opened to the public in the late afternoon.

Observers said exhibits of white and yellow corn appeared especially good, and that the tobacco samples looked "very good." One enterprising farmer placed a watermelon—considerably out of season—on display.

New Rayon Plant In Virginia Not to Hit Cumberland

New ork, Oct. 26 (AP).—Dr. Camille Dreyfus, presiendt of Celanese Corporation of America, today told a group of Cumberland, Md., officials the corporation's plans for erecting a $10,000,000 rayon fiber plant at Pearlsburg, Va., would not affect its operations at Cumberland.

The Cumberland group, headed by Mayor W. Koon, arranged the conference with Dreyfus to express the City of Cumberland's fear the new project might lead to curtailment of the corporation's activities in that city.

A spokesman for the corporation said Dreyfus pointed out to the Cumberland officials Celanese Corporation intended to go ahead with expansion in the Maryland city subject to completion of construction of the Savage River Dam and enlargement of the city's water-supply system.

Ronald McDonald Heads Legion 'Battle' Group

Ronald McDonald heads the general committee of Cissel-Saxon Post No. 41, American Legion, in charge of staging a military exhibition and sham battle on the outskirts of Silver Spring on Armistice eve. Other members of the committee, announced yesterday, are Alfred C. Paul, L. T. Faulconer, Louis Alberti, C. H. Durrer, H. W. Cutler, Joseph C. Cissell and G. A. Hood.

The performance, which will be staged at the north end of Sligo Valey Park near Forest Glen road, will have as its main feature the re-enactment of the battle of Cantigny. Approximately 500 troops, cavalry, infantry, antiaircraft guns, airplanes, tanks, artillery and machine guns will all participate in a spectacular night attack. Admission will be free, but special reserved seats will be available at a nominal sum.

Md. Jobs, Pay Rolls Up 2% in Month, Under 1937 Level

Baltimore, Oct. 26 (AP).—Maryland industrial employment and pay rolls, on the upgrade in August after a six-month slump, continued the optimistic movement in September, the State Labor and Statistics Department reported today.

Despite increases of about 2 per cent in both jobs and pay, compared with August, the September figures still showed Maryland industry lagging well behind the levels recorded a year ago.

On the darker side of the ledger were comparisons with 1937, showing jobs running more than 16 per cent under last year's levels, with pay rolls down more than 22 per cent.

The report was based on returns from 637 manufacturing establishments, employing 86,639 persons whose combined weekly earnings last month totaled $1,941,835.

'Flying Squadron' Of Clerics to Fight State Lottery Bill

Baltimore, Oct. 26 (AP).—A "flying squadron" of clergymen and church workers opposed to the pending constitutional amendment permitting State legalization of lotteries will go into action on the Eastern Shore tomorrow, in an effort to arouse sentiment against the legislation.

Stewart Blames Foreign Market

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Oct. 26.—In caustic criticism of the New Deal form policy of restricted production and an "economy of scarcity," A. Charles Stewart, of Frostburg, Republican nominee for Congress, told voters of this section that the present national administration has "given away" the home market to foreign farmers.

"In 1932," said Stewart, "Mr. Roosevelt, then a candidate, not facing realities, denounced the Republican farm policy. He declared that when the wheat stabilization plan failed, the Republican administration:

"'Invented the cruel joke of advising farmers to allow 20 per cent of their wheat lands to lie idle, to plow up every third row of cotton and to shoot every tenth dairy cow.'

"The Republicans had considered this procedure, but it remained for the New Dealers to put the procedure into actual practice, in spite of the presidential candidate's scornful words," explained the Frostburg merchant.
